Housed in winter quarters in Lansdowne Park, where in other years was staged the Ottawa Exhibition, second in size only to the Canadian National Exhibition, they have moved with ease into their normal training routine. Ottawans have been impressed already by the grace of their marching, by the rhythmic swing of their arms. The Ottawa Journal, widedly read leading newspaper, has been strong in its praise of the Highlanders. "They march magnificently," one recent article stated, in tribute to the Glengarrians.

Not a man in the 933 of the battalion but is conscious of the fact that he is a soldier on active service, marching through his nation's capital these days. Add to that the knowledge that he is a member of the proudest brigade in the Canadian army—the Highland Brigade, only such in the forces of the British Empire—and you will know why these men march proudly, drill enthusiastically, soldier magnificently.

Proud of Their Name

When the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders came to Ottawa behind their pipe band that skirled "All the Blue Bonnets Are Over the Border," they found that they had already won a name for their battalion, and that Ottawans were eager to welcome them and to be proud of them. For from that scattered regiment, trained in four separate centres, that arrived in Kingston Exhibition Park scarcely three months ago, has been carved a proud battalion of men who stand second to none on the parade grounds of Canada. A fighting force, they have become, in the matter of weeks, a parade battalion as well, fiercely proud of the name they have achieved, supremely confident of the name they will win in actual warfare.

When thousands of spectators jammed Exhibition Park in middle October to see the Glengarrians in review, they saw that here was a battalion to be proud of. And it scarcely surprised them to learn, a few days later, that this regiment had been chosen, over others from coast to coast, to comprise, with the Highland Light Infantry and the North Nova Scotia Highlanders, the Highland Brigade of the 3rd Division, the only Highland Brigade on active service in World War II in any part of the Empire; a brigade that is under command of Brigadier Eric Haldenby, the man who led the triumphant evacuation from France of the 48th Highlanders, when all France was collapsing—led them out by brilliant campaigning without the loss of a man.

This, then, is the battalion that has moved to the nation's capital to train itself for war, and that is to be inspected Friday by the King's representative in Canada. Nor does any man in the regiment fear inspection, for he knows he has no reason to be afraid and every cause to be proud.

Improved Messing

In warm quarters, away from canvas at last, the Glengarrians have already acquired a fondness for Ottawa. Probably the greatest single reason for their contentedness is the improved messing that has been worked out by Major Herbert Mason and his committee. While there was never scarcity of food in Kingston, insufficient seating space made it necessary that men stand in line waiting for their food, filing slowly to the kitchen to be served their entire meal, which they carried to any available table space.

In Ottawa all this is changed. Each platoon eats at separate tables—three tables to a platoon of thirty-odd men. Members march in, take their places at a table already set by a table orderly (each man at the table takes his turn as orderly for a week at a time, along with his other duties as a soldier). The orderly then draws food for all the tables, places it before them, and they help themselves. The meal concluded, the platoon leaves, and the three table orderlies clear the tables and report for afternoon parade. While this tasks cuts short his noon hour, each knows that he will be free from it for close to two weeks after his turn, while succeeding members take over.

Entertainment is another feature that has been improved in Ottawa. A full-sized theatre plays motion pictures ("talkies") three night a week, and present high class variety shows two other nights. Amateur night sometimes take the place of a variety show, and any soldier in camp is at liberty to show what he do. Sing-songs are held in the theatre every Saturday and Sunday night.

Nights at Camp

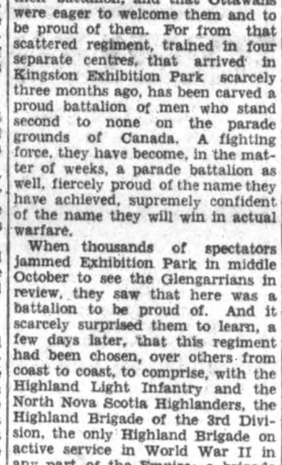
Other popular spots in the large camp—where many other troops including the Veterans' Home Guard are stationed—are the "Sally Ann" (Salvation Army Hut), and the Y.M.C.A. hut. At both of these large building are reading lamps and easy chairs, games and writing desks, soda fountain, and above all, an air of easy comradeship. Indeed, many a soldier spends all his nights in camp and has an enjoyable time, so complete is the entertainment provided. At neither the theatre nor the huts is any charge made, except for refreshments.

The city of Ottawa itself holds great attractions for the Highlanders, particularly on week-end days. Last Sunday this writer, touring the sights of the city, saw scores of Glengarrians at the National Gallery, the National Museum, the National Memorial, the Houses of Parliament. He saw them inside the Senate, the Lower House, in the great House Library, at the famed Peace Tower. They were enjoying themselves like any other tourists visiting their country's capital, looking at places they had wanted for years to see.

Meanwhile their training is progressing at top speed. They have come to see the time when the battalion's own trucks would convoy them from one place to another; the time when they would fire their own Bren guns on the Connaught ranges; the time when their own Brigadier would tell them that he is proud of them.

And they're still working.

Hydro Chairman



Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, Q.E., D. Eng., M.E.I.O., who is president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, and chairman of the Hydro Electric Commission in Ontario gave a brief address at the 22nd annual meeting of the Local E.I.C. Branch Wednesday evening.

Battery Drills Twice A Week

The 4th Field Battery R.C.A. (NPAM) is returning to its two nights a week drilling for the whole Battery, while continuing the Regimental School courses three evenings weekly. Parades will be held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 7.45 p.m., commencing Nov. 25th, the full turnout being Mondays and Wednesdays. In recent weeks, the whole Battery drilled only on Wednesday nights. School examinations are scheduled for Dec. 15th and 16th.

Last night, the Battery enjoyed a recreational evening in the Y.M.C.A., with games, movies, a sing-song and lunch. About a dozen N.C.O.'s of the Anti-Tank Battery came over from Lindsay for the "do", as guests of the local Battery. These N.C.O.'s all fall have taken turns visiting the Armouries and assisting in the instruction of the Peterborough gunners.

Man Pleads Guilty To Stealing Watch

Arrested at the C.N.R. station on Wednesday by Constables Archie Menzies and Harold Mesley as he was about to take a train for Toronto, Frank Bond appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning, charged with stealing a wrist watch from James Healey, valued at less than $25.

Bond pleaded guilty to the charge and asked Magistrate Langley for suspended sentence.

Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C., asked for a remand for sentence.

"We want to get his record and there are some other matters the police wish to clean up," he told the court.

Accordingly Bond was remanded until Tuesday.

A Prominent Visitor

Mr. deGaspe Beaubien, treasurer of the E.I.S., consulting engineer and chairman of the Montreal Housing Commission addressed the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada at the Kawartha Club Wednesday night. Mr. Beaubien is joint chairman of the National War Savings Committee and urged a united effort to finance Canada's war effort and build up savings at the same time.

15 New Recruits For Highlanders

Fifteen reinforcements for the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders were recruited at the Peterborough Armouries during the week by Lt.-Col. Frank L. Bradburn, M.C., and the group left Wednesday for Lansdowne Park, Ottawa to join the unit.

The men are as follows: David L. Allan, Lakefield; Edward J. J. Amyotte, 27 Park street S.; Bernard C. Arthurs, Lakefield; Hector J. K. Edwards, Lakefield; Robert S. Fettes, R.R. 4 Peterborough; Robert B. Harvey, 182 Dufferin street; Gordon Arthur Hill, Lakefield; Sherman R. Hill, Lakefield; B. D. Lalonde, 475 Park street; Clarence J. Markwick, 322 Euclid avenue; Orville Moore, Lakefield; George E. Sproule, Woodville, Ont.; Robt. J. Sutherland, 187 McGill street; Melville V. Wood, 295 Engleburn avenue, and Harvey Neil, 891 Water street.

Join Engineers

Captain George S. Walker, officer commanding the 3rd Field Park Company, Royal Canadian Engineers obtained all but two of the recruits he was seeking to bring the unit up to strength. He could not get two blacksmiths.

Chas. F. Webster, Lakefield, motor mechanic.

Sidney W. Parsons, 571 Harvey street, as a mechanic.

George W. Smith, Bethany, as a mechanic.

G. A. Wannamaker, Lakefield, as a tinsmith.

County Council Visits Camp

The county council accepted an invitation from Colonel Keller of the military camp at Exhibition Park to visit the grounds and see the buildings this afternoon at two o'clock.

The council considered for a while this morning some form of celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the completion of the court house and jail, but decided that they had no time this session to arrange for some adequate program.

Warden McColl, Reeve Anderson and County Clerk Miss J. A. Batten were appointed a committee to enquire into the exact history of the property and bring in a recommendation at the January sessions.

FRIENDLY GESTURE

For the first time in the history of the Kawartha Club, a speaker was introduced to his audience in two languages, de Gaspe Beaubien, joint Chairman of the National War Savings Committee, was introduced last night to the members of the E.I.C. in French by John Mercier, of the C.G.E., and then in English.

While speaking to the students of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute yesterday afternoon, Mr. Beaubien, at the suggestion of Dr. H. R. H. KeKnner ,the principal, spoke to them in both English and French. Mr. Beaubien is reported to have appreciated the gesture of good will, and to have publicly announced it.

Business Men Raise $1,200 To Stop Hitler

One of the busiest men in Peterborough today has been Jim Dorris, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. He has been receiving a steady stream of prize winners from the "Smash Hitler Night," held at the three theatres under the sponsorship of the Business Men's Association.

Each of the prize winners, after giving name and address to Mr. Dorris, will receive a War Savings Certificate from Ottawa, and each person attending a theatre in Peterborough last night was given a War Savings Stamp.

The total receipts were a disappointment to the members of the Association, who had expected an attendance of 4,500. The number of tickets sold will prove to be, roughly, 2,400, Mr. Dorris told the Examiner this morning. With each person receiving a stamp, the remainder, about $600.00 was given in the form of certificates, ranging from $5.00 to $25.00.

The effort put forth by the Association is considered by many of the members to have warranted a better reception, but this morning they were saying, philosophically, that $1200.00 is $1200.00.

Helped Sale

To influence the sale of tickets, Gordon S. Matthews offered one ticket free to those in the Canada Packers Peterborough plant who bought one, and on behalf of the Peterborough Lumber Company, Fred Overend made the same offer to those employed by his company.

Highlighting the list of winners, was one of the children from St. Vincent's Orphanage who won a $5.00 certificate. Other winners included family combinations, with one man and his wife each sharing in the prizes. Visitors in the city were not overlooked, and more than one out-of-town winner has been reported.

At the late show, at one of the theatres, de Gaspe Beaubien, joint chairman of the National Committee for War Savings, and who was addressing a meeting of engineers in this city, made an appearance, and in a few minutes clarified much of the more or less complicated program of War Savings.

It is necessary that all winners have their tickets in to the Chamber of Commerce office within the next few days. Considerable work is needed to have them sent in to Ottawa, and all should be redeemed as soon as possible.

French Will Never Work With Huns Against Britain, N.Y. Times Writer Assures

OTTAWA, Nov. 21—(CP). — The French people will never co-operate with the Germans against the British, Percy J. Philip, Canadian correspondent for the New York Times who lived through the fall of France, said in a speech before the Canadian Club yesterday.

Basing his conclusions on 24 years spent in France and several weeks there following the armistice between the Vichy government and the Germans, Mr. Philip said Marshal Petain was a man of honor who would never agree to a dishonorable course for his country.

Petain's prestige and popularity was going up with the French people while that of Pierre Laval, vice-premier, was going down.

Petain and his associates agreed to the armistice because they were convinced Great Britain would soon be defeated also and the chief protaganist of this view was Laval. Now Frenchmen were coming to realize Laval was wrong and as British resistance continued, hope for a British victory revived.

The reason France fell was that the country lost 2,000,000 of its best men in the last war and for a full generation had to carry on with the second best and third best, said Mr. Philip. The new generation which went into the present war had grown up fatherless in a world seething with new doctrines and ideologies. They lacked discipline and they lacked confidence in authority.

Saw the French Collapse.

Mr. Philip said he was up at the front when the German machine smashed through and after the Battle of the Meuse made his way back to Paris on a bicycle, passing the Candian War Memorial on Vimy Ridge which "still stands high, untarnished and soon again to be rededicated in a restored France with new glory and honor."

The Germans displayed tremendous generalship in their push through Holland and Belgium into France, Mr. Philip said he saw railways and roads destroyed with systematic completeness until there was no way for one French unit to communicate with another.

"We know and should remember," he said, "that that terrific force of men and machines which broke the French and Belgian armies last May and sent us scurrying home from Dunkirk is still intact, possibly stronger than ever, and it is that force which we are fighting almost alone."

When the French position became hopeless, Mr. Philip said the Reynaud Cabinet decided to continue the war in Africa. That would have meant possibly greater hardship for the people of France and the loss of more lives, but France was bound in treaty and honor to continue the war with Britain until victory or until both agreed to lay down arms.

"I need not stress the advantage which there would have been in fighting this war if the French government had kept that treaty," he said. "Greece woud not today be fighting for her life for with the French troops in North Africa and the French fleet in the Mediterranean Mussolini's last minute treacherous attack on France would already have been avenged.

A Heavy Burden

"Those in the French cabinet who decided to break the alliance with Great Britain and abandon the war have a terribly heavy responsibility."

Mr. Philip said he was one of a group of newspapermen, all Americans except himself, a British subject, who met Laval three weeks after the armistice. Laval then delivered a vehement harangue against England and declared he did not believe in a British victory. The whole basis of the Vichy government was predicated on the belief of two or three Frenchmen that Britain would lose.

In subsequent weeks Mr. Philip said he noticed a chance in that view. It became clear that the German paid little or no attention to Laval and his colleagues and that the people did not trust them.

Court House Completed 100 Years Ago

The one hundredth anniversary of the completion of Peterborough's court house and jail was Saturday, November 16.

Miss Jennie A. Batten, clerk and treasurer of the county, reminded the county council toward the close of its session Wednesday afternoon of the recent centenary of the construction of the building in which they are meeting this week. Her retrospect of the events preceding the laying of the corner stone of the building, of the names of the citizens who were charged with the undertaking, and of other affairs associated with it, was quoted from Thomas W. Poole's book entitled "A Sketch of the Early Settlement and Subsequent Progress of the Town of Peterborough."

The progress of Peterborough dates from the Peter Robinson immigration in 1825. The only resident of the townsite at that time was Adam Scott who had come up from "the front," the Port Hope-Newcastle section of the lake front in 1819 and erected a sawmill and gristmill somewhere on the east side of Water street about the present location of the Peterborough Canoe Company's factory. The neighboring townships were sparsely settled. The only families in Douro were those of Robert Reid and T. A. Stewart, who had hewn out of the bush homes for themselves north of Auburn, opposite the greens of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club.

The story of Hon. T. A. Stewart and his early experiences as a pioneer of this county has been told in these columns, and is not pertinent to Miss Batten's reading of the account of the building of the court house and jail, the plans of which were laid in 1839, only thirteen years after the Robinson immigrants arrived.

Building Committee

The rest of this narrative is condensed from the Poole sketch. On June 2, 1838, a meeting of the magistrates of the Colborne district was held at the "Government school house for the purpose of naming a building committee for the erection of the new court house and jail "and other matters in connection with the same, as provided in the Act passed at a previous session of the Upper Canada Legislature."

(Harold B. Rye might note that even in those days the provincial authority was a dominant factor in local affairs.)

The magistrates were apparently all Justices of the Peace. Those who attended that meeting were: Daniel Griffith, Thomas Need, Edward Duffy, C. Moe, Edward S. Hickson, James Wallis, Robert P. Madge, Walter Crawford, Robt. Dennistoun, John Langton, Thomas Traill, G. A. Hill, Ephraim Sanford, George G. Bird, Robert Reid, F. Connin, J. Hutchinson, Thomas Carr, John Darcus, Thomas A. Stewart and A. McDonell, M.P.P.

The Hon. T. A. Stewart, M.L.C., was called to the chair, and John Darcus, publisher of Peterborough's first newspaper, "The Backwoodsman and Peterborough Sentinel" in November, 1837, was appointed secretary of the meeting. The members of the building committee were: Hon. T. A. Stewart, chairman, Wm. H. Wrighton, Edward Duffy, Ephraim Sanford, R. P. Madge, E. S. Hickson.

Three members were declared a quorum. On motion of C. More, seconded by E. Duffy, the committee were restricted to an expenditure of £4,000 on the new buildings, but on finding that the tenders for the work exceeded that amount, a second meeting was held, at which, on motion of James Wallis, seconded by R. Dennistoun, the committee was empowered to proceed to the extent of £6,000. The ultimate cost was £7,190, 16 shillings and 7 pence. According to the valuation of the English pound some years ago, the expenditure was perhaps equivalent to around $35,000.

Payment By Taxes

At the first meeting, the magistrates instructed the building committee to direct the Clerk of the Peace of the Newcastle District "to add one penny in the pound to the assessment roll of the proposed District of Colborne for that year (1838) pursuant to the Act establishing the said proposed District. This rate was extended by resolution over the three following years. The committee was instructed to advertize for plans "and to pay the following premiums for the plans they deemed best: 1st, twenty pounds; 2nd, fifteen pounds; 3rd, ten pounds.

The building committee arranged to meet every Friday for the dispatch of business, and entered into negotiations with provincial banks and private individuals for borrowing money to carry on the work.

Plans and specifications were submitted by Joseph Scobell and Walter Sheridan. "That of the former met with most favor, and was awarded the first prize, while Mr. Sheridan's entitled him to second."

Hon. Mr. Stewart was deputed to proceed to Toronto and submit them to the Chief Justice, who confirmed the decision of the committee. The plans were later modified somewhat, and the excavation was doubled and in some places trebled the depth on which the estimates were formed. "All this occasioned an additional outlay, which exceeded the sum stipulated as the limit of their expenditure, but their proceedings were endorsed by the magistrates, and met with the entire sanction of that body, as well as of the public."

The tender of Messrs. Thomas Harper and B. Bletcher for 800 cords of stone at 14 shillings 9 pence each was accepted, provided they furnish all quarried stone, and this was agreed to by these gentlemen.

The Corner Stone

"On the 21st of August, 1838, John Reid, Public Land Surveyor, reported to the committee in reference to a survey of the Government appropriation of ground for the court house and jail, which consisted of seven acres, lots 5, 6 and 7 of which would be required for the intended buildings. The foundation had not been excavated, and the ground was still covered with brush and fallen trees, when it became known that His Excellency Sir George Arthur, Lieut.-Governor of Upper Canada, was about to visit Peterborough.

As it was desirable that the foundation stone should be laid by so distinguished a personage, Mr. Scobell was requested by resolution to open about six feet of ground, and have placed on the spot one load of stone to admit of this ceremony being performed. The chairman was requested to solicit this favor through His Excellency's secretary on his arrival, and should he consent, the Rev. Mr. Wade was to be requested to offer a short blessing on the success of the undertaking.

His Excellency cheerfully consented, but his time being limited, the Committee met at their room at 6.30 o'clock on the morning of the 25th August, 1838, waited upon the Governor at 7, and at 7.30 o'clock, a.m., His Excellency and suite, accompanied by the Building Committee, proceeded to the ground, and in the presence of numerous spectators laid the corner stone of the new buildings. The official ceremony over, the Rev. C. T. Wade, M.A., offered up an impressive and appropriate prayer."

The Governor placed beneath the stone at the southwest corner a parchment scroll commemorating his visit and the laying of the stone by him, and also British coins of George IV, 1831 and 1834.

"The lettering of the scroll was executed in elegant style by our townsman, Ivan O'Beirne, Esq.

Progress of the Work

"The walls and roofs of the court house and jail were completed in 1839, and the work on the interior of the court house finished and that building handed over to the committee by Edward Chamberlen on the 16th day of November, 1840, but not finally accepted by them until the May following. The jail was not entirely finished until the summer of 1842, owing to a defect in the written agreement by which the contractor, Edward Lee, claimed that the plastering was not included in his contract; and the season of 1841 was so far advanced when this became known that the plastering of the jail had to be deferred until the following spring.

At length, on the 27th day of December, 1841, after upwards of three years of arduous duty, the building committee were finally relieved of their task. At a meeting of the magistrates held that day their accounts were examined and declared correct, and a vote of thanks was tendered "to the gentlemen composing the building committee, to their treasurer and secretary, for their indefatigable exertions in carrying the object of their appointment to completion."

More than 40 per cent. of Canadian farmers are members of successful co-operative organizations, Dr. J. B. Reynolds, Port Hope, said in a talk Wednesday night to the young farmers who attended the reforestation meeting at Orono.

Of 700,000 farmers in this country, 325,000 are associated with these farm organizations, all based on the principle of co-operation. In 1935 the total value of the goods they sold amounted to $120,000,000, and at the same time they bought co-operatively $5,000,000 in other goods.

The feature address of the day was given by Pro. Alan F. Coventry of the Department of Biology, University of Toronto, and according to the local young men who attended the meetings during the day, this address was worth going to Orono even if it had been the sole purpose of the trip. It was essentially an argument to the young men that when nature's arrangements are thrown out of balance some reaction will eventually occur. Applying that assertion to the practice of stripping the land of its trees, Prof. Coventry pointed out the consequences or reducing moisture, drying up the countryside, causing sand drifts and other penalties.

Reeve Harry Sirett of Cramahe township presided at the day's sessions. Nearly eighty boys attended from the Central Ontario counties, and about half of them took part in an interesting discussion during the afternoon. One of the boys surprised the gathering by identifying 37 out of 40 specimens of local woods and twigs.

F. C. Paterson took four local boys to Orono. They were Clifford Johnston, Jim Hunter, Bruce Clarke and Wesley Lee.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.— (CP).—An estimated saving of 189,000 h.p. on peak load power will result from the retention of daylight saving time in cities and towns of Ontario and Quebec, according to information tabled in the House of Commons yesterday in reply to a question from George MacKinnon (Con., Kootenay East).

Munitions Minister Howe said no representations had been received to the effect the order would increase rather than reduce the amount of electrical energy used in some municipalities.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Summoned to the state penitentiary where her father lies near death, Lona Ackerman is dismayed when he fails to recognize her. He is serving a life sentence for a murder which occurred when he sought to avenge his daughter's honor. Finding a friend in Jim Claridge, Lona had just begun to take a new interest in life when the prison warden telegraphed her of her father's illness. Alone in the world, she had spent months, finding jobs, then losing them when it became known she was a convict's daughter. Finally Jim had found her a new position, saw more and more of her, until they fell in love. The prison warden takes Lona to his home. As they enter, two convicts confront them with guns. Once in the warden's car, the convicts slug the warden and dump him out, then attempt a mad get-away with Lona in the front seat. Eventually she pretends to faint, then lurches for the steering whitel. Then they crash.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

THERE HAD BEEN a crash, Lona remembered, as she came back to consciousness. She had grabbed the wheel of the car from the hands of the escaping convict who had kidnapped her, and they had crashed. She sat bolt upright as full possession of her senses came to her. She found she was back in the prison hospital. The warden, his head bandaged, was standing beside her. Beside him was the doctor.

"Daddy?" she asked, fearfully. The warden couldn't meet her eyes. "Your father is—all right, Miss Ackerman," he brought out. His eyes looked sad. "You're not to worry. You see, he—he—" He faltered, and she read the truth in his face.

"He's dead," she whispered. "Daddy's dead. I didn't get here—in time. Did he ask for me?"

"He wouldn't have known you, Miss Ackerman," cut in the doctor's smooth voice. "He passed directly from the delirium you saw into a coma, and never rallied. You could have done nothing. He was happy in the thought you would never see him—here."

"He's gone. Daddy's gone. And I wasn't here!" She turned her head away from them toward the wall, the tears welling.

For a moment they allowed her to cry silently. "May I—see him?" she asked then. "You'll let me do—that much?"

The doctor nodded and, carefully they helped her to her feet. Forgetful of her own bandaged head and the bruises that covered her stiff body, she shook them off at the door of the room where she had kept her lonely and useless vigil that endless afternoon. Considerately they allowed her to go in alone.

He was laying in the bed just as she had left him, the sheet drawn up now, covering his face. With gentle hands she pulled it down. He looked infinitely more peaceful than when she had seen him last. In death the lines the past few years of life had traced in his sensitive face had smoothed out. He looked—at rest. As if he were glad.

"Daddy!" she cried out, and sank to her knee beside the stilled form. "Oh, Daddy!" The sobs she had been keeping in check came out then, in a burst of loneliness. Loneliness that was touched with a sudden fierce hatred of this place and all that was in it. The sullen gray walls, the bars, the measured life that was being lived about her, the doctor and his smug manners, even the warden, whose carelessness, she felt, had been responsible, somehow, for the position in which she now found herself. She hated them all. Hated them for what they had done, been forced to do, to the stilled form before her. She wanted, suddenly, more than anything else, to get him away from here. She wanted to take him home—to Bridgewater. To the old churchyard where her mother slept. Someway, somehow, she'd take him back!

Everyone tried to be kind to her during the next few days So kind Lona felt, sometimes, like crying out against the very solicitude with which she was being plied, now that it was too late, now that Daddy was no longer here to see. It wasn't fair!

The prison doctor himself saw to the arrangements for taking her father back home to Bridgewater, and Mrs. Lewis, the warden's wife, insisted upon making that last sad journey with her. She was a motherly sort of woman and the tears in her faded eyes, as she stood hand in hand with Lona on the train platform watching the streets of Bridgewater roll into view, were genuine.

At Bridgewater Mr. Ackerman's old friends rallied dutifully. Shamefaced, some of them, hating to meet her eyes, they trooped through the old-fashioned funeral parlor where she steeled herself to meet them proudly. The white haired old minister who had been the only one of the lot of them daring to stand by her father through the whole dreadful business from the first, offered his services for the last rites.

786 Young Men Being Called Up For Second Training Period Opening Friday In Morrow Park

Young Canadians from the counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Hastings, Northumberland and Haliburton to the number of 786 have been called up for 30 days compulsory military training and will report at Military Training Centre No. 32, Exhibition Grounds, Peterborough, on Friday, November 22.

The group will consist of 21-year-olds not called up before and about 25 per cent of the 22-year-olds, and they must report at the gate under the grandstand between eight o'clock Friday morning and midnight on Friday. They will receive the identical training which their predecessors found so beneficial.

Clothing Cleaned

Uniforms turned in by the first draft have been dry-cleaned, disinfected, pressed and sorted according to size and returned to the stores. Added to this new clothing consisting of shirts, socks, underwear and boots have been shipped into the camp, as each trainee keeps these articles after the camp period is over. Fannings Laudry had the task of cleaning the uniforms and also had the work of cleaning the blankets.

Each bed has four blankets which have been returned and the floors of all huts have been scrubbed and the hunts disinfected.

Members of the instructional staff completed a refresher course on Tuesday which started on November 12, and the administrative staff have had two parades daily, with training in the usual squad drill.

In the first draft 673 were called up and 650 trained, the remainder being turned down for some reason or other. As this camp is a three-company camp, a company being 250 men, the camp wa sactually 100 men shy on their quota. This was true throughout the province, as the first group trained fell 4,000 short of the quota. To avoid a shortage this time, 780 men are being called and out of that number it should be easy to retain 750.

Long Branch and Newmarket camps are both four-company camps, with a total trainee quota of 1,000 each.

Ready to Go Again

Since the first quota of 650 men left on November 7, the Exhibition Grounds has resembled a mining ghost town, and officers and staff relaxed for a few days. Today, however, everything is ship-shape for the new batch, and if anything the camp will operate with greater efficiency because the permanent staff learned many things themselves during the first 30-day period.

On Tuesday, 21 men working under the direction of Mr. Russell, superintendent of construction with the Department of National Defence, started work erecting the superstructure of the drill hall which is 112 by 128 feet. The concrete footings and floor were put down some time ago, but rush of work at other centres has kept the construction men from this city. Two large cranes from a construction firm in Kingston have been rented and will be used to raise the framework into position, once the parts have been assembled.

The indoor rifle range is almost complete except for wiring and window frames, and the trainees will use low power .22 rifles at target practice here. Besides they will be given the usual practice on the outdoor ranges, using the .303 service rifle.

Camp Hospital

Workmen are still busy putting the finishing touches to the camp hospital which will have accommodation for 25 patients, and will be staffed by the two camp medical officers and the usual number of orderlies, as well as a fully qualified druggist.

There has been several changes in the kitchen staff and the new diet sheet prepared at the camp and submitted to Kingston for approval has been returned as suitable. The new diet includes more puddings, and the evening meal also includes pie and cake, but not both at the same meal.

Trench digging for the new bunch of trainees will be a little arduous as they must attack the frozen ground with picks and shovels and duplicate the system of trenches dug by the first bunch of men.

The Salvation Army recreation hunt and canteen has been greatly enlarged and the staff is ready to cater to the needs of the boys.

In the canteen the trainees can purchase cigarettes, chocolate bars, soft drinks, ice cream, cakes, fruit, etc., and also can enjoy all the games, reading material, or letter writing facilities that exist for their convenience.

There are post boxes on the grounds so that trainees need not go outside to post a letter, and mail is delivered in camp twice daily.

Laundrymen have been operating at top speed since November 7th cleaning, pressing and disinfecting 750 uniforms used by the first draft of trainees from Military Training Centre No. 32, Exhibition Park. War Savings Certificates Are Looked Upon As Investment

Members of Peterborough War Savings Stamp Committee were entertained at the Empress Hotel Wednesday afternoon, by Gordon S. Matthews, General Manager of Canada Packers in Peterborough, and chairman of the Peterborough War Savings Stamp Committee. The guest speaker was de Gaspe Beaubien, of Montreal, joint chairman of the National War Savings Committee.

Mr. Beaubien was impressive in his sincerity, and his desire to see the investments in war savings stamps and certificates increased, was shown in his talk. The desire of the Department of Finance is to have the patriots in Canada invest in certificates rather than stamps wherever it is possible. The stamps are, the speaker said, only a means to the certificates.

Idea of Investing

Urging the members of the committee to approach the prospective investor with the thought, and desire of having him invest rather than buy, for war savings stamps are not a commodity to be bought, but, said the speaker, an investment for which the party concerned is paid back his investment plus three percent compound interest. The psychological affect is much more favorable if the word invest is used in connection with war savings, than the words purchase or buy.

The Department of Finance has not yet arrived at a point at which it can say what percentage of an earners income should be invested in stamps or certificates, Mr. Beaubien said, but the idea is under consideration. A "terrible effort" is ahead, but it is an effort that is absolutely necessary.

The money involved is not of prime importance, the speaker said, because more money can be raised in war loans than in this way. The investing of the public in stamps and certificates, if it is carried out consistent with the present plan, will give the Department of Finance the necessary internal control of currency. The program involving the stamps and the certificates is considered to be of much more importance to the country than is the war loan scheme. The investing in this way by the man on the street is not a question of advisability, it is a question of emergency, he said.

The investments are forthcoming only when the investor understands the situation, and appreciates the necessity. The "magnificent co-operation" of the various committees across the Dominion, has been extremely gratifying, he said, and although the primary quota has been raised considerably, the effort to meet it is confidently awaited.

Committees Report

Chairmen of various sub-committees gave reports on the activities and successes of their respective efforts, and particularly outstanding was the report of the Peterborough Collegiate. The other departments were satisfactory, and the splendid work of the members of the committee was commented upon.

It was announced that, in the furtherance of the campaign to influence Canada in the direction of war savings, special Christmas cards, designed as holders for stamps will be issued to post offices across the country in the near future. These cards will have the first stamp affixed, and will sell at the face value of the stamp, that is 25 cents.

It was at his home that Lona spent the two nights while her father lay, silent and sleeping, in the cold gloom of the funeral parlor. They were endless nights, dragging and almost unendurable. To satisfy the kindly old minister and his hovering wife, she pretended to sleep. But when they had retired, she paced the floor of the quaint bedroom, trying to bring to her scattered thoughts some semblance of order. It was of Jim Claridge, back in the city, that she thought most.

What must he be feeling about this whole thing, she kept wondering, her face burning at the thought of the lurid accounts the newspapers were blaring forth. The old preacher tried to keep them from her as much as possible, but she had seen the headlines on the train that first morning coming down to Bridgewater with the warden's wife.

"CONVICT'S DAUGHTER KIDNAPED IN PRISON BREAK." "Girl Wrecks Car. Kills Prisoner, Comrade of Father. . . . Girl's Father Dies in Prison Hospital as She Wrecks the Warden's Car in Desperate Effort to Block Attempted Escape. . . ."

"Lona Ackerman, pretty brown-haired daughter of a life termer, was kidnaped from the warden's home last evening by desperate prisoners . . . Warden Lewis was found knocked on the head and abandoned in a city park. . . . One of the escaping convicts, George "Lefty" Noonan, died of a broken neck in the wreckage of the car. Louis Ewarts, his companion, was recaptured after suffering only slight bruises. . . . The girl, called to the prison by the fatal illness of her father, was a visitor in the warden's home when the escape occurred. Ackerman, a life prisoner, was convicted in 1932 for the murder of Stephen Ellis, salesman, whom he alleged attempted to attack his daughter. The funeral will be held in Bridgewater, home of the former business school teacher. The daughter, Lona, is the sole survivor. . . ."

Wincing every time she thought of that merciless publicity, Lona tried to keep Jim and her life in the city out of her mind. "Convict's daughter . . . lifer . . ." The printed words seemed etched into her very soul. They brought back to her all over again the struggle of those first few months, raked up the whole affair.

She was glad, suddenly and defiantly glad, that she hadn't made any friends. Glad there was nobody she loved to see what she was going through. Glad, most of all, that she hadn't yet given to Jim the right to share her troubles with her!

"Are you sure there's nobody you want notified, my dear?" the old minister had asked her in his kindly voice as he prepared for the funeral. "No distant relatives or friends, perhaps?"

He paused to scan her lined young face pityingly, and she swallowed back a lump in her throat, fighting against a sudden weakening of her resolution. After all, it would be so easy to send for Jim. He'd come, she knew he'd come.

"There's nobody," she said hastily. "I'll have to bury him alone. He'd want it that way."

It was hard for her to realize that it was the last thing she'd ever do for Daddy, as she stood, slight

Reports Made On Sales Of War Stamps

Reports given by the chairmen of the various sub-committees of the Peterborough War Savings Committee were heard at the Empress Hotel on Wednesday. The luncheon was arranged and given by Gordon S. Matthews, district chairman.

In his report on the Peterborough Collegiate, H. A. Toole said that prizes had not been offered to the student or Form having the best results in conection with the sale of War Savings Stamps, because it was thought that no incentive should be necessary. There had been, however, three Union Jacks bought, and the three forms heading their respective groups are allowed to hold the flags for a period of one month. The total sales in the Collegiate have been in excess of $4,000, and while the stress had been on stamps to date, it is expected that a campaign in the direction of certificate sales will be launched after Christmas.

C. Alex Sollitt, city and county vice-chairman, reported on the activities in the Employer-Employee Division, and pointed to the excellent work being done by R. E. Layfield, who, as one familiar with industry, has come forward to help the committee. The factories have been responding well, on the whole, and in at least one case 100 per cent. of the number of employees in a factory have been buying an average of more than one stamp each week.

Mayor James Hamilton, as chairman of the City Division, said that the results among the civic employees has been encouraging, and said that the Police Department has responded also.

The chairmn of the Retail Business Division, Chris Hughes, spoke briefly on the "Smash Hitler Night," explaining that the usual Santa Claus parade had been rejected this year in favor of a more patriotic endeavor.

Morley E. Shaver, city and county chairman, presided, and with the conclusion of the reports, called upon the speaker. The meeting was a real success, and it is believed that the new ideas brought by the guest speaker, de Gaspe Beaubien, will prove to be an added impetus, and that the sale of certificates in this district will benefit correspondingly.

A.F.L. Chief Sees Peace Wane In Labor Front

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21—(AP).—Vice-President Matthew Woll, of the American Federation of Labor, casting a gloomy glance at the dove of United States labor peace launched only yesterday from the White House, said today he saw no hope for a settlement with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

At the same time, the A.F.L. resolutions committee considered a measure to increase its revenue for possible use in a labor war.

President William Green called Lewis a "real dictator" after Lewis had told his cheering C.I.O. convention in Atlantic City "I've done a lot of exploring in Bill's mind and I give you my word—there is nothing there."

Lewis blasted the A.F.L. after President Roosevelt in message to Green — there was no indication here that a similar message had been sent to Lewis—called upon labor's leaders "with the interest of the nation at heart" to find a way to peace.

That is the end of any hope for peace," afid Woll in refering to Lewis' statement that 'it would be wrong' to make it appear a settlement was near. "But I never had much hope for it anyhow.

"There may be only one chance, a remote one that I doubt will happen, and that is if Sidney Hillman takes his Amalgamated Clothing Workers out of the C.I.O. the Textile and Rubber Workers might follow."

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Nov. 20.—(AP).—John L. Lewis had the laurels of a major victory in the Congress of Industrial Organizations convention over Sidney Hillman and advocates of new efforts for labor peace to-day.

Lewis was the victor yesterday with an attack aimed alternately at William Green and the American Federation of Labor high command and Hillman's Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union. The convention gave Lewis a thumping vote on his policy of simply maintaining a peace committee with power to negotiate with the A.F.L.

The Hillman bloc wanted the C.I.O. delegates to consider an immediate move to re-explore possibilities of ending [illegible] Labor's civil war. But Lewis replied that there would be no peace until the C.I.O. demonstrated its strength to "bargain on equal terms" with the A.F.L.

Valera Refuses To Lease Bases In Fear Of War

(By WALLACE CARROLL.)

DUBLIN, Nov. 21—Premier Eamon de Valera, leader of a nation which has just come through twenty-five years of war and economic conflict, spoke today of Ireland's determination to remain neutral.

In a frank talk across a green-topped desk, he explained to me why he could not surrender to Britain naval bases on the south and west coast of Ireland which Britain restored to Ireland in 1938.

The Taoiseach (head of the Government) made it clear at the outset that he did not wish to say anything which might foster ill feeling between Ireland and Britain. His consistent aim, he said, has been to secure understanding and goodwill. But he made it equally clear that Ireland will not change her attitude about the bases.

"It must be remembered," he said, "that these Irish ports had been held by Britain against the will of the Irish people. In giving them back Britain was only restoring to Ireland what was her own. It was an act of restitution.

"To give us back the ports only on condition they would be returned to Britain when she wanted them would in fact be not to restore them at all. And at the time of the agreement in 1938 it was made quite clear, both in British Parliament and ours, that restoration was absolute and without conditions, expressed or implied.

"This question," he continued, "is one which involves our national sovereignty and our people's will. It also is one which involves the safety of our people.

Denies Nazi Activity

"I can understand Britain's position, and if I could do anything to relieve the suffering of the British people I would do so. All our international efforts of years past have had as their principle purpose the saving of the peoples of Europe from their present plight.

"Our principal purpose now must be to save our people. We think of the world as a whole because we are part of it. But it is primarily with the welfare of our own people that the Irish Government must concern itself."

I drew de Valera's attention to reports in the British and American press of alleged German activities in Ireland.

He said that it is quite untrue to say that German submarines ever got fuel or provisions from Irish ports.

I then drew de Valera's attention to press statements that it would be just as feasible for Ireland to lease ports to Britain as it was for Britain to lease bases to the United States.

"But there is no analogy at all," de Valera replied. "In one case it is leasing territory to a neutral. In the other case, it is leasing a neutral's territory to one belligerent to attack another.

"There is in this matter, of course, another difference between the United States and Ireland that should be noted," de Valera went on. "A great power like the United States is sufficiently strong if it became involved in war to influence the course of the war. But Ireland is a small nation and cannot hope to do that."

Opposes Canadian Plan

I asked him about the proposal made by Hon. R. B. Hanson in the Canadian Parliament that Ireland should lease the ports and air bases to Canada instead of Britain.

"Canada is a belligerent just as England is," he replied. "No arrangement of that kind would make our action other than an act of war, exposing us to immediate attack."

"You said in your speech in the Dail there can be no question of handing over the ports as long as Ireland remains neutral. Under what circumstances would Ireland relinquish her neutrality?" I asked.

"If attacked, we are at war with whomever attacks us," he answered.

In reply to further questions de Valera indicated clearly that Ireland would not enter the war in any other circumstances.

Motor Mechanics' Course To Open At Y.W.C.A.

Drawn up and under the supervision of Mr. F. E. Johnston of the Motor Mechanics' Department of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, a course in Motor Mechanics is to commence at the Y.W.C.A. Beginning at eight o'clock, lectures will be held each Tuesday night at a small membership fee, and twenty-five cents a month. One lecture will be held each week until the end of March. Already the class is filling up rapidly, and those interested are advised to register as soon as possible.

The course is designed especially for women drivers, and will be a good background for a course in ambulance driving. It includes lectures on tires, brakes, brake-lining and emergency brakes, ignition, lights, starter, batteries, and several lectures on safety, accidents, road hazards, as well as visits to garages. The Motor Mechanics' Course is a practical course for practical people, designed not to teach a woman to take her car apart, but to detect when her car is not working well. No uniform of any kind is needed.

A NECESSARY LUXURY

By ALICE ALDEN

PERHAPS the most popular and useful accessory today is the fur jacket. Once a luxury, it has become virtually a necessity for the woman who goes about a great deal. Really it is one luxury that is an economy, for a fur jacket looks well with sports things with afternoon things, and it complements any type of evening costume.

Although the long fur jacket is an opulent gesture, the majority of women seem to like the hip-length model, a type popular with Rise Stevens. This young Metropolitan Opera star wears a short jacket of platina fox. Here it is worn over a simply cut gown of black transparent velvet. A massive necklace of gold beads in twisted strands is the only jewelry.

THE ALL-DAY DRESS

By ALICE ALDEN

BEAUTIFUL fabrics that are tissue thin, yet warm and cozy, occupy star place in the output of our domestic mills. Jersey is one of the favorites, beloved by designers for its draping qualities. Jersilda, a satin-backed wool jersey, is especially selected for the popular slim, long torso line, as well as for draping into the necessary folds for lush fullness.

It is used for this good-looking all-day-long frock, a model that fits into the luncheon scene or into informal after-dark gatherings. A shirred flounced skirt cleverly accentuates the reed line of the softly draped blouse which is fastened with finely wrought gold clasps like those on the Family Bible. Matching fabric is used to trim the pert little hat.

Mrs. W. Campbell To Visit City

Mrs. Wallace Campbell of Windsor, National Chairman of Women's Work for Canada, will come to Peterborough next Tuesday under the auspices of the Red Cross to speak to women of the city.

Mrs. Campbell will inspect the Red Cross work rooms next Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, and will talk to all women of Peterborough interested in war work at an open meeting in the Recreation Room of the Y.W.C.A. at three o'clock. Tea will be served after the meeting.

White Elephant Table, Feature Of Trinity Tea

A gracious atmosphere greeted the many guests who dropped in at the Hostess Tea of Trinity Women's Association Wednesday afternoon. Ferns and shaded lights were an effective background for the four long tea tables with their silver baskets of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums, and tall yellow and green tapers. Miss Mabel Clarry, one of the vice-presidents, and Mrs. G. S. Easton received.

Tea was poured by Mrs. R. J. Kidd, Mrs. MacDonald, Mrs. J. A. Bannister, Mrs. Harry Thompson, Mrs. G. N. Gordon, Miss Emma Morrow, Mrs. W. Switzer, Mrs. M. W. Lyle. Group leaders are Mrs. D. J. Hall, Mrs. S. L. Smoke, Mrs. W. Davern, Mrs. H. A. Mitchell. Mrs. W. Gordon was general convener of the homecooking table, assisted by Mrs. F. Leslie and Mrs. A. Legon.

Soft piano music was played during the tea hour by Frances Wells, A.T.C.M., and Miss Lenore Skitch. Miss Evelyn Morrow was tea treasurer.

Mrs. Duncan Walker and Mrs. G. E. Porter were conveners of a "white elephant" table, where many articles of value were noted. A quaint old-fashioned brass clock looked like a family heirloom, there were precious pieces of china and glass, including an ancient tall-stemmed glass bowl; a fine china cocoa set belonging to somebody's grandmother; grass mending baskets, and many other items of more than usual interest.

Auxiliary Plans Theatre Night

A meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders' Regiment was held in the Officers' Mess at the Armouries on Wednesday afternoon with the president, Mrs. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, in the chair. Much has been accomplished by the newly-formed organization, including the knitting of a large quantity of scarves, mitts and socks for men of the regiment.

Captain R. T. F. Brain has called upon the Auxiliary for mouth organs, magazines, and other articles needed by the men in Ottawa. Announcement was made that tickets were going well for the S. D. and G. Highlanders' Theatre Night. Capitol Theatre tickets will be honored Wednesday and Thursday nights of November 27 and 28 next week, and for afternoon matinees of the same two days.

Chicken Salad (see note)
Hot Buttered Rolls (see note)
Pineapple Sticks Ripe Olives
Hot Mince Tarts Cheese
Genuine Hot Chocolate (see note)

NOTES—I couldn't resist giving you the above menu because it is so perfect and is bound to fit into your entertaining between now and Christmas (clip the chicken salad and hot chocolate recipe for your file).

Chicken Salad

To each two cups chicken (chopped in even ½-inch cubes) add 1 cup chopped celery. Mix with enough good mayonnaise to bind it. When ready to serve fill crisp well cupped lettuce leaves (that have been dried) with mixture, garnish with sliced hard cooked, eggs, ripe olives, pineapple finger.

Hot Rolls:

Scald ¾ cup milk, put in large bowl with 3 tablespoons shortening, 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 teaspoon salt. Stir and let cool to lukewarm. Dissolve two yeast cakes in ¼ cup lukewarm water and then add to the milk. Add 1 very well-beaten egg. Then stir in enough flour to make a fairly stiff dough, one that will take up all moisture on bowl but at the same time not too heavy. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled. Then roll out into shapes on floured board, cloverleafs, Parker House or twists. Put into buttered pans, let rise to twice their bulk, covered. Bake at 375 to 400 deg. Fahr.

Genuine Hot Chocolate

(For Sunday's High Tea)

This is a drink so creamy, so frothy so full of flavor that it says "party" alone. Three squares unsweetened chocolate, ¼ cup cold water. Put chocolate and water in saucepan and stir over low heat until chocolate melts and is smooth. Add ½ cup sugar and dash of salt. Blend and stir and boil for five minutes. Cool. When cold fold in ½ cup cream which has been whipped until fairly stiff. Flavor with 1 teaspoon vanilla. To serve, put a small ladle or a good tablespoon of this mixture into each cup and fill cup with very hot milk. Try it—it makes quite a sensation.

OPPORTUNITY DAY IN YOUR KITCHEN

says Mary Blake

Any day you have Carnation Milk on your pantry shelf, is Opportunity Day in your kitchen—with scores of opportunities to save money, to create new, exciting dishes, to improve the flavour and texture of favourite dishes.

Yes, Carnation Milk does these things. It's the modern form of milk—much more widely useful than milk in its ordinary form. It keeps indefinitely unopened; it is rich enough to use in place of cream (even for whipping); it gives a smooth texture and richer flavour to cooked dishes and to milk drinks; it is always the same whenever, wherever you buy it; and it is economical.

Carnation is pure milk—nothing added. It has all these special virtues because it is evaporated to double-richness, homogenized and sterilized, and treated with ultra-violet rays to give it extra "sunshine" vitamin D.

EXCITING NEW DISHES (and ECONOMICAL)
SPLIT PEA SOUP—you'll put it among your favourites when you try the Carnation Milk recipe. DUTCH POTATOES—for a one-dish meal. MOCK CHICKEN LEGS—an inexpensive way of making a meal seem special. CREAMY NO-EGG MAYONNAISE—you'll want it often in salad days. WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Christmas Cake Special With Excellence of Flavor

By MARY MOORE

We risked all and made nearly twelve pounds of cake from a recipe we had never tasted—merely on the recommendation of a good cook friend, who said it had the best flavor of any Christmas cake she had ever tasted. That was enough for me, for I was tired of fruit cakes that specialized in great masses of sticky fruit—I wanted a little more flour and excellence of flavor—in this cake we have it.

Because my friend comes from Alabama, I have called it Alabama Fruit Cake (recommended for excellence of flavor).

Three pounds raisins (my friend says she always uses Valencias—but this year they will be practically impossible to get so used seeded Australian Lexias), 2 lbs. currants (or 1 lb. currants and 1 lb. chopped dates), 1½ lbs. blanched almonds, 1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon, 4 freshly grated nutmegs, 1 lb. sifted flour, 1 lb. butter, 1 lb. sugar, 4 oz. sherry or other wine, 2 oz. cooking brandy, 1 oz. rose water, ½ lb. each lemon and citron peel OR 1 pint orange marmalade may be used in place of lemon and citron peels, 1 dozen eggs beaten separately.

Note.—If the orange marmalade is used in place of the peels, I think the cake is moister and more delicate—on the other hand the peels make the cake fruitier and chewier.

Prepare the fruits and nuts and peels, by slicing or chopping or shredding and mix with 1 cup out of the required 1 lb. of flour. Cream the butter for at least 10 minutes, then gradually add the sugar to it creaming. Sift together the remainder of the flour and the spices. Beat the eggs with large rotary beater for 5 minutes and add the wine and cooking brandy to them. Sift the flour mixture into the sugar and butter mixture, and alternately add the egg mixture while stirring. Then add the floured fruits and stir for at least 10 minutes—get the family Strong-Arm to help you with this. If the marmalade is used in place of peels add it when the egg mixture is added.

Bake in buttered paper-lined pans. Bake at 275 deg. Fahr (this low temperature prevents fruit from caramelizing and having that burned flavor characteristic of some fruit cakes) for about 3 or 4 hours—time depending on size of cakes. Cool cakes when baked, then store in closely covered crocks or tin boxes well wrapped in wax paper and towels.

Reader's White Fruit Cake

Note.—This recipe was sent in to us by a reader in the Cake Contest of 1936—the ground almonds interested me—also the coffee—so I tried it this year—one-half the recipe, using ground almonds and coffee—the other half using shredded almonds and orange juice. They are both excellent—the orange juice is lighter.

One and one-quarter cups white sugar, 1 cup butter, 1 lb. glace cherries (all green or all red or half green and half red), 1 lb. bleached sultana raisins, ¼ lb. citron peel, 5 eggs, ⅓ cup strong clear coffee, 3 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ lb. ground almonds.

Method.—Cream butter and sugar, beat the eggs and add them alternately with the flour (which has been first sifted with the baking powder and salt), add the fruit which has been sprinkled with a little of the flour, then add the strong clear coffee. Bake in pan 9 inches by 9 inches in oven of 350 deg. Fahr. for about 2 hours.

Note.—If orange juice is used in place of coffee it is not necessary to strain out the pulp—merely remove the seeds. One-half pound of almonds may be used if desired.

Medium Rich Fruit Cake

One-half pound butter, ½ pound brown sugar, 1½ lbs. pastry (4½ cups), 5 large eggs, 1 lb. washed and dried currants, ½ lb raisins (Lexias preferably), ½ lb. mixed peel, ¼ lb. shredded almonds, 1½ teaspoons ground ginger, ¾ teaspoon cinnamon, ¾ teaspoon mace, ¼ cup molasses. Cream the butter and sugar together until thoroughly blended. Drop the eggs in one at a time and beat well after each addition. Add the flour and spices sifted together, then mix in the fruits, nuts and molasses and continue mixing until the whole is well mixed. Pour into tins lined with buttered paper and bake at 300 deg. Fahr.—a 2-lb. cake requires 2 hours—it may be baked more slowly for a longer time.

Cherry Citron Cake

This is based on the old-fashioned pound cake—flavor is rich, keeps very well, and is easy to make.

One pound butter, 1 pound fruit sugar, 1½ pounds (6 cups) pastry flour, 8 large or 10 small eggs, one-half pound each candied cherries, candied pineapple, citron peel, white raisins. Cream the butter and sugar together thoroughly. Drop the eggs in one at a time, and beat well after the addition of each, keeping the mixture very smooth. Add the flour and mix very lightly, then add the fruit and flavoring and combine the ingredients well. Pour into tins lined with greased paper, and sprinkle sugar lightly over the top. Bake at 335 for about 2 hours. Let cool then wrap in waxed paper and towels and keep in tin box.

Notice.—We would appreciate if readers desiring recipes for Christmas cooking would write immediately for them, giving as explicit directions as possible, and if private reply is needed enclose stamped and self-addressed envelope.

FASHIONS

Simplicity and good lines make this side-button frock the smartest of the season. Corduroy or velveteen with a matching "beanie" hat spiked with a bright feather is just the thing to wear right now as well as all winter long. The square neckline or the high one with a tiny white collar are both becoming and very chic on your best winter dress. The coat lines are new and the button closing makes your dress easy to slip into. Wear it to the office, to classes or to club meetings and just see how well dressed you feel.

THINK LONG BEFORE YOU RUSH TO DIVORCE COURT

Wife With Straying Husband Has Many Things to Consider Before She Asks for Severance of Marriage Ties.

Dear Miss Dix—I have known for a long time that my husband was running around with other women. I don't think that he really cares for any of them. He just likes the adventure and for them to flatter him and to show that he is a fascinator. But my friends tell me that I shouldn't stand for it, that I should have enough self-respect to take the children and leave him. But he is affectionate and kind to us and tells me he loves me and he provides us with a good home. I have poor health and could not possibly support the children and give them the advantages that their father does if I should take my friends' advice and break up my home. He does not make enough money to maintain two homes. I feel that as long as we can keep a home together, educate the children and live peaceably I am better off to let things stand as they are. What do you think? Am I right to stick with him and let him go on as he has been doing? Should I interfere in his affairs? Or should I get a divorce? J. J. X.

ANSWER—I think you are taking by far the wiser course, and the one that will bring the greatest good and happiness to all concerned in just ignoring your husband's infidelities and making the best of a bad situation.

It takes a lot of courage and strength of character and hard horse sense for a wife to shut her eyes to her husband's philandering and carry on, but, 99 times out of 100, it pays, if he is pleasant and kindly in the home and if he provides her with a comfortable living.

True, if she loves him it wrings her heart with jealousy. True, he tramples her pride in the dust. But because she has lost some of the good things of marriage, it is folly to throw everything out of the door.

Divorce No Panacea

The wife's first impulse when she finds she has a rival is to rush to the divorce court, but a divorce is no panacea for what ails her. There is no magic in a decree absolute that takes the sting out of knowing that she has been superseded by another, or that makes her feel gay and happy over having lost the man she loves, or that turns her once more into a carefree girl. She is still a middleaged, careworn woman with children, saddened and disillusioned, and with nothing of glamor left.

All her divorce has brought her is not only the shattering of her house of dreams but the pulling down of the tangible house in which she has lived. Instead of the generous support her husband gave her she has the small alimony the court allotted her.

Instead of her pleasant circle of friends and her social position she is a divorcee, without enough money to gild the situation. Often her vaunted freedom means only the freedom to look for a job and the necessity of working to support her children.

"Half a loaf is better than no bread," says the old proverb, and if a wife cannot have all she wants from her husband, she is sensible to take what she can get.

Love and loyalty are, of course, the two great things in marriage, but when one has lost these things there are still consolation prizes in a good home, a good car, security and the ability to give one's children the advantages that they deserve.

Men Don't Always Mean What They Say

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am desperate. I am a girl of 18. Have been married for seven months, but my husband has nagged and criticized me until he has killed my love. He has badgered me until I am a nervous wreck. During the last two months I have met a man with whom I have fallen in love and who loves me very dearly, and he wants me to divorce my husband and marry him.

In spite of the way my husband has treated me, he say he loves me and will kill himself if I leave him. On the other hand, the man I love says he will kill himself unless I marry him. I do not want to be responsible for either's death so please advise me what to do.

TROUBLED WIFE.

Answer—I think you are flattering yourself in thinking that either your husband or your sweetheart will commit suicide over losing you. You know what the poet says—"Men have died and worms have eaten them, but not for love."

Don't take it too seriously when men threaten to kill themselves. Occasionally they do, of course, but nine times out of 10, it is just a gesture intended to intimidate those about them and they haven't the slightest intention of harming themselves. Any hospital will tell you that after people take poison they yell for the stomach pump.

But don't you think that seven months is a very short time to give marriage a trial? Don't you think you are being a quitter not to work a little longer and a little harder to make it a success? Why don't you take your husband back and see if he won't criticize you less, and you show a little more patience before you rush into the divorce court?

And, take it from me, child, swapping husbands won't settle the problem of how to be happy though married. All that it amounts to is just exchanging one set of faults for another that are just as hard to get along with. For no man is perfect, and no wife ever got a husband who was just like she wanted him to be.

All Wounds Are Healed By Time

Dear Dorothy Dix—Two months ago I killed my fiance's sister accidentally. Her family were very understanding about it, but I broke our engagement, knowing my presence would always remind them of it and seeing them would hurt me, too. In a short while I am going away for military training. Before I go shall I make up with the girl and have a little happiness? Or would it be better just to go away and both of us try to forget the unfortunate affair? Will this shadow always be between us? Can we find happiness together again?

DES.

Answer—If the girl loves you, I think you are adding to her sorrow by making her feel that she has lost both you and her sister. Go back to her and make up to her and her family for the grief you have caused them. Time heals all wounds and there is no reason why you and your sweetheart may not yet be happy together.

Funds Are Added To Overseas Bale Fund at Tea

A substantial sum was added to its fund for new clothing by the Wednesday Afternoon Knitting Club yesterday during a successful tea held at the home of the club organizer, Mrs. John Cameron, 661 Weller street. The clothing will be included in a bale of knitted articles for British air-raid victims, made by club members. Although organized but six weeks ago under the auspices of the Peterborough Red Cross branch, it is amazing what the flying needles of these women have accomplished, and visitors yesterday made many admiring comments on the quality of the work as well as its quantity.

A table of dainty baby garments brought more than a hint of moisture to the eyes of many as they thought of the helpless babies who must be rushed through cold night air into crowded air-raid shelters. However, bringing comfort to many of these infants will be the warm blankets, the booties, bonnets, mitts, etc., daintily embroidered or edged with fluffy Angora wool. Even a small pink hot water bottle was included in this display.

There was a table of donated knitting, too — sweaters, gloves, scarves, mitts. The club work, in addition to warmly practical articles of clothing, included children's sweaters in dainty shades, one with narrow white angora edging collar and cuffs boasted a tiny white carved elephant chained to the pocket "for luck." Mrs. R. E. Knox and Mrs. E. T. Johnston were hostesses in the knitting room.

In the dining room, where tea was poured during the afternoon by Mrs. F. J. Lynch, Mrs. S. D. Carver, Mrs. G. R. Langley, Mrs. Ian McRae, Mrs. C. A. Salmonsen, patriotic colors were used on the tea table. Red, white and blue tapers in silver candelabra matched a bowl of white and blue chrysanthemums and red roses. Mrs. H. Sills was dining room hostess, and assisting in the tea room were Mrs. R. E. Macdonald, Mrs. Adam Sands, Mrs. L. R. Mitchell, Mrs. H. Worton, Mrs. Cecil Wolfe, Mrs. E. T. Johnston, Mrs. Robt. Knox, Mrs. K. Burgess, Mrs. D. V. Canning.

and straight in her black dress next day, and heard the minister's final, benevolent prayer. The last time she would see his white, peaceful face. Never to clasp his hand again, never to be able to tell him—about Jim! . . . Only the sea of curious faces crowded into the hot, stuffy little parlor kept her from sobbing aloud.

All of Bridgewater had come to the funeral, it seemed. She had wanted it to be private, but the minister had persuaded her it was unwise. And so she was obliged to let them come and stare. A few of them were genuinely concerned, but the most were hostile and avidly curious.

They followed her even to the raw new grave, etched like a brown scar on the rolling green of the churchyard cemetery. Standing with her back to the battery of eyes that devoured her silently, it seemed in that moment that her heart was broken beyond repair.

"I am the Resurrection and the Life," the minister's kindly voice had intoned, reverently, but she found in the ancient words no comfort.

"He that believeth in Me, though he be dead, yet will he live again." Dry eyed she had heard it through. Her determination not to break beneath the combined stare of all the eyes eager for her every movement kept her shoulders straight and her figure erect as she stood beside the minister's wife. Fists clenched, she took one sobbing breath as they motioned her it was time to turn away.

"Goodby, Daddy," she murmured, "Sleep tight. . . ."

She looked almost defiant as the minister's kindly hand on her arm guided her toward the waiting car. Stiffly she climbed inside, still upheld by that desperate resolve not to gratify the ghoulish desire of the crowd for a sensational breakdown. Once inside, and hidden from view, she collapsed brokenly, and sobbed on the old minister's shoulder.

Teach Yourself Piano in This Short-Cut Way

Entertain with Favorite Airs

"She shall make music wherever she goes," says the old rhyme. And what appreciation and admiration follow the music-maker! The girl who plays the piano seldom lacks for dates.

Learning to play the tunes people love isn't hard. You can teach yourself, quickly read music with the help of a short-cut chart.

Place the chart behind the keys as our diagram shows and you see at once which key to strike for each note.

You find too that the same keys, five black and seven white, are repeated throughout the keyboard, making it simple to master. Then you learn musical signs, how to read time and key signatures. You soon are playing catchy waltzes, fox-trots.

Our 24-page instruction book gives keyboard chart, explains elements of music, musical signs, short-cut chord method of playing popular music. Includes three favorite airs for practice.

"The Authority on Authorities"

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT

LAYING out the cards carefully, in order to set up interesting plays in them, is one of the best ways to learn many things about the game. It is a much more intelligent form of solitaire than the kinds usually played by people who waste time to go through some mechanical pattern created by a shuffle and deal. It is truly instructive. There is no better way to become a master of the various kinds of end-plays, including squeezes, trump coups, lead-throwers, etc.

This is a hand in actual rubber bridge which came to Edwin N. Moore, of the Union League club of New York, whose ingenuity in framing up a fancy squeeze play was related yesterday. This deal was against two of his cronies, in a real fighting game, and he proved he had learned how to handle his squeezes. This time it was a double squeeze, on both opponents.

West led the heart K, East overtaking the A and returning the heart 7, which Mr. Moore ruffed. He then played the club K to the A, but West ended his chance of ruffing out a club loser by leading his spade J. The A won that, then the 10 went to the K, East returning the club J to the Q. The only chance now was a squeeze, a double one.

Mr. Moore ran spades to the tenth trick. When he led the last one to the eleventh trick, he retained the diamond 6 and club 8, with the heart J and diamond A-J in dummy. West couldn't discard his heart Q, which would make the dummy's J good, so threw off a diamond, whereupon the heart was tossed from dummy. East now felt the pincers. If he discarded one of his two diamonds, he would set up the J, so he tossed the club 10, which set up Mr. Moore's 8, making the contract anyway.

Dismissal Of Turnkey Recommended

The dismissal of G. F. Fry from the position of turnkey at the jail was recommended to Sheriff F. J. A. Hall by the County Council Wednesday afternoon, on a motion by Reeve G. B. Scriver, Lakefield, seconded by Deputy-reeve G. H. McIlmoyle of Smith.

The committee appointed to interview Sheriff Hall, who has the authority to make such jail appointments, reported that there were only eleven prisoners in the jail this week, and when the number dropped to less than twelve the employment of a second jailer should be discontinued.

It is understood that Wilfred Wood, who has taken the place of S. G. Johnston as assistant turnkey, should be appointed in Mr. Fry's place.

"Mr. Wood is not fitted for war work," Reeve M. H. Johnston said, "and Mr. Fry is an able bodied man." Mr. Wood saw service in the 1914-18 war, it was said yesterday.

Red Cross Money

Reeve Johnston gave the council an account of the disbursements of the $5,393.88 (half a mill) appropriated in June for patriotic purposes.

The council sent $3,000 directly to the British Red Cross, $950 to the Y.M.C.A., $300 to Canadian Army Huts, $600 to the Salvation Army, and $493.88 to the Canadian Red Cross.

The council also granted $500 last January for local Red Cross work. It was distributed after the June sessions as follows: Norwood Red Cross, $100; Havelock, $100; Peterborough, $100; Lakefield, $75; Apsley, $45; Warsaw, $40; Young's Point, $40.

Reeve Johnston said, in reply to Reeve W. A. Anderson, that these grants were made in response to application. No application was received from Keene Red Cross. A grant was made to Peterborough Red Cross because some of the adjoining branch societies in the townships were affiliated with the city Red Cross.

A Prince Edward County resolution to disfranchise people on relief from municipal voting was rejected by a vote of 9-8 in committee on Legislation, with Deputy-reeve Percy Davidson presiding.

A resolution opposing the radical idea was moved by Reeve M. Coughlin and Warden McColl, and an amendment by Reeve Wallace Shearer, seconded by Deputy-reeve McIlmoyle proposed that Peterborough County endorse it.

A Lincoln County idea, urging the government to conscript wealth for war purposes was endorsed by a resolution, moved by Reeve Gifford. This motion was adopted by unanimous vote and without discussion.

Restoration of compensation for feeder cattle brought into accredited areas and condemned as T.B. reactors, was sought in a Wentworth County resolution. It was endorsed by Reeve W. A. Anderson, seconded by Reeve Robert Martin, Dummer

A Stamford Township proposal that free medicine and hospitalization be provided for the people as a means of security, the cost to be borne by the federal government and employees of labor was endorsed by the council.

No action for the present was the decision on the request from the Navy League for a grant.

Assets of the Foley Estate were valued at $44,250 at June 30, 1940, as reported by the Victoria Trust and Savings Company.

"The administration of this fund should never have been allowed to pass out of this county," Reeve W. A. Anderson said. Replying to a question, he said the change was made by the county solicitor. There was a time when the revenue of the fund was absorbed in fees and the poor people for whom it was intended got nothing, Mr. Anderson said "Trustees should live here where they could come and tell us what the capital is earning and how."

Mr. Anderson said it would be much better if the funds were invested in this county and administered by three local trustees.

Reeve M. H. Johnston asked how much was the cost of administration, but failed to get an answer to his query. The capital is represented by three houses in Peterborough and 27 mortgages and an invested balance of $5,000.

The trust company's report was referred to the Foley Estate committee, on a motion by Reeves Johnston and Mann, with a request that they consider means by which the administration of the estate could be returned to Peterborough County.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., Nov. 21—(AP).— An early snow blanketed most of New Mexico to-day, slowing traffic and grounding airplanes. The weather bureau reported up to six inches of snow in the mountains along the continental divide. Albuquerque had a two-inch fall—heaviest November snow since 1934.

King George Views Damage Inflicted By Nazi Raids On Coventry

This is all that was left of historic St. Michael's Cathedral in Coventry after German raiders had rained bombs upon the historic city. Dating back to the 14th century and of pure Gothic architecture, the famous cathedral was crumbled on all sides and only its 303-foot spire still stands to defy German raiders.

Urge Dairies By Gallon Containers To Reduce Distribution Costs

TORONTO, Nov. 21 (CP).—Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, yesterday urged milk distributors to try every possible means of lowering distribution costs and passing the benefits of this lower cost on to producers and consumers.

He was addressing the opening sessions of the 12th annual convention of the Ontario Milk Distributors' Association here.

One means of reducing distribution costs, he suggested, was the use of larger containers holding three quarters or a gallon, at discount prices.

He said that larger containers were being used in St. Louis, Mo., where consumers were attracted to gallon containers by a three-cent advantage in price over the purchase of four separate quarts. This meant fewer deliveries.

He said proposed changes in delivery systems in Great Britain included deposits on milk bottles by consumes, pre-payment instead of credit, and elimination of overlapping in distribution and unnecessary deliveries.

The Credit Bureau

E. J. Leboeuf, secretary of the Windsor Milk Distributors' Association, explained operations of their credit bureau as a protection against customers who got milk for nothing by frequently changing their dairy.

Even bakers had sought information from the bureau which had also been effective in correcting the misuse of another dairy's bottles.

C. M. Meek, chairman of the Ontario Milk Control Board, advised co-operation in the development of a code of ethics which would be preferable to the board framing such a code, and would reduce greatly the references to the board, which during the year held 116 meetings and 886 hearings, and had 1,212 separate items dealing with prices, mounting costs, spread between buying and sale prices, methods of distribution involving change of containers, etc.

Too little serious thought has been given by the industry to distributing costs, Mr. Meek said.

"At various times you have given consideration to the costs of special delivery, bad debts, credits, and bottle losses but how much has been done?" asked Mr. Meek.

A change is necessary in the method of fixing geographical limits for licences to be issued to distributors in Ontario, asserted Mr. Meek, who pointed out that practically all our licences are issued for municipal boundaries, a practice that is not in use in most other countries.

These will form the new executive of the Association: Belleville, T. F. Reid; Chatham, R. Glover; Cornwall, T. O. Clark; Guelph, C. Yeates; Kingston, K. D. Moncrieff; Kirkland Lake, O. L. Archer; London, J. H. Duplane; Oshawa, H. P. Hart; Ottawa, H. J. Clark; Owen Sound, B. Whitmore; Peterborough, W. G. Owens; St. Catharines, C. H. Smith; Sault Ste. Marie, R. H. Elgie; Sudbury, D. Norwood To Vote On 3 Bylaws At New Year's NORWOOD, Nov. 21—(ENS). — Three bylaws will be submitted to Norwood ratepayers at the next regular municipal elections. The council at a special session authorized the clerk to prepare a bylaw on the question of two-year terms for reeve and council. The electors will also decide upon the matter of adopting Daylight Saving Time for the duration of the war, and the third is a money bylaw, providing for the issuance of debentures to the extent of $5,000 for the purpose of resurfacing sidewalks and making permanent repairs to the Town Hall. At present, the village of Norwood is on Standard Time.

Mrs. W. B. Tucker and Mrs. Alex Kempt addressed the council on behalf of the I.O.D.E. asking for some assistance in their salvage campaign. On motion of Councillors Lochhead and Bitten, the council will provide a truck to make the collections, and granted the I.O.D.E. permission to use the old council chamber for storing and sorting purposes.

On motion of Councillors Lochhead and Scott, Mr. Portaway will be paid $5 per year for the space used in piling wood on his Elm street property.

The Reeve was authorized to apply for a grant from the Foley estate, on motion of Councillors Lochhead and Bitten.

The County Council will be requested, on motion of Councillors Bitten and Scott, to pass the necessary regulations, enabling the municipality to conduct their own land sales in case of tax arrears.

On motion of Councillors Scott and Lochhead, the fire insurance policy on the Town Hall was renewed with the J. M. Hope agency.

The following accounts were passed and ordered paid: H. D. Baker, salary, $20; Ed. Slater, salary, $12; R. A. Dean, salary, $50; H.E.P. System, hall lights, $3.50; James Esplin Co., office supplies, $6.60; Bell Telephone, constable's phone, 2 months, $6.98; Wilbert Golloher, acc. wood, $85; W. E. Pakenham, sel. jurors, $2; J. R. Thompson, sel. jurors, $2; R. A. Dean, sel. jurors, and returns, $4; J. Weir and Son, wreath, $4; Can. Legion, half cost 2 transients, $1.25; J. L. Squire and Sons, ½ thousand shingles, $2.75; K. Edmunds, Hallowe'en services, $2.50; King's Hotel, lunch for soldiers, Armistice Day, $3.15; relief account, October, $91.32.

One Apsley Quilt Draws Thanks From Londoner

APSLEY, Nov. 21—(ENS). — The Apsley Women's Anglican Guild met on Thursday evening for their monthly meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. J. Downing. The meeting opened with prayer for our soldiers, sailors and air men.

Grateful Letter From London.

This is a copy of a letter sent to the members of Apsley United Church by Mr. A. Thompson of London, England:

Dear Sirs,—Among a quantity of material allotted to us by the Canadian Red Cross, I have found a quilt bearing the label of your church. I am writing to you (quite unofficially) to let you know that the gifts which the Canadian people are sending to this country are actually finding their way to those people who are in need. I am a volunteer worker in one of the several rest centres, established as an emergency measure in London. Our particular task is to provide hot food and temporary sleeping accommodation for Londoners who are rendered homeless through enemy action. Some of them need shelter for only a few hours until they can reach a friend's home. Others, more unfortunate, remain until they can return to their patched-up homes or until they can be placed in billets away from London. This sometimes takes several days. Often the people come to us, with nothing more than the clothes they are wearing, having lost their homes completely. We are always grateful for any extra comfort, and I can assure you that we fully appreciate the kindness of our Canadian friends.

I feel sure that you will be glad to learn that the quilts and other articles are being used by Londoners whose needs are urgent.

With renewed thanks, I remain, your sincerely,

A. Thompson.

Worried About His Health Now Praises Herb Medicine

This Man Says Stomach Felt Better After First Bottle of Syntona — Relieved Heartburn, Cramps and Indigestion—Suffered with Headaches, Loss of Sleep and Jumpy Nerves.

MR. HOWARD R. SMITH

All who suffer from ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, and their long train of associated diseases, should be interested in the realities of the benefits that local men and women are receiving from Syntona every day. Many have given public statements so others might read them and be helped also. Here, for instance, is the experience of Mr. Howard R. Smith, well-known employee of Meakins & Sons, who resides at 106 George Street, Hamilton.

"For a number of years, I was bothered with stomach trouble and constipation. I often had to stay home from work because of stomach cramps, headaches and heartburn. This condition caused me considerable worry. My nerves got bad and I couldn't get my proper sleep. Then I would get up mornings feeling unrested and half sick.

"A friend told me about how Syntona had helped her, so I began taking it, too, and it helped my stomach right from the first bottle. Now, my bowels are regular and I don't suffer with my stomach. I am free of headaches, my nerves are relaxed and I sleep better. In every way, I feel more healthy and energetic than I did in years previously, and I am glad to recommend Syntona to others."

Syntona contains no drugs or depressors. It is made only from the pure juices of herbs, roots and leaves. It is pleasant to take and it costs only a few cents a day to take it.

Every sufferer is cordially invited to call at Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, and learn the plain truthful facts about Syntona. You, too, may receive these priceless benefits.—(Advt.)

U.S. Aid to Britain Near Peak Under Present Conditions Says F. D. R.

ALL POSSIBLE BEING DONE AT PRESENT TIME, PRESIDENT CLAIMS, AT SAME TIME CHALLENGING ANYONE TO SHOW WAY PLANES CAN BE MADE FASTER—MORE THAN MERE PASSING OF BILL.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Nov. 22 (AP).—President Roosevelt indicated at a press conference today that, under present conditions, United States aid to Britain is near its peak. He said that everything possible is being done at the present time.

Two weeks ago Mr. Roosevelt laid down a rule of thumb under which Britain and the United States would share 50-50 in United States production of planes, guns and other war equipment.

Asked today whether, in view of the recent acceleration of German bombings of English communities, that rule could be altered to give more help to Britain, the President said the question was altogether too general. If someone could point out specifically how it could be done it might be a different story.

He challenged anyone to show him the way planes could be built faster and said the Government can't pass a bill or issue an order and get planes the next day.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Nov. 22 (AP). — A strike of 7,500 unionists, protesting the company's refusal to discharge a mill worker who allegedly threatened a congress of industrial organizations union official, shut down operations at the main plant of the Aluminum Company of America here today.

Said Advised To Avoid Joining Axis

Hun Envoy Von Papen Said In Turkey With Order to Line Up

SOFIA, Nov. 22 (AP)—The Bulgarian government was reported by a high source today to have been advised by Soviet Russia not to join the three-power axis alliance.

Official quarters and the government-supervised press made no reference to the reported advice.

Bulgarian leftists, representing a large section of the country's public opinion, are quietly but firmly opposing complete capitulation to the axis.

They argue that so long as Russia stays out of the tri-power pact and so long as the Soviet position in the international picture is not perfectly clear, Bulgaria, too, should stay out.

This does not mean, however, that Bulgaria will refuse other demands which Hitler is reported to have made on King Boris at their conference last Sunday. Even with Russia's sympathy, diplomats said, Bulgaria is not strong enough to refuse these.

Demand On Turkey

ISTANBUL, Nov. 22 (AP)—Franz Von Papen, German ambasador to Turkey, arrived here by plane this afternoon and was believed by observers to be bringing to the Turkish government a German demand for Turkish participation in the axis "new order" for Europe.

Returning from conferences in Germany and Bulgaria, Von Papen was expected to proceed by train to Ankara, the Turkish capital, tonight.

Observers believed the proposals he carried from Berlin might involve a request for a Turkish pledge not to act if Bulgarian and German troops move to attack Greece for the relief of Italy.

Turkey intensified defence plans by preparing stricter army controls over the civilian population. Istanbul had its first full blackout last night.

Newspapers declared, "We shall not make war, but if war comes to us we shall not flinch. We are united—we are ready."

The newspaper Ikdam declared: "No one is able to say that Russia will accept easily a German attack on Greece which would carry German troops toward the Dardanelles. However, the consent of Russia would not signify that Turkey does not mean to defend the Straits. Turkey follows events, ready to defend herself with all her might."

Koritza Falls; Athens Celebrates

Victorious Hellenes Sweep Ahead Upon All Fronts

ATHENS, Nov. 22 (AP)—The capture of Koritza, key base in southern Albania from which Italian columns drove into Greece 25 days ago, was announced today by the Greek government.

A government spokesman said that before the day is over there may not be "a single Italian left in Greek territory."

It came as the climax of bitter warfare in the rugged mountains of the Greek-Albanian frontier in which hard-fighting Greek troops first checked and then hurled back the tide of invasion.

"The advance of our troops continues everywhere."

The government ordered flags displayed throughout the kingdom, and dispatches from Salonika and elsewhere told of an excited populace eagerly discussing the victory.

(An Italian communique admitted the loss of Koritza and said two Italian divisions had been forced to withdraw.)

Not only have Greek forces occupied Koritza, 10 miles inside Albania, but other Greek forces are pursuing an Italian army retreating pell mell farther south, near the centre of the 100-mile front, an announcement said.

As a result of this break in the Italian line, the Greeks were said to be threatening Argirocastro, a second advanced base only 30 miles from Porto Edda. Porto Edda is one of the bases used by the Italians to supply their Albanian army from the sea.

Capital Rejoices.

Will Uncover Agents' Scurryings In U.S. As He Did The Nazis

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP)—The United States committee on unamerican activities promised today to follow up its German white paper with companion reports devoted to alleged Italian and Japanese activities in the United States.

The material set forth in its white paper on German activities, the committee charged, was evidence of closely-integrated scheme of Nazi espionage, propaganda and planning in the United States.

Informed sources said that an Italian white paper similar to the 509-page document released Thursday on German activities, was being prepared by the committee and would be transmitted to congress within a few weeks.

Committee investigators were reported actively pursuing their inquiry into the operations of persons the committee believes to be identified with the Japanese government, but the form of the report on this material has not been determined.

Fort Kent, Me., Nov. 22 (CP)

IT WAS reported here today that Aircraftsman Elmer Johnson, Winnipeg, one of five Royal Canadien Air Force fliers who were sought after they parachuted from a bomber last Saturday, had been found near Blanchette's Camp, Que., just across the Maine border.

The flier was taken to Blanchette's Camp. His condition was said to be weak, but he was expected to recover.

It was not known here whether Johnson was the unnamed flier who was reported rescued last night and on his way today to St. Phamphile, Que.

Murray Assumes Lewis Cloak As C.I.O. Leader

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Nov. 22 (AP)—Philip Murray today was chosen president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations by acclamation. He succeeds John L. Lewis who retired after five years as president.

Lewis, stepping down as he promised he would do if President Roosevelt was re-elected, placed the Pittsburg labor leader's name before the convention as that of his choice as successor. Murray is an "industrial statesman" who has established a "brilliant record," Lewis said.

"For three decades he has contributed of his great energy to labor without self-consideration," Lewis said.

"He has served this Congress of Industrial Organizations and served it well as a leader, administrator and councillor, and as an industrial statesman."

Heavier Load Of Taxes On Its Way

Hints Greater Curb In Luxury Buying, New Loan In 1941

OTTAWA, Nov. 22—(CP).—Canada's policy for paying for the war effort continues to be based upon the belief that "inflation is the most unfair, the most uneconomical and the most dangerous of all methods" of war financing, according to Finance Minister Isley.

Addressing the House of Commons yesterday in the Throne Speech debate, Mr. Ilsley announced the next war loan would come in midsummer next year, and would be handled by a national co-operative organization similar to that which disposed of First Great War Victory Loans.

Meantime, he said, there would be some short-term financing early in 1941.

Taxation also would continue to be one of the major sources of revenue for war purposes. In this connection, the Minister said:

"Make no mistake about this. If we are really honest in demanding a war effort to the utmost we all must expect to be taxed until it hurts. Taxes that can comfortably be paid are not enough."

Mr. Ilsley was first speaker in the debate yesterday and was the only cabinet spokesman. He was given an attentive hearing and was interrupted only briefly when John Blackmore, leader of the New Democracy group challenged some of his statements on inflation and the issuance of debt free money.

The Minister told the House plainly that Canadians must be ready to make great sacrifices and great personal economies so more money could go into war savings and loans, and reduce their consumption of luxuries so labor and resources might be diverted more fully to war purposes.

Antonescu Hailed In Berlin, Next Ally

BERLIN, Nov. 22—(AP).—Rumania's Premier and Foreign Minister arrived today and immediately were received by Hitler for talks expected to lead to Rumanian adherence to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis.

The Rumanians, Gen. Ion Antonescu and Prince Costin Sturza, engaged in lengthy conversations with Hitler at the Chancellery, where they were accorded military honors by a Nazi guard before proceeding to Hitler's quarters.

The Rumanians will leave Berlin Sunday morning; President Joseph Tiso and Premier Bela Tuka of Slovakia are expected in Berlin the same day.

Bulgarian statesmen probably will confer with German diplomats in some German city Monday or Tuesday. King Boris of Bulgaria saw Hitler in the recent cycle of diplomatic visitors to Germany from Hungary, Soviet Russia, Italy and Spain.

If Rumania, Bulgaria and Slovakia should sign up in the military-political-economic alliance against any country which might join Britain or China in war, only three Balkan nations would remain outside the fold.

Young Doctor Is Called Up

History was made this morning when one of the trainees arriving at Exhibition Camp gave his occupation as medical practitioner and enquiry revealed he had graduated in medicine from Queens' University during the past summer.

The trainee is Dr. Joseph A. Robertson of Campbellford, who is practicing at Belleville with his uncle, Dr. Jack Robertson.

He is 23 years of age and was therefore eligible for the draft.

When the medical officers at the camp learned he was a doctor he was immediately drafted to the medical board and within a few minutes was busy with the stethoscope and throat light examining the other trainees as they came along. There was only five doctors on the board instead of the usual six this morning and the arrival of the trainee doctor rounded out the staff. Members of the permanent staff did all the documentation and took the eye tests.

Montreal Blast Kills One, Injures Two

MONTREAL, Nov. 22.—(CP). — Joseph Raymond, 41, was killed and two other men were injured today when three explosions wrecked part of the plant of Dominion Oilcloth and Linoleum in the east end of Montreal.

The injured men were Adrien Viau, 20, severe body burns, and Dosithe Lessard, skull fracture. Condition of the men, both of whom were rushed to hospital, was reported to be serious.

The explosions, which occurred in a cork mill, were believed to have been caused when cork dust was ignited by a spark. Firemen from nine stations eventually extinguished flames which broke out after the blasts.

The injured and dead all were employees of the plant. Raymond's charred body was found after the fire, which threatened for a time to engulf other buildings.

Lessard suffered a skull fracture when he leaped from a window of the third floor, where the blasts occurred. He apparently had been working with Raymond.

A fourth employee, Fred Murray, 61, suffered slight burns and injuries and also was taken to hospital.

Last Minute News

LONDON, Nov. 22—(CP).—Two German bombers were shot down over England today, an official announcement said, when Nazi raiders returned to the attack after having been smothered by bad weather last night. A village in the English Home Counties and a southeast coast town were struck by German bombs, the Air Ministry said, and some houses were damaged, "but the number of casualties was very small."

Salvage Crews Do Great Job

Often Refloat, Save Cargo Or Strip Torpedoed Ships

SOMEWHER ON THE ENGLISH COAST, Nov. 22.—(CP)—News of British shipping losses is not always as bad as it seems. When merchant ships are announced as victims of enemy action a proportion may live to sail another day—thanks to salvage experts of the Admiralty.

Whenever a vessel is mined, bombed or torpedoed near the British coast in a position which offers these tough, sea-going "wreckers" a sporting chance, they start to work.

They do so with three objects:

1. To refloat the vessel and bring her into port.

2. If the vessel can't be saved, to salvage as much of her cargo as possible.

3. If both vessel and cargo are beyond hope, to remove as much valuable scrap iron as possible.

In a surprisingly high proportion of vessels reported lost, valuable goods or material have been saved, even if the ship could not be salvaged. The most hopeful cases are dealt with first. Other wrecks, which offer ultimate hopes of success to the salvage men, although necessitating time and labor which might be better employed elsewhere, are surveyed and their particulars filed with a view to post-war salvage.

One wreck in this district, that of a ship which struck a mine, was a considerable distance off shore and lay in an exposed position. But the sea was calm and the salvage men went to work.

The cargo of cereals was removed with little difficulty and when dried and de-salted made excellent fodder. A temporary patch was put over the hole beneath the waterline where the mine had struck and the wreck was towed into port for dry-docking.

These sources said they were embarking on transports at Tienstin and Tsingtao for undisclosed destinations but were believed to be headed south toward the Japanese island of Formosa and the Japanese-occupied island of Hainan off the China coast.

Plane Makers They Can't Stop

Bombed Out 3rd Time Kai-Shek's American Staff Start Again

PAWLEYVILLE, (Loiwing) China-Burma Border, Nov. 22—(AP).—Japanese bombs have checked but not ended a seven-year successful effort to build warplanes in China for the Nationalists of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

Japanese planes flew 600 miles across the mountains of French Indo-China, and trespassed British Burma, October 26, to blast China's only aircraft manufacturers from their plant. They killed or wounded 70 Chinese workers and drove from their homes 40 Americans and 3,500 Chinese from this modern town, which the American Intercontinent Corporation created in this remote valley in the southwesternmost corner of China.

Plant Manager C. W. Hunter, of Enid, Okla., and his staff—working day and night under the constant fear that bombers would return—have progressed so far toward salvaging the unreplaceable equipment and materials from the battered buildings that they are prepared to reassemble again in mat sheds scattered among the bamboo groves to avoid again presenting an easy target.

American staff men are rushing the building of straw shacks to house their families on the hillsides across the Burma border, where the disassembled plant machinery is sheltered beneath the trees.

When they were bombed from the first plant at Hangchow in the early days of the Chinece-Japanese War they moved 450 miles up the Yangtse to Hankow and there manufactured new planes and patched air casualties that helped the Chinese slow the Japanese westward drive until Chiang Kai-Shek established his base at Chungking.

Giant U.S. Bombers To Be Used In Crushing Raids

LONDON, Nov. 22 (CP)—Embattled Britain, heartened by her King's report of increasing air aid from the United States, mapped new aerial strikes against Germany and Italy today.

The speech from the throne at the opening of a new session of Parliament yesterday declared munitions and supplies from the United States were arriving in "ever increasing volume"; and the Royal Air Force left little doubt that 26 powerful United States army bombers, soon to be delivered, would be in the van of the new forays against the Axis.

R.A.F. officer said the big four-motored craft also might be used for the nightly bombing "ferry service" to Berlin and added that all the signs point to an early opening of widespread air war on Italy, with the comment that the United States-made aircraft "are the babies to do it with."

Municipalities in question have been rehabilitated financially and are now well able to take care of themselves with reasonable supervision from the Government. With the Federal measure on unemployment insurance, unemployment relief so far as employable are concerned cannot be a pressing problem.

Mr. Hipel and Mr. McQuesten, the Premier said, will attend the Dominion - Provincial conference called by Premier King on the Sirois Report, and by that time will have familiarized themselves with the departments concerned.

Mr. Hepburn paid tribute to Mr. Cross and his associates for their parts in handling relief and rehabilitating the financial structure of certain municipalities.

Mr. Cross announced late yesterday he had given his resignation to Premier Hepburn, effective January 1, but that he would retain his seat as member for Haldimand-Norfolk. Business reasons were given for his decision; which coincided with the enlistment of his law partner in Simcoe, Lt. E. H. A. Carson, in the Royal Canadian Artillery.

Travellers from Hong Kong, at the same time, reported sighting five Japanese transports off the mouth of the Yangtse river, apparently carrying soldiers withdrawn from Yangtse garrison cities.

William Hanker, spokesman for Local No. 2 of the Aluminum Workers' Union, which called the strike, said both the union and the company "hated to see the defence program treated this way." The company said the strike was "not justified."

Hanker, referring to the reason for the walkout, said the company refused to discharge a mill worker who brandished a knife and threatened Tom Davis, chairman of the local's sheet mill committee, when Davis demanded that he pay up back dues.

The C.I.O. spokesman said more than 1,000 members of the union voted to strike early today after the company declined to dismiss the employee.

Through the night and morning company and union heads conferred in an attempt to reach an agreement.

Hanker said the mill worker in the dues' dispute had not paid his dollar-a-month fee for more than a year.

Dirty Weather Smothers Hun Night Raids

LONDON, Nov. 22—(CP). — Bad weather was credited by Britain today with smothering the nightly Axis air assault on Britain after a violent beginning in which the Midlands and a great western port were the principal targets.

As a result, the night was described as one of the quietest the island has had this month.

At least two towns in the Midlands were attacked in the early part of the night. Liverpool had two short raids. London also had two alerts during the night, the first ending around midnight and the other shortly after dawn, but Londoners heard no activity save the slam of British guns.

Some raiders harassed the northwest, southwest and Midland areas, but few untoward incidents were reported and the Government said the raiding activity was widespread but "on a small scale."

Most bombs were reported to have fallen in rural areas, causing no damage. A communique asserted "very few casualties have been reported."

noon, and a short time later it was spread to the public by the newspapers.

Crowds marched through the city's streets, cheering Premier John Metaxas was given a great ovation when he paused on the steps of army headquarters and announced the news to hundreds gathered before the building.

There were no details of the fate of the Italian forces which defended Koritza, but it was reported that a large number were captured.

Bombers Chase Italians

BITOLJ, Yugoslavia, Nov. 22 — (AP)—Greek and British warplanes, following up the capture of the Italian base at Koritza, harassed Italians retreating westward today with bombing and machine-gunning attacks.

The Italians themselves sent over waves of planes to pound Koritza in an effort to slow up the Greek ground forces smashing at the heels of the Fascists. These attacks started a few hours after the Greeks marched into the town, 10 miles from the Greek frontier.

One low-flying British squadron, blasting an Italian column headed toward Elbasani, in Central Albania, was reported to have lost one craft, shot down in anti-aircraft fire.

Information reaching the Yugoslav border said the first Greek troops moved into Koritza at 5 a.m. today, followed four hours later by their main forces led by blaring bands.

A considerable amount of war material was declared to have fallen into Greek hands, although the border advices said the Italians managed to get out most of their stores.

Rome Admits It

ROME, Nov. 22 (AP)—Italy acknowledged today the loss of Koritza, base in southern Albania from which the Italian army launched its invasion of Greece 25 days ago.

Eleven days of bitter fighting in which Italian losses were "considerable" proceeded abandonment of the city, 10 miles inside Albania, the high command said. Its communique gave this account:—

"Our protective troops formed by two divisions which took up defensive positions on the Greek-Albanian frontier at Koritza at the beginning of the war have withdrawn after 11 days' fighting to a line west of the city, which has been evacuated.

"During this period bitter fighting took place. Our losses were considerable. Those of the enemy were equally so, perhaps heavier.

So swiftly and so deeply were the Greeks said to have followed the receding wave of Italian invasion that their trucks could not keep up in the Albanian wilderness and Greek and British planes dropped food to the Greek vanguards.

The Greeks said their forces were at the gates of Koritza, Italian base 10 miles inside Albania, and were forging ahead against weak opposition toward Argirocastro, about 30 miles from Porto Edda on the Adriatic.

Aerial observers reported the Italians were abandoning Koritza along roads covered by Greek mountain guns and other reports said Italian resistance from Argirocastro was so shattered the advancing Greeks were unopposed. The collapse was attributed to several demoralizing breaks through the southern front.

War Booty Grows.

At both these menaced centres the Italians had amassed huge stores of supplies for their armies.

"All over the front, fighting continued throughout the day and our troops scored further successes," a general headquarters communique early today described yesterday's action.

"We took 13 guns, of which seven were heavy artillery pieces, four anti-aircraft guns, dozens of machine-guns, many howitzers and all kinds of material, also foodstuffs and fuel depots.

A government spokesman emphasized that the Greek offensive was no pell-mell chase but a methodical advance. He said it was being pressed cautiously on a pre-determined plan and that the Greeks were wary not to let themselves be drawn out too far.

Anna C. Minch Went Down After Collision

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Nov. 22—(CP)—A report from a diver who inspected the hulk of the Canadian freighter Anna C. Minch, lost during a heavy storm on Lake Michigan during a heavy storm on Lake Michigan Nov. 11 and 12 with 21 lives, indicates that the vessel sank following a collision.

The diver reported to the Sarnia Steamships Ltd., operators of the Minch, that he found a hole 20 feet square in the side of the vessel, which rests in 40 feet of water, 400 yards from shore near the pier at Pentwater, Mich.

It was suggested here that the Minch might have been engaged in rescuing the crew of another ship when the heavy seas carried the first stricken vessel into the side of the Minch.

Daylight Time Extension Seen

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—(CP)—The possibility that daylight-saving time might be extended in Canada beyond the municipalities which adopted it for the summer in Ontario and Quebec and later were ordered to continue it, was seen yesterday in the remarks of a spokesman at the Munitions and Supply Department.

"It is liable to be extended to any part of the country where war industry demands power curtailment," said the Munitions Department source.

H. J. Symington, Power Controller, under whom the plan was initiated of continuing daylight-saving time in Ontario municipalities which adopted it during the summer, said there was no question of abandoning daylight-saving time in these areas.

"It will last for the duration of the war," he said.

Councils Seeks Bonus On Top Grade Hogs

The County Council's reaction to the new contract for supplying bacon to the British market was expressing this morning in a resolution proposing that the Dominion Government pay a bonus of two cents a pound on top grade hogs.

The resolution by Reeve J. Gifford, seconded by Reeve M. H. Johnston, was as follows:

"Whereas the present price of dressed hogs for export is unsatisfactory to Ontario farmers, particularly in view of the increasing cost of millfeeds, concentrates, labor, machinery and other items which must be bought by farmers and which increase the cost of production to a point where hog raising can be continued only at a loss on most farmers:

Be it resolved, that in order to deliver to the United Kingdom the required quantity of bacon of a quality desired which should retain for Canadian farmers a market after the war, the Dominion Government be urged to provide at once as follows:

(1) A premium of two cents a pound be paid for the highest grade carcases (A-1 sizable) according to the standards established by the Bacon Board, and a premium of one cent a pound be paid for other A-grade carcases.

(2) The Dominion Government should pay this premium out of the consolidated revenue fund of the Dominion.

(3) Light, heavy or off-type hogs should be sold through the domestic trade in Canada at proportionately lower prices than the higher quality product.

Also that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture and to the Ontario Federation of Agriculture."

Reeve W. A. Anderson said premiums received by hog producers have been paid by the packers who simply diverted that money from low grade hogs. The resolution transferred the source of the premium or bonus to the source from which it should come, the Dominion treasury. It proposed the form of payment which the Government had adopted in bonusing the cheese industry. The hog premium has never been satisfactory, Reeve Anderson said. "The present time, so critical in the affairs of Canada, should be easy appeal to the Government to do this. Bacon is one of the few outlets for Canadian farm produce today. Without a market for hogs, where could we sell our grain?"

Mr. Anderson said he hoped the Ontario Federation of Agriculture "will take hold of this" at their meeting next week.

Reeve Johnston said he hoped Peterborough farmers would be well represented at Federation meeting in Toronto next Tuesday, and also that cream patrons and hog producers would become organized and join the Federation in this county. He and Deputy-reeve McIlmoyle said that farmers were willing to do their part to win the war against Germany, but they should be given some consideration in earning adequate income to do their part.

Mr. Gifford said he had heard that the price of butter was to be pegged at 27 or 28 cents, a price that was out of line with dairy costs and with the increased earnings of other groups of workers. "All we are asking is that any pegged price, if it has to be pegged, should be more reasonable in its effect on our farmers."

Old Age Pensions

The Council's resolution on old age pensions was unanimously carried by the Council this morning. It was moved by Reeve Gifford and seconded by Reeve E. Seeney, Havelock:

"That the County Council of the County of Peterborough make request to the Government of the Province of Ontario that hereafter the Old Age Pension be made payable at the age of seventy years without regard to the financial necessity or condition of the recipient thereof.

That this Council is of opinion that by so doing the many abuses that are known to exist under the present system would disappear and the thrifty aged would cease to be penalized for the exercise of thrift in their younger and more active life, and at the same time the cost of administration would be greatly diminished.

That the county councils of the Province be asked to pass similar resolutions, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Hon. Mitchell Hepburn, the Premier of Ontario."

$100,000 Grimsby Factory Burns

GRIMSBY, Ont., Nov. 22,—(CP)—Damage that may total $100,000 was caused early today when fire of undetermined origin destroyed the manufacturing section and veneer storage building of the Merritt Bros. basket factory here. As daylight came firemen were still pouring water on the smouldering ruins.

Nearby buildings were endangered as sparks and flaming pieces of wood were carried by a high wind. Men were stationed on the roofs of adjoining structures with buckets of water to douse the incipient fires.

The fire department quickly responded to the call but the blaze had made great progress before it was discovered. The fire apparently started on the second floor while the night watchman was on the ground floor and the first warning was when he saw sparks falling.

Fire Chief Alfred LePage had a narrow escape from injury as a heavy piece of cement fell from the wall nearby and a falling girder clipped the front of his helmet.

Another French Warship Quits?

ALGECIRAS, Spain, Nov. 22 (AP)—Naval sources speculated today on the identity of a French battleship which was reported to have surrendered to the British authorities at Gibraltar last night.

Reports reaching here said the vessel was one of the 22,189-ton Paris class, of which France had two at the outbreak of the war, the Paris and the Corbet.

(London naval sources said they had no information on the reported surrender).

A possibility existed that the warship had been incorrectly identified—if a surrender had taken place—or that no surrender was involved, the Free French forces instead making use of a French battleship already in their hands.

The only completed and seaworthy French battleship remaining at large after the British attack on the French fleet at Oran, Algeria, July 4 was the 26,500-ton Strasbourg, which escaped to Toulon.

Three other battleships — the Paris, Courbet and Lorraine—were reported to have fallen into British hands after the French-German armistice.

Chinese People Are United Against Enemy

Ultimate victory for China, was the prophecy of S. C. Leung, M.A., General Secretary of the National Y.M.C.A. Council in China, in an address to the members of the Y's Men's Club, in the Y.M.C.A. last night.

Mr. Leung was born in China, of Christian Chinese parents; he was educated in a mission school, and later in the Chicago Y.M.C.A. College, and Nashville University. He is particularly well qualified to talk on conditions in China, because he was there only ten weeks ago.

Beginning, the speaker voiced China's confidence, in spite of the blockade, the destruction of railways, and the capture of most of the sea ports by the enemy, the Japanese. The people are confident, he said, but he isn't satisfied with what might be called wishful thinking, and there are many good reasons to point to, proofs that the hopes of the Chinese, and their beliefs in this direction are not without foundation.

Country United

The first reason given by the speaker was the unit with which China finds herself endowed at present. The outside world had heard much of civil war, and of war lords in China before the war, but today there is no sign of internal disagreement. Today all is unity, political men, formerly at odds, have shelved their differences, and one object is before all, the war effort.

The people of China have learned the truth of a phrase, which has been established by time as an axiom. "A house divided against itself will not stand," and the Chinese have decided with determination that they shall stand—together.

Learned How To Suffer

The second of the reasons is that China has learned how to suffer; China like London, can take it. Past years of strife and national calamity have shown the people that there is a right and a wrong way to suffer, and they have chosen the one consistent with their creed, the right way. Even amongst the ones that have been most pushed around, the refugees, there is not a word of complaint to be heard. The people, when under fire, and being bombed, show a sense of impatience rather than fright or bewilderment. Such a spirit cannot be crushed by terrorism, the speaker, said, and added that the party that could endure the longest would win.

The eagerness, on the part of the Chinese youth to serve, is the third reason, Mr. Leung said. The Boy Scouts have been particularly fine, and to see them in their self-appointed duties, such as caring for the stricken in air raids, is nothing short of inspirational.

40,000 In Colleges

It is the policy of the government to carry on with the schools, and although some of the young men in the country have come to regard education as a luxury in time of war, there is an enrollment of 40,000 in the various colleges and universities. One university calls itself the Resist Japan University, and although it is not a university in the usually accepted sense of the word, it is doing a great work in the national program. Here the students learn, with a system, how to fight the enemy, to fight on the front, behind the Japanese lines, or to fight wherever they can, even if not an actual active service. The enrollment in this one school is 7,000, and all in it are forced to subject themselves to severe hardships, and to endure many sacrifices.

The fact that the government is laying the emphasis on construction provides Mr. Leung with his fourth reason for the national conference.

Plans for the economic development of the country have been laid by the governing body, and although the speaker admitted that plans are always more impressive than are achievements, he said wonderful work has been and is being done. The fact that the Burma Road was not in existence before the war was used as an illustration of the progress being made. New railroads have been built, and others are in process of being built, he said.

Industrial Co-operative.

The Chinese Industrial Co-operative has come into being as one of the greatest agents in China's fight. Through its efforts many of the skilled refugees from the coast have been absorbed by industry, and many of the commodities that have hitherto been imported, are now made in China. This has an advantage from the time angle, and, of course, conserves the finances of the country.

Some of the factors in the social life of China that have been considered as being detrimental, have at last proven an actual benefit. The large family system, the speaker said, has always had an adverse effect on the country's peacetime status, but in the war acts as what might be called a safety valve, and many of the refugees that would ordinarily be cast upon the country's relief roll, have found shelter with relatives.

The Yellow River has often been referred to as "China's Sorrow," and now is playing an important part in China's defence. To a great extent it is holding the invader back.

Echoing words of another man familiar with the China of to-day, Dr. Robert McClure, former Field Director of the International Red Cross in China, Mr. Leung said that the Chinese are at a most impressionable stage. He pointed to the excellent work being done by the Y.M.C.A. in "making China worthy of the ultimate victory that shall be hers." The door is open in China to the Y.M.C.A. and to Christianity. Canada and the United States of America have both been more than generous, he said. Missionary societies have recognized the worth of the Association, and have offered to finance ventures that would be executed by it.

Efforts Bearing Fruit.

The Association has accepted many responsibilities in China, the speaker said, and their efforts are bearing fruit to a degree that is most gratifying. Might is not right, faith in God will restore China's standing, he said, and spoke of the Brotherhood of Nations. The Chinese are being educated in the direction of being generous, they are being taugh not to harbor hatred toward their enemy, and, said Mr. Leung, "China will win."

The speaker was introduced by the president of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A., Charles Lacheur, and Dr. A. Moir moved a vote of thanks.

The meeting was exceptionally well attended, and members of the board of directors were present, as well as many other visitors.

Wed To Nazi?

Industrial Safety Factor Important Care Of The Foreman

As a practical psychologist, Vincent G. Pendleton, safety engineer of the Lynn, Mass., branch of the General Electric Company, obviously knows what it is all about, to use the kind of phrase in which, from his talk at the Collegiate Institute Thursday night on factory and general industrial safety, if indeed he would have adopted such a pretentious expression in his racy, debunking maner of address.

The subject of his talk to about four hundred factory employees, foremen and executives was "Seven Keys to Safety Foremanship," and adopting the objective method, indispensible in elementary teaching, he held up a large ring on which he had strung seven keys. And he named them off, one after the other, until he came to the last one "safety," and with a flourishing gesture he flung it off into one of the front corners of the auditorium.

"There goes the actor of safety," his action bluntly told his audience as he was illustrating the neglect of safety in the attitude and policy of the kind of foreman who, according to the Pendleton estimation, is a big detriment to industry and is on its way out, with eventual disappearance within the next ten years.

The clinching effectiveness in that arresting bit of business was the question it left in suspension; who is going to pick up that key of safety? It seemed to remain as a challenge and reminder to every employee and foreman and executive who heard Mr. Pendleton's interesting and thoughtful address. In his own words he put the essential factor of shop safety "in the lap of foremanship." For the foreman who is actuated only by ambition to the disregard of the human element of the body of employees of whom he has charge; Mr. Pendleton expressed superlative scorn.

"And when that fellow finally gets the apple (of success) around about my age in his fifties) he has got to go to Dale Carnegie and pay him $200 to be taught how to be human. The foreman who is indifferent about his men costs the company more money than his carcass is worth. In the next ten years there won't be any place in industry for the indifferent foreman."

The keys of foremanship which Mr. Pendleton held up his audience were production, the chief purpose of an industry; quality; control of output; waste and spoilage, discipline, house-keeping, meaning the clean and orderly shop premises, and finally safety.

Toll Of Accidents.

The growing necessity of spreading the idea of safety, Mr. Pendleton said, was sharply reflected in the 93,000 persons fatally injured in the United States last year, of 15,500 died from industrial accidents.

Safety work and propaganda is just eighty-five per cent. commonsense, and its successful application was manefested by the General Electric record of one lost-time accident in 5,000,000 hours this year, and that accident should not have happened. There were also only three last year and three in 1938.

Forty-eight per cent. of the accidents in Canada, Mr. Pendleton suggested, were due to lack of skill and fifteen per cent. to lack of information.

In his appeal to foremen to understand the human phase of their responsibility, Mr. Pendleton said it took twenty-one years to make a man, a priceless being, who deserved the attention of his foreman. The fact of 8,000 men a month in Canada suffering accidents was to a considerable extent due to the fact that Canada was working under a great pressure. "You are participating in the war, and so should we, if we only had sense enough."

Certificates Presented.

Preceding Mr. Pendleton's address two groups of employees were presented with certificates and diplomas representing their progress and attainment in St. John Ambulance first aid service.

Twenty-seven men of the Western Clock Company, completing their first year of study in this work, were presented with certificates by J. H. Vernor, general manager of the plant, as follows:

R. H. Simmons, S. Payne, R. Kitchen, R. Maniece, F. Stevens, C. Ferguson, K. Campbell, R. C. Simmons, M. Gilbert, H. Hawley, M. Pomeroy, J. Watters, M. Clysdale, D. Wyatt, Wm. Smith, J. Sadler, J. Wyllie, J. Watson, A. Knott, G. Wyatt, H. Benson, G. Schwab, A. Ebbs, K. Jaquith, R. Curry, F. Meeks, F. Pope.

C.G.E. Group.

First, second and third year men comprised the first aid group of the Canadian General Electric Company who received their awards from Wm C. English, mechanical supervisor.

William H. Curtis received his medallion March 15, this year, on completion of his third year in the St. John Ambulance course. On July 6 he enlisted with the C.A.S.F. and because of the knowledge he gained from the St. John Ambulance practice he was attached to the Medical Corps of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders. In the course of six weeks or so he was promoted to Medical Corporal, and was recently made Sergeant, Mr. English said.

Alex. DeMaio passed his second year examination, and was to have received his certificate last night. He is serving with the C.A.S.F. in England.

Those who received second year certificates were: Carl S. Milheron, Percy S. Killingbeck, Aylmer A. Moore, Arthur F. Morris, Otto M. Mackey, Victor E. Smith, Ernest W. Cooper, Francis W. Masson, Ivan C. Cunningham.

Lions' Club Has Visit From Governor

A highly successful Ladies' Night was held at the Kawartha Club Thursday evening by the local Lions' club and the feature on the interesting program was a talk by the recently elected District Governor, Clifford Cotter of Ottawa.

About sixty people sat down to the banquet, and at the conclusion of the program, everyone enjoyed dancing until midnight.

J. J. Brown of Bowmanville, Past District Governor introduced the speaker of the evening, and the latter prefaced his talk with words of congratulation to the local club for their many successful service efforts.

"The value of any service organization may be fairly measured by the number and quality of the service it performs. Since its inception on the basis of service, the International Lions Association has always before it, the goal of individual betterment and social improvement.

Broad Scope of Activity

"No other agency has the broad scope of activity that the Lions' Club exercises. Its activities cover many phases, its field of activities knows no bounds or limitations. It has over 20,000 worth-while activities. The primary function of a Lions Club is to supply a community with leadership which in turn senses a community need, prescribe the remedy and either in cooperation with existing agencies or independently raise the funds and get the job done.

"We have a membership of 143,000, a great fraternity without selfishness and a great fraternity without exclusiveness. It is the opportunity for these men to give, to help the blind, the underprivileged and to do the unselfish things, to promote the theory and practise the principles of good government and good citizenship.

Lionism Marches With Canada

"Canada is on the march today, side by side with her battle-clad warriors and I imagine I can see the banner of Lionism floating over them, and on which is inscribed our slogan "Liberty, Intelligence and Our Nation's Safety."

"We are now living under a tremendous threat, face to face with the grim force of purpose, implemented by machines, bent upon the destruction of our civilization. It can be fought but only with a strong will. Our destiny is bound up without individual resourcefulness and initiative.

Mr. Cotter went on to sketch the remarkable growth of Lionism in Canada and he spoke plainly on the necessity for all club members to throw themselves whole-heartedly into the war program, if not on active service then in every effort that will tend to prosecute Canada's effort more diligently.

A vote of thanks, beautifully handled was voiced by the Rev. William Smith of Port Perry, and conveyed to the speaker by Herb Jamieson, president of the Peterborough Club.

The toast to the Ladies was appropriately given by Lion Tony Johnston, and following the toast, Mrs. Fred Cripps spoke in reply.

The entertainment of the evening during the banquet was provided by James MacDonald, field marshall of the Institute for the Blind. He sang two numbers, "DryThose Tears" and "Two Bright Eyes" with Jack Marshall playing the accompaniment.

Exposure Causes Death

BANFF, Alta., Nov. 22—(CP). — The body of Bevan Ashton, about 68, chiropractor and owner of the Banff Upper Hot Springs Hotel, was found in snow-covered bushland here yesterday and investigators said death was due to exposure. He had been missing since Monday. While travelling from his downtown office to the hotel, it was believed Ashton's car ran into the ditch and that he began walking to town through bush and became lost.

It Is Not Yet Clear

There is no way of knowing how much importance to attach to Hungary becoming a partner of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis. The nation is a land-locked thing, rather small. Situated where it is there was no chance for the people or the government of Hungary to do much about it. Whether the placing of the official signature on the dotted line was one of free will or compulsion is not known.

But Germany has developed a species of showmanship which does not miss a chance. That is why there was the gathering in Vienna, and that is why Hitler took time out to attend in person. An incident was turned into a great occasion.

It may be a fact that the move was made necessary by the failure of the Italians to go right through Greece and reach the Aegean Sea. That is what was planned, and that is what the Italians undertook to do, and that is also what they failed to accomplish. So it became necessary to get at Greece in some other way. If Bulgaria can be scooped up as readily as Hungary, then the way is clear from Germany clear through to the border of Greece.

There are those who are certain Russia has agreed to the move, but as usual there is nothing to prove it. Not a thing. There are going to be hard days ahead for the British in defending the Suez and fighting the battle at home. Britain is well aware of that, and if Turkey is influenced by Russia to stay out of the war there will be difficult situation right there.

We Must Change Our Ways

When a shopper goes into a store it is seldom that inquiry is made regarding the country in which the goods are made. Woven fabrics are just that; cotton is cotton and towels are towels.

It is strange and also utterly wrong that since 1937 we have been increasing our purchases of goods made in Japan and decreasing our purchases of goods made in Britain. That holds good regarding cotton towels, cotton sheets, quilts and counterpanes, cotton handkerchiefs, woven fabrics and cotton flannels, sheetings and pillow cotton. In this last-named list the figures tell the story:

	United Kingdom.	Japan
1937	404,502	3,351
1939	242,519	300,519

We are primarily concerned about the financing of our share in the war, and if we want to be completely honest it is necessary to admit that it is of equal—or greater—importance to us how Britain is going to keep on spending money unless there is money going into that country by way of the price paid for British goods.

Britain has sent out its second call for holders of United States securities to get rid of them. The government will buy them at a price set by the government. That in turn will provide means of securing American funds, but it is a method which cannot be continued indefinitely.

There is actually no substitute known for export trade during years of war. The Manchester Guardian stated the case plainly in these words:

"We can win the war only if we can pay for it by our exports after all our other resources in gold, foreign securities and services have been exhausted. Exports, therefore, can be counted as munitions of war."

And looking at it that way we have been providing Japan with munitions of war rather than Britain.

So there is one way where the customer can make a contribution to Britain's munitions of war. Where it comes to the purchase of imported goods, be certain they are made in Britain.

Admittedly there is nothing spectacular about such a thing. You just pay your money and walk out with the British goods, and people might be inclined to smile if you said you were helping Britain win the war. But according to the estimate of the very reliable Manchester Guardian, your purchase of British exported goods is counted as munitions of war. Now then see to it.

He Blames Ontario

Clarence Gillis, M.P. for Cape Breton South, is certain his section of the Dominion is being bled white for the benefit of Ontario. He said so when speaking in the House of Commons.

At the turn of the century the Maritime provinces had a combined population of 893,000, while in 1939 they were credited with 1,100,000, or an increase of 23.13 per cent.

In the same period the population of Ontario went from 2,183,000 in 1901 to 3,752,000 in 1939, and that is an increase of 71.87 per cent. So it is a fact that as far as population goes this province has much exceeded the Maritimes.

Mr. Gillis presented a list of banking houses which were in Nova Scotia fifty years ago, "all owned, organized and directed by Nova Scotians, who loaned money for the doing of Nova Scotia business":

The Merchants Bank
The Bank of Nova Scotia
The Halifax Banking Company
The Bank of Yarmouth
The Commercial Bank of Windsor
The Union Bank of Halifax.

The member from Cape Breton claimed that through amalgamations all these banks and their assets went west to Toronto, and today the money is loaned to Ontario industries. He is correct about the amalgamations and the movings, but one does not necessarily go to the head office of a bank to transact business. An industrialist in Nova Scotia can borrow from his bank just as well as one in Ontario.

The manner in which enterprise had left the country was stated this way:

"When steam supplanted sails Nova Scotia had: A cotton mill at Halifax and one at Windsor; a paint work at Halifax, three tobacco factories, four or five shoe factories, two soap factories, several woollen mills, a big cheese factory at Antigonish which won the prize at Chicago World Fair, a condensed milk factory at Truro. All these have been mergered out of Nova Scotia."

We have no reason to doubt the truth of that statement. The Maritimes did not profit much from Confederation. Population and business found its way to Toronto and Montreal; the plan which gathered in a number of lesser factories and brought them under one control reached out and included those in the Maritimes.

But the Maritimes for purposes of government should not seek to maintain three organizations. Prince Edward Island, for instance, has a population of 95,000, which can be regarded as a fair-sized city, and yet apart from its municipal governments, there is a legislature of 13 councilmen and 15 assemblymen; there is a premier and ministers of Public Works and Highways, Education and Public Health, Agriculture, and five who have the title of "Hon." but without portfolio. Then there is the Lieut.-Governor and the court and judges. All that for a population of 95,000.

And yet we doubt if the Maritimes would of their own free will seriously consider the business of amalgamation. Our belief is they would oppose it. If they want to present their case well and strengthen their fences it would be wise for them to come together. We are willing to concede their claim that they have not done particularly well since Confederation, but they would be exhibiting good judgment if they were to move for an amalgamation of public services and the business of government. It would cost them less money and the amalgamated governing body could then speak with a louder voice.

As It Was On The Tenth

The editor of the Elora Express has made a discovery. He claims to know why it is that the fowl supper in so many churches has become a thing of the past. Just this: The price of chickens has gone up to such a point that there is no profit in taking them down to the church and feeding them to expectant customers at less than the cost of production. The Elora editor says he has been told that in the "happy past a brace of plump chickens could be had for a dollar or less."

And that's right enough. We recall when the milkman used to bring around a chicken on Saturday and the price was 25 cents. His milk was five cents per quart and bread was five cents a loaf. But the editor is wrong when he contends that nice plump chickens used to participate in the annual fowl supper.

At least it was not done that way on the Tenth Concession where each and every fall saw a fowl supper at the church at the corner of the Broken Front Road, and each early summer saw a strawberry festival at the same place.

We can't claim that we ever had a vote in the deliberations of the Committee of Selection. (We suppose today it would be referred to as a Draft Committee or the Electoral College). The hired man and grandfather had a good deal to do with the matter, but they were governed by the advice they received from the women in the house.

The chickens were going to leave Lot Four for a good purpose; they were going to help finance the work of the church and bring about a state of affairs where there would be a slight balance on the right side when the financial report was read at the annual meeting.

Even so there were certain hard and fast rules, facts or considerations which had to come to the front. The pullets never were in danger. About this time of year they were just starting to get on to the hang of things in laying eggs. They had not progressed to the stage where they knew how to pad them out or fill them up but they were learning and giving promise.

Then there were the hens which had come through their spell of moulting in good shape. Their combs were starting to red up and even the feathers along the back were filling in well, and they looked as though in a few days they would even out and get down to business. Such hens might get a warning look from the Committee of Selection, but in the end they passed them by. There were too many prospective eggs in them to be sacrificed on the altar of religious maintenance.

Truth is the choice narrowed down to the hens which had ceased to be much interested in their appearance, and the production of eggs was something which they were willing to deputize to others. When they moulted they stayed moulted for a long time. Old age was riding upon them, and going down to the fowl supper was considered as a fitting climax for their years of faithful service in the farm yard. The Elora editor may think he happened upon a great discovery when he spoke of the plump chickens of other years going to the fowl supper. Who told him that we don't know, but we are certain the method was foreign to the custom of the Tenth Concession.

A Sensible Step

New models are out. And that applies to automobiles, railway cars, bicycles, radios, washing machines, refrigerators and other household equipment. The Machine Tool Controller at Ottawa has made that order.

He wants the machine tool capacity of the country reserved for the production of war material, and he desires that highly skilled men shall turn their energies to the serious business of war.

There may be some who will object to it, but in the main it seems right and proper. It will give no one firm any undue advantage over another as they all come under the same ruling and at the same time.

It does not mean that the articles named shall no longer be manufactured; merely that existing models or designs shall remain in effect. We will get along very well that way.

NOTE AND COMMENT

That strange old custom of nominating people for public office refuses to perish. London, Ont., nominated 15 for mayor and three will run.

Member of the provincial legislature from Carleton was fined ten and costs in Ottawa for speeding. It may be he desired to hastily withdraw from the place.

Father and son from Penbroke took 27,000,000 bees south for the winter so they could produce there during our winter. It's a nice plan particularly for the father and son.

Reading of a man being killed at Niagara Falls takes on larger and more tragic size when one comes upon the information that he was the father of ten children.

Coins found in Spain bear the date 1350, and that was during the reign of "Pedro the Cruel," being a rather unlovely name to hand down to posterity and history.

Two million turkeys were killed in the recent snowstorms in the States, and with two Thanksgiving dates in the offing the turkey population would be well advised to seek a place in the raid shelter.

SILENCE

(By A.R.K.)

¶ My neighbor reads such heavy books, I really do not like their looks, I really think they're dry; they'd never keep a man awake, or puzzle at the turn they'd take, or make him bulge an eye.

¶ He reads inflation much I know, piles up big figures row on row, he sees new millions born; our monetary system's bad, it seems to make my neighbor sad, he's working for reform.

¶ So when he comes to call on me, it's very plain for me to see, he has some heavy stuff; he settles well within a chair, and then proceeds with studied air, his voice is rather gruff.

¶ He starts back in the barter days, when people traded pigs for sleighs, his figures then grow tall; he's satisfied that he can show, how scheming men wax fat and grow, until they've cornered all.

¶ He moves then to the credit scheme, he shakes a finger long and lean, he argues till I quake; I know he keeps his eye on me, so he can look and plainly see, if I am still awake.

¶ I do not argue with the man, I work upon a studied plan, nor with him stage a fight; for if I argued well I know, he'd never take his hat and go—he'd lecture me all night.

Why Has Japan Moved Troops In Chinese Area?

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Japan's abandonment of a considerable southern Chinese are which the Mikado's troops had previously occupied is a development in the Asiatic war of much interest to the state department's division of Far Eastern affairs. What does it mean? That the Japs are getting the worst of the fighting? That's what U.S. Far Eastern experts are wondering. As yet they are uncertain.

Gen. Kai-Shek

The departmental division of Near Eastern affairs is equally interested in the slow start Italy got off to in its campaign against Greece. The division's impression was that the Fascist invasion would be, from the jump, a walk-over.

Tokyo's account is that Nippon merely is moving its forces in China to new positions, where they can operate more handily. Another story is that they're being conveniently assembled for a descent upon Britain's strong base of Singapore.

The Chinese version, however, is that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's men actualy have chased the enemy out of Kwangsi province and now are getting them on the run in adjoining province of Kwangtung.

Whenever you encounter the syllable "si" in a Chinese name you know that that place is west of somewhere or other. And "tung" means east of somewhere. For instance, Shansi province is west of a certain range of mountains in northern China. "Shan" means mountains. And Shantung province is east of the same range. But Kwangsi and Kwangtung provinces are away to the southward. "Pe" signifies north, "Nan" south and "king" capital. Thus Peking was China's northern capital; Nanking its southern one. I'm not fluent enough in Chinese to translate "kwang," but "si" and "tung" are as plain as print to me.

JAPAN WEAKENING?

WHEN a Chinaman wants to say "Git out!" to an intruder, he employs the term "Chuh!" Its literal meaning is "Scatter!" Seemingly they're saying "Chuh!" to the Japs at present.

Maybe the islanders are truthful in their contention that they simply are making a few strategic rearrangements, but a pretty strong hunch here here is that they're getting dangerously close to the bottom of their resources and can't maintain their luck much longer.

They give the Greeks credit for being formidable scrapers and, in that respect, they don't rate the Italians very highly. Nevertheless, the Greeks are so heavily outnumbered and so under-equipped that experts surmise they can't last long.

All the same, the U.S. departmental Near Eastern division expected the Fascists to drive right across the northern Hellenese border in short order and they failed to do it. In fact, Rome itself has to admit as much. Its excuse is that its forces were delayed at the outset by bad weather and worse roads over the mountains. The theory here, though, is that they might have foreseen these handicaps and provided for discounting them.

The conclusion is that Signor Mussolini isn't as competent a blitzkrieger as Herr Hitler.

Still, it's predicted that, in the long run, Italy's superior weight will count. Besides, if it doesn't, it's the consensus that Herr Hitler will have to lend Germain aid to his Axis partner. The Germans, indeed, are known to have a poor opinion of Italy's military prowess and it's presumed that they must be chuckling at Benito's initial discomfiture, but, in their own interest, they can't afford to have it continue indefinitely.

TURKEY MAY BE TOUGH

THAT holds as to Greece. But the Axis' next step will have to be into Turkey, on its way to Suez. And it's guessed that the Turks will prove to be a tougher mouthful than the Greeks. There are many more of them; they're better trained soldiers; they're tolerably well armed; they're at longer range from Axis bases; they have a bit of water between them and their prospective would-be invaders; they're better situated to take advantage of such assistance as Britain may be able to afford them, and Russia may be in their corner.

Anyway, as previously remarked, the U.S. state department's Near and Far Eastern divisions are watching alertly.

• Mushroom Companies Operate ?

(From Parliamentary Debates).

Mr. DIEFENBAKER: Then there is a suspicion that contracts are being awarded in some instances to mushroom companies which have sprung up in recent months, and whose main capital is political fitness.

Mr. CLEAVER: Name them.

Mr. HOMUTH: The hon. member will get them; just let him wait.

Mr. DIEFENBAKER: I will give him one, a corporation set up in the city of Prince Albert to do construction work, the National Construction Company Limited. It never was in business before; it is composed of six men, unqualified in that work, whose cue qualification is political fitness.

Mr. CLEAVER: Will the hon. member permit a question?

Some hon. MEMBERS: Sit down.

Mr. CLEAVER: I know him, I think he would.

Mr. DIEFENBAKER: Yes, I will permit a question.

Mr. CLEAVER: Would the hon. member suggest that that contract awarded to the National Construction Company was not awarded to the lowest bidder?

Mr. HANSON (York - Sunbury): That is not what he is saying at all.

Mr. DIEFENBAKER: I suggest that if it was, there were sufficient delays that that company finally knew what the lowest tender would be.

An hon. MEMBER: Is that the way you did it when you were in power?

Mr. DIEFENBAKER: Mr. Speaker, I do not claim that there is any monopoly in patriotism on the part of any party. I remember some conditions of 1914-18, but I remember that when there was wrongdoing those who did wrong were punished under the orders of the then Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden.

The suggestion I want to make is this: There are millions upon millions being spent on war contracts, and we have no information as to the prices paid. Regularly a book is issued by the Minister of Munitions and Supply, setting out the contracts awarded—

Mr. HOMUTH: It tells you nothing.

Mr. DIEFENBAKER: —but it gives no particulars of the prices paid and therefore is worthless, except that it shows that the government is spending money.

Mr. CLEAVER: And shows the contract price.

Mr. DIEFENBAKER: It is apparent that the hon. member has not read the reports in question.

Mr. CLEAVER: I have read the reports, and they show the total contract price, not the unit prices.

• Nazis Will Yet Attack Russia

NOW as from the beginning of this war, now as in the first World War, now as in the Napoleonic wars, the outcome depends upon the control of the Atlantic Ocean. In the end the victory will go to the powers which can use the ocean to supply themselves and can cut off their enemies from the non-European world. For Europe cannot be conquered in Europe. Europe cannot be organized as a self-contained empire. Europe cannot be at peace within itself unless it is at peace with the outer world....

"This is the reason why Hitler's victories on the land of Europe did not finish the war. This is the reason why even the invasion of Britain or the destruction of Britain from the air would only be the means to an end, the means to the control of the Atlantic Ocean. This is the reason why the renewal of his war against British shipping is much the most serious of all his efforts to win the war....

"It is evident that Russian policy has been dictated solely by fear of the German Army....It is equally evident that it was the pressure of the blockade on Germany which explains the German advance through Hungary and Rumania and the whole effort to set the stage for a campaign against Suez, the Dardanelles and the oil fields of the Middle East.

"We do not know whether Russia will participate in this campaign as an accomplice of the Axis, or stand aside, or even eventually support the Greeks, the Turks and the British. But we can be reasonably sure that Russia will go with Germany only if Stalin thinks it is too soon to be safe to oppose Germany, and that he will go against Germany if he thinks this is not too dangerous an operation. But what he must know, what everybody knows, is that while Russia will go with Germany, if the blockade continues Germany must finally attack Russia and get at the supplies of the Ukraine and the Black Sea region. Thus the effect of the blockade is to engender an irrepressible conflict between Germany and Russia. This conflict will eventually be precipitated by Germany if Germany is strong in arms but desperately pressed, or by Russia herself if Germany's military power begins to show signs of deteriorating."—Walter Lippman.

• Should Officers Come From Ranks?

ALL THINGS that popularly go by the name of democracy are not "necessarily so." The result is conflict between popular theory and cold, hard fact. In this conflict is to be found the reason for much of the fumbling which makes democracy a slow starter, even if a strong finisher, in cases of emergency.

It is not true, for example, that all men are born equal. It never was true and it never will be true. Yet this popular theory still is widely enough held to be able at times to cause temporary conflict and inefficiency. Moreover, it has been expanded out of all proportion to its original narrow political meaning. Biologically, all men are born different and unequal. That hard fact is the scientific basis, if you wish, for the sound and realistic democratic principle of respect for the individual. Men are born with an infinite variety of quality in their basic physical, mental, and emotional constitutions. There are no two men alive in the world with absolute equality of inherent mental equipment. Moreover, although most education seems to be planned with a tendency toward standardization, there is the widest variation in the manners in which men develop their inherent mental, emotional and physical equipment.

One of the latest instances of the operation of the popular theory that all men are born equal has been in the demand of the past few months for a regulation to prevent men becoming officers in the Army without passing through the ranks. Whether Colonel Ralston acceded to representations in announcing the establishment of such a regulation we do not know. The regulation may be based solely on the experience and wise judgment of himself and his most competent military advisers. In any case, Canada has been fortunate that it was a regulation which did not come into effect in the early months of the war. Without the ability to draw upon the services of thousands of officers who had never passed through the ranks, as the popular mind thinks of the ranks, Canada would never have got an important Active Service Force organized as quickly and efficiently as she has. At the present time, with the main organization of Canada's wartime forces completed, the slower process of selecting and training new officers has much in its favor. Nevertheless, Colonel Ralston has probably acted very wisely in promptly making what may look like an exception to the new regulation in the case of men who come up through C.O.T.C. units. As a matter of fact, the exception is more apparent than real, since the cadets in such units are virtually in the position of private soldiers for at least a year before they qualify for commissions, while in future they will have to complete their training in an officers' wing of an active training centre.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

Hard To Believe How Time Flies

NOVEMBER 22

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be not transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God....For as ye have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.—Rom. xii. 1, 2, 4, 5.

There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling....One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.—Eph. iv, 4, 6.

Hitler Leaving Sea His Only Battleground

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Commenting on the numerous conferences being held by Hitler with Balkan leaders, The New York Times, in an editorial today, declares that while Hitler may succeed in his aim of confronting Britain with a cowed and conquered Europe, this will mean that he has left himself no other battleground but the sea.

"And on that field the British are best able to meet his challenge," says The Times.

The editorial reads:

The windows in Buckingham Palace are shattered, but safe in his glass-walled study in Berchtesgaden Mr. Hitler has been entertaining at tea. Before and after this function he conferred separately and at length with Count Ciano of Italy and Senor Suner of Spain, but over the teacups he brought the two together. On the magic mountain no doubt there was real tea in the pot, probably the best Darjeeling, served hot and strong in the best English manner, for the tepid brew of apple-peel served everywhere else in Germany would neither soothe the tempers of the visitors nor wash down the bitter medicine they were asked to swallow.

They needed soothing; it is pretty evident that the Italian and Spanish Foreign Ministers were summoned to meet in this fashion to force them to agree to the plan the Fuehrer desires to impose on both. The Italians have been balking at this plan, partly because the Germans are ousting them in Spain, partly because the compensation offered for Spanish collaboration in a "New Order"—more and more Hitler's, and less and less Mussolini's—is at the expense of Italy's aspirations in Africa. But if the sudden thrust into Greece was a sign of protest, the check suffered in that expedition may render Rome more amenable.

More Than Tea Brewing.

In the same crowded week Hitler has received King Boris of Bulgaria, and all these visits, together with consultations with the Rumanians and the Slovaks, are a sequel to the journey of Molotoff to Berlin and a prelude to today's meeting in Vienna of the Axis powers and the Ministers of Hungary. Evidently large schemes are taking final shape. Something besides tea is brewing at the back door of Europe, and if the heat is applied strongly enough it is quite possible that Yugoslavia, the one Balkan State excluded from these parties, and Turkey, guarding her toehold in Europe, may be outflanked and isolated without the use of force. Obviously the object of this diplomatic blitzkrieg is to draw the key States of the Balkans — Rumania, Hungary, Bulgaria—into an open alliance with the Axis in order to block Turkey and crush the indomitable Greeks, whose prayers for help show their awareness of the peril in which they stand. These are the last allies of Britain, and this is above all a drive to clear the British out of their last entrenchment on the Continent.

In his role of the strong man knocking down the weak, one by one, Hitler may succeed in his aim of confronting Britain with a cowed and conquered Europe. But this will mean that he has left himself no battleground but the sea, and on that field the British are best able to meet his challenge. A Balkan empire may be planned around the tea table, but to exist it is more dependent than the rest of Europe on access to the oceans.

Raid On Faraday Uncovers Still

BANCROFT, Nov. 22—(ENS).—The results of a bottle of illicit liquor found in one of the cars involved in an accident Sunday evening in Faraday township resulted in the arrest of Marshall Hayes, a resident of that district.

An investigation conducted by W. Beattie of the R.C.M.P. of Belleville, along with Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer and County Constable G. P. Wells of Bancroft, on Tuesday on the premises of Hayes revealed an illicit still in the bush on the back part of his premises which still was seized by the Mounted Police. Hayes was charged with keeping illicit liquor for sale and remanded and will appear in Bancroft police court November 26.

Gordon Robertson and R. A. Pringle of Belleville, accompanied by S. W. Palmateer, had a real successful day hunting in Lake township south of Bancroft when they bagged a hundred and eighty pound buck and a cub bear. Mr. Robertson laid claim to the bear which he will transform into a rug for his home as a remembrance of their hunt.

Monday evening "A" Company in Bancroft had quite a change from their regular routine of drill. They assembled at the Community Hall, where a series of motion pictures were shown covering military tactical moves which in all proved helpful to the local boys as they were more able to grasp the ideas which in the past have been taught by their instructors. It is contemplated that other series of pictures will be forthcoming for instructive purposes.

Centreville YPS Has Fine Rally

CENTREVILLE, Nov. 22.—(ENS)—Miss Allie Berry was hostess to the Young People's Society of the Presbyterian church on Tuesday night.

The president, Gerald Anderson, presided. Following a song service, led by Vera Bradshaw, the Scripture lesson was read by Agnes Breckenridge and the president led in prayer.

After some items of business were considered the service convener, Allie Berry, presided for a splendid program and began by reading a fine poem.

The next number was a violin solo and encore by Allan Brown, Robena Brown accompanying him at the piano. Following reading of Scripture and prayer by Ernest Breckenridge, a delightful solo was rendered by Vera Bradshaw.

An interesting and instructive paper on "England's Greatness" was given by Iva Campbell, after which the society stood at attention while Rule Britannia was played, followed by all singing the National Anthem.

Rev. A. Raeburn Gibson gave an outline study of the Book of Exodus. A dainty lunch was served and the hostess thanked for her hospitality.

Attending the Peterborough Presbyterial rally of the Young People's Society at Brighton on Tuesday night were Rev. A. R. Gibson, Messrs. Gerald Anderson, Arthur Breckenridge, Ralph and Jack Greer, and Misses Vera Bradshaw, Allie Berry, Robena Tate, Iva Campbell, Mary Whittington, Bernice Falls.

Centreville society was presented with a silver cup, the Mason trophy, for the most efficient work last year in the Presbytery. Miss Vera Bradshaw was elected and installed as worship convener of the Peterborough Presbytery.

LEAGUE LEADERS STOPPED IN CITY 5-PIN LOOP BY LOCK MAKERS

Winning Streak Halted In Surprise Win

Big team scores took a holiday when the City League bowlers took their turn on the alleys at Duffus last night. A lonely 3341 total by the Nationals was all that saved the day for the major leaguers from the fast-stepping Fractional Motors men who rolled 3326 in the C.G.E. league earlier in the evening.

The Peterborough Lock entry high-lighted the night's play by snapping the winning streak of Tamblyn's. The old pests of last year almost had the league-leaders down for keeps when they won the first two games. The match ended with two points for each team and Tamblyn's lead in the league was cut to 2 over Nationals who blanked Capitol Grill 4-0. Westclox hung 4 to 0 on Kinsmen while Big Five took 3 of the 4 points from Raine's with Dick Raine watching his entry in action. Grafton's and Green's tilt along with Centre Theatre and Huffman's ended two all. Walter Firth, a Grafton stand-by, teed off with the big individual scores, a 359 single in an 808 total.

The fur flew when two peppy girls' teams clashed in the challenge match. The Brinton Ladies, who eliminated Outboard Marine last week, had a real job on their hands to send a determined A.Y.P.A. five away. Brintons won on pinnage when Marg Hawthorne was there again with 653 and Agnes Anderson featured 605 with a rousing 303 single. Next week's opposition for Brintons will be a team from the Kawartha Ladies' League.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Two championships in Eastern football will be decided tomorrow afternoon and the crystal points to Ottawa Rough Riders and Balmy Beach of Toronto as the winning clubs. Ottawa have an eleven-point lead for their game with Argos in Toronto and the Riders would have to come through with their worst game in years to give the Oarsmen a chance to overcome that handicap. As a matter of fact Ottawa should not only hold their lead but take Saturday's game as well for Argos do not show enough scoring potentialities to be rated over such a powerful club as the Rough Riders. Few football machines have won championships without effective plunging and fewer still without good kicking and in both those respects Lou Hayman's team is lacking. They have no one who can slice through the line like Golab or Griffen and certainly no punter who can consistently get the distance attained by Sammy Sward.

* * * * * *

There is only one chance for Argos and that is for their aerial attack to start clicking regularly. Even that would not be enough, unless it is accompanied by one of those exhibitions of plain and fancy fumbling that the Ottawa machine has sometimes put on to the delight of their opponents and the dismay of their supporters. When they suddenly start tossing the ball away as if it were a hot potato the Rough Riders can look very ordinary and their game falls apart at the seams. However, on the season's record, and on a comparison of the capabilities of the rival sets of players it does not seem to be on the cards that Ross Trimble's men should be beaten. They should be Big Four champions before nightfall tomorrow and probably by a few points more than the eleven they are carrying to Toronto. But it will be quite a game for the Argos are a fighting gang and they will battle from the initial kickoff.

* * * * * *

As for the Ontario final there is no reason to desert the Balmy Beach outfit at this stage of the proceedings. With a twelve-point margin Alex Ponton's men invade Sarnia and the best tackling barrage the Artillerymen are likely to lay down will probably be powerless to prevent the Bammies from piling up their eighth win in succession and popping the O.R.F.U. championship in the bag. Sarnia, of course, up to this season has been a jinx spot for the Beachers. Eleven years in succession they took the long trip to the tunnel town and eleven times they failed to win. But this is a different season and the Ponton machine has laid the hex by scoring a victory in Sarnia during the regular schedule. They should hang up another tomorrow. They have too much power, speed and deception for the Gunners and should cash in on those assets to breeze home in front and end their O.R.F.U. campaign without a defeat.

Muscling In Again

On the agenda of the Ontario Hockey Association's annual meeting tomorrow appears a motion sponsored by the sub-committee which should cause some of the delegates from the smaller centres to rise up with a stout, if probably useless, protest. The motion provides that in the playoffs for the senior "A" and the junior "A" championships the association shall receive 7½ per cent of the gross gate in all preliminary games and 15 per cent of the gross in all final games. Furthermore, that in all other series, in all playoffs in groups and between group winners the O.H.A. will take a 5 per cent cut of the gross gate and snaffle 15 per cent of the gross in the finals. That proposal is a widening out of the old tendency of the governing body to muscle in on playoff receipts and while it may be all right in the case of the senior "A" and junior "A" series where big gates are the rule, financing clubs in some of the other series is tough enough without having to feed the kitty to enable the O.H.A. to pile up a big reserve.

* * * * * *

At one time the governing body had a surplus running into many thousands of dollars while at the same time promoters in some hockey centres were in the red. If more of the reserve funds were used for the development of minor hockey all well and good, but under the circumstances the minor clubs have a right to protest at having to shell out a sizable share of the gross gate to build up a big surplus at headquarters. The hockey clubs, it should be remembered, have to pay all the expenses of these games out of their share of the gates and after the O.H.A. and the rinks and the referee have taken their slice, the cut remaining for the clubs is often a meagre portion. Unless it can be shown that more funds are urgently needed in the O.H.A. treasury these raids should not be taken sitting down.

* * * * * *

Today is a memorable date in Peterborough Collegiate football history for ten years ago this afternoon the garnet and gray team, one of the best-balanced to represent Dr. Kenner's institution met Hamilton Delta Collegiate at Riverside Park in a sudden-death interscholastic semi-final. Sparked by big Bob Isbister, afterward to shine as one of the greatest kickers in the history of the Big Four and by Zvonkin, a powerful plunger, the big Hamilton squad finally beat P.C.I. 24 to 11. The Peterborough youngsters after giving Hamilton an early try on a fumble came back with two quick touchdowns on sparkling plays by Joe Dunkerley and Gordie Young to take the lead but driven back by Isbister's kicking and the plunging ability of the Hamilton squad weakened on end and were beaten out. P.C.I.'s team was Dunkerley, flying wing, Richardson, Fraser and Young, halves, Preston, quarter, Howie Macdonald, snap, Waddell and Clayton, insides, Armstrong, Lord, middles and Ward and Wagar, outsides with Reynolds, Dinesen, Breckenridge, Robinson, Mesley and Sloane, alternates.

The Bruins Finally Win

Hockey in the N.H.L. last night followed this column's program exactly with Boston Bruins grabbing their first win of the season in Chicago, the Leafs defeating the Amerks and Detroit Red Wings nosing out the Canadiens. It was a low scoring night, with the six teams in action hanging up a total of only eight goals. Bruins' margin over the Black Hawks was 2 to 0 while Toronto and Detroit both won by a 2-1 score. All three were tough battles but they served to indicate nevertheless that the Canadiens and Amerks are destined for the lower rungs of the ladder. They are something short of the standard of the rest of the clubs in the loop, and unless they round into more effective form shortly they will be a long way back from the head of the parade. Their rookies have so far failed to come through as expected.

Leafs had a tough battle in New York. Drillon put them in front in the first period but that good Toronto boy, Peanuts O'Flaherty, a freshman with the Amerks evened up the count in the second stanza and there was no further scoring until Syl Apps made a solo dash for a goal in overtime. At Detroit the Canadiens and Red Wings each scored a goal in the first period but Gus Giesebrecht made it a Detroit victory by beating Gardiner in the second stanza for what proved to be the winning counter. Bruins who had failed to register a win in four previous starts cashed in with a clean-cut victory at Chicago with Frank Brimsek getting his first shutout of the season. Herbie Cain scored for Boston early in the second period and the teams battled without any further goals until late in the final session when Mel Hill registered on a breakaway.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Argos according to Lou Hayman were "terriole" in practice last night. A poor rehearsal often means a good show, however....President R. M. Glover of the Peterborough Hockey Club will attended the O.H.A. annual meeting tomorrow as a life member of the organization....Bunny Wadsworth is not expected to see much action with Ottawa Saturday. We understand that is quite all right with the Argo line....Only Holden will be absent from the Balmy Beach lineup at Sarnia tomorrow....Wrestler King Kong pulled a referee's shirt to pieces in Toronto last night. The same old stuff, only sliced thicker but the customers go for it....Maple Leafs have a one-point lead over Red Wings and four points over Rangers. The Young Men of Manhattan, however, have two games in hand.

Odds Against Sarnia And Argo Teams

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

There is no dismay, only a calm confidence, in the camps of Toronto Argonauts and Sarnia Battery, condemned by almost everyone to be tossed on the football scrapheap before Saturday's sun has set over Varsity Stadium in Toronto and Athletic Park in Sarnia.

But there is no getting away from the fact that their plight is serious, and that the odds are all against the Argos making up 11 points on Ottawa RFough Riders in the Interprovincial Union playoff, and more so against the Battery wiping out the 12-point edge held by Toronto Balmy Beach for the Ontario Union Championship.

Taking the Battery case first, for it seems the more hopeless, there is no apparent reason for the hopes Mike Fitzgibbon's men have of beating the Beach. They've met three times this season and none of the Beach victories was as sound as the 12-0 shutout administered last Saturday.

Good Defensive Team

Defensively, the Battery rates with Beaches, for they've got one of the toughest lines in the business, backed up by Nick Paithouski at centre secondary—and Paithouski has a lot of football wrapped up in his stocky frame. But they haven't the reserves to hold together for 60 minutes and, more important, they haven't an offensive.

Ralph Perry and Joe Woodcock are good plungers and Hank Galloway and Jim Butler are fine punters but four men cannot match the power wrapped up in the Beach half-dozen of Bobby Porter, Frank Seymour, Bill Drinkwater, Johnny Manson, Don Crowe and Hugh Tunnicliffe, operating behind a line as strong as Sarnia's.

Powerful Backfield

The Argos are conceded a better chance because somewhere in their fleet backfield is power which, if harnessed properly, might beat any club in Canada over one 60-minute playing stretch. The trouble is that they've been able to turn on the power in full only once, when they beat Ottawa 11-9 in Toronto a month ago.

The situation is such that the 18,000 fans expected to crowd Varsity Stadium are almost sure of seeing a wide-open Argo running and throwing party. Eleven points behind a machine that has shown practically no weakness all season, they can only start by gambling and keeping at it.

Lew Hayman put the club through a drill behind closed doors yesterday, and they weren't overly impressive. It is likely that the last of the two Argo cripples, big Red Storey, will get into action, although his injured knee is not completely better. But Hayman needs the redhead's blocking and Storey wants to play.

Out of Action

Bunny Wadsworth will be the only Ottawa regular out of action. The Riders can play this one close to their chests, with no pressure at all unless Argos somehow grab two touchdowns without reply.

In a case like this they might rely entirely on the superior punting of Sammy Sward to keep belting Argos back, and wiping out any short gains the Argo swifties can pick up on the ground. But if he has to, Ross Trimble can start firing guns bigger than anything on the Argo ship.

Both games should be close and nice to watch. Capacity crowds are expected at both parks.

Alf Mattuci Raps Pins For 852

Alf Mattuci of the C.G.E. was the number one bowler at Duffus' yesterday when he anchored the Fractional Motors into second place in team scoring for the day. Mattuci put down 852 of the 3,326 pins which were carded by the Fractional team. The first place for ladies was occupied by Helen Mongraw, also of the C.G.E., with a count of 656. CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Summoned to the state penitentiary where her father lies near death, Lona Ackerman is dismayed when he fails to recognize her. He is serving a life sentence for a murder which occurred when he sought to avenge his daughter's honor. Finding a friend in Jim Claridge, Lona had just begun to take a new interest in life when the prison warden telegraphed her of her father's illness. Alone in the world, she had spent months, finding jobs, then losing them when it became known she was a convict's daughter. Finally Jim had found her a new position, saw more and more of her, until they fell in love. The prison warden takes Lona to his home. As they enter, two convicts confront them with guns. Once in the warden's car, the convicts slug the warden and dump him out, then attempt a mad get-away with Lona in the front seat. Eventually she pretends to faint, then lurches for the steering wheel. Then they crash. Only slightly injured, Lona recovers in the prison hospital and finds her father has died. When she takes her father's body to their old home for burial, she finds herself the object of all eyes, due to the wide publicity that followed the attempted prison break.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

LONA INSISTED upon leaving Bridgewater immediately after her father's funeral. Despite the kindly efforts of the old minister and his wife to persuade her to remain with them for a rest, she felt she could no longer stand the place, with its familiar scenes and its memories.

After that last pitiful visit to the churchyard it was haunted; she felt that she had done with it forever. She never wanted to see the place again. It was as if she had written finis to a chapter of her life, a dark, fateful chapter, with which she was glad to be done.

It was with that feeling of finality uppermost in her mind that she listlessly made the train ride up to the city the morning after they had laid her father to rest. She was surprised to realize that, on the whole, she felt relieved. The thought of her father sleeping back there in the churchyard beside the mother she could scarcely remember was much less terrible, now that the shock was over, than the thought of him shut away, living, in that gray stone horror of a prison.

At least he wasn't suffering, eating his heart out for her. She could feel easy about him now. She could plan for the future with a free mind. The worst had happened and it was over. She began to be anxious to get back to work, and to Jim.

She half expected to find Jim waiting for her in the station where she had parted from him—was it less than a week ago? An absurd little wave of disappointment took hold of her as she scanned the milling, big-city throng, in vain, for his familiar face. Then she smiled wanely at her own childishness. Of course he couldn't possibly be here. She hadn't notified him she was coming back so soon. Besides, it was noon, and he would be at work.

After the smug quietness of small-town Bridgewater, filled for all its peaceful surface with devouring eyes that had followed her every move as if she were some rare sort of animal on display, the impersonal bustle of the city streets was a welcome relief. The feeling of strain that had ridden her every minute since she had left Jim on this very platform lifted for the first time as she hailed a taxi and, giving her boarding house address, settled into it gratefully.

Magnificent Is Winner Of Juvenile Race

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 22.—(AP)—An estimated crowd of 20,000, one of the largest ever to visit the "Track in the Woods," Thursday saw Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Magnificient, the 9 to 10 favorite in a field of eight juveniles, hold on just long enough to score a nose victory in the $7,500 Endurance Handicap, final two-year-old fixture of the season. The bay son of Challenger 2nd-Minnant, accounting for his initial stake, finished the mile and 70 yards in the smart time of 1:45 2-5 as he staved off a desperate rally by E. K. Bryson's Cis Marion.

H. P. Metcalf's Hop Skip was a tired third, a length and a half behind Mrs. Lewis' colt, carrying top-weight of 115 pounds, earned a purse of $6,550, boosting his earnings to $10,525. This is the colt that Samuel D. Riddle purchased out of the Saratoga yearling sales for $6,000 and then a few minutes later, sold to Mrs. Lewis for a reported $7,000. Magnificient is now slated to go to California to be pointed for the Santa Anita Derby. Recently finished second to Whirlaway in the Walden but had no such horse to compete with against Thursday.

In chalking up his second triumph in a half dozen starts, Magnificient lived up to his name in so far as courage and speed are concerned. Al Shelhamer had the colt away from the inside and urged him into a narrow lead in the run for positions. Magnificient never could get clear but he held on admirably. Commixion fought for the lead until the far turn. Hop Skip then had his fling at the favorite, only to become distressed in the last furlong.

Walter Taylor, trying for a riding triple, brought the sluggish starting Cis Marion along with a bold challenge on the outside of the Lewis colt, but the latter refused to be passed. Hasty Notion came from far out of it to finish fourth.

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Just when the professional mourners were beginning to wail, corpse Frankie Brimsek refused to stay dead.

As late as yesterday that the National Hockey League's gravediggers were preparing a minor-league plot for the youngster who had been acclaimed as none other in his rookie year. Boston Bruins' Mr. Zero had cracked.

The stone-faced Brimsek who backed the Bruins to the Stanley Cup, who gained the Canadian all-star team as goaler as well as 10 shutouts and the outstanding rookie award—all in that first year two seasons ago—was being made fall-guy for the dismal showing of the N.H.L. champions, who held only two draws in five starts.

Lots of Rumblings.

There were rumors that Manager Art Ross would shift his protege to a minor league berth; rumblings almost every game that one or two of the goals were "soft." Well, there weren't any soft ones — nor any other kind—last night; and where are the wails to-day?

All of the old finesse was there, all of the flash, as Frankie chalked up shutout No. 1 of this season against the Chicago Black Hawks. Not the "kitty-bar-the-door" Black Hawks of old, but the driving, fighting youngsters that Manager Paul Thompson has now.

Soon, perhaps, they'll be saying, "as Brimsek goes so goes Boston," for the victory was the first of the season for the Bruins. The 2-0 triumph in Chicago lifted them into fifth place and already the boys who say they know will tell you that the team, too good to stay long at the bottom, finally has started to roll.

Two other fine goal-tending performances were eclipsed by Brimsek last night—that of Rookie Johnny Mowers who backed Detroit Red Wings to a 2-1 victory over Montreal Canadiens and another by veteran Turk Broda, who helped Toronto Maple Leafs also to a 2-1 triumph over New York Americans. But they were scored on.

Brimsek wasn't. Before 15,487 fans in Chicago's home town, he turend back every thrust of the Black Howks. Meanwhile Herbie Cain gave Boston a goal in the second period and Mel Hill added another in the next just to make the Bruins' first victory official.

While Brimsek was proving his right to stay in the league, Toronto and Detroit were battling for the league leadership in separate cities. Both won, and Toronto remained a single point in front of the second-place Red Wings.

Apps Does It For Leafs

Toronto invaded New York to stretch their streak to five straight victories at the expense of the Americans. A crowd of about 8,000 watched Centre Syl Apps provide the winning goal at 1:16 of an overtime period by fighting through the Americans' defence and whipping home a three-footer.

The teams had played through a 1-1 tie in the regulation time. Gordie Drillon beat Charlie Rayner, Kenora, Ont., youngster subbing for the injured Earl Robertson in the American nets, to put Toronto ahead but Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty tied it up for Americans in the second period.

A second-period goal by Detroit's Gus Giesebrecht meanwhile pushed Montreal Canadiens all alone into the league cellar. The tally broke a 1-1 tie which came about in the first period when Modere Bruneteau scored for Detroit and Tony Demers for Canadiens.

Big Jack Portland, whom the Canucks bought from Chicago recently for a sum reported at $12,500, replaced Doug Young on the Montreal defence and performed effectively.

Before the game, which was watched by a crowd of 10,454, Defenceman Ebbie Goodfellow was awarded the Dr. David A. Hart Trophy which he won last year on being adjudged the player most valuable to his team. President Frank Calder of the N.H.L. made the presentation.

Jenkins To Tangle In Grudge Affair

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—(AP).—Lew Jenkins, Sweetwater, Tex., and Pete Lello, Chicago, tangle for the world's lightweight championship tonight in Madison Square Garden in an honest-to-goodness grudge fight.

Jenkins, making his first defence of that portion of the title he won by knocking out Lou Ambers last winter, has been waiting for this chance at the Chicago belter for more than a year. Lello has been after Jenkins ever since he won the crown, just to prove that when he knocked out the Sweetwater swatter in seven rounds in March, 1939, he didn't do it with mirrors, as Lew has implied from time to time.

As a result, each fighter is betting his own money that he'll flatten the other long before the 15-round route is completed. Promoter Mike Jacobs figures some 12,000 to 15,000 customers and a gate of between $30,000 and $35,000.

The Capitals didn't score until late in the final period, when Butch McDonald tallied while Springfield centre Len Halldorson was in the penalty box for tripping.

Omemee Guild Honors Secretary

OMEMEE, Nov. 22—(ENS).—The monthly meeting of the Women's Guild was held at the home of Mrs. Horace Hill, with a splendid attendance of members.

Final arrangements were made for the annual bazaar and supper which will be held in the basement of the church Friday afternoon, December 6.

The next meeting will be held in the basement of the church Thursday evening, December 5, when the articles for the bazaar will be marked.

Miss Mildred Jones, secretary for the past four years, and bride of this month was called forward and was presented with an occasional chair. An appropriate address was read by Miss Maggie McQuade, and the presentation was made by Miss Ethel Thorn. At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. Nelson Atwell and, Miss Ethel Thorn.

HARDLY A PAIN AT 78

She Feels Like 48

Aches and pains are not inevitable in old age. When they do come, there is always a cause for them. Here is a little lesson on growing old, by a woman of 78:—

"For the last five years I have taken Kruschen Salts and I tell you truthfully I could not live without them. I am 78 years old. I have hardly a pain in my body, and I feel almost as young as I did at 48. I give the credit to Kruschen Salts. No one will believe my age."

—(Mrs.) C. M.

Most people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health—the need for internal cleanliness. Eventually they start the Kruschen habit. Then, probably for the first time in years, they start getting rid every day of all waste matter from the system. They begin to feel energetic and happy. In a word, they've go that "Kruschen Feeling."

Rescued After Four Nights and Three Days Adrift

MILLBROOK

Home Front Club Gives Study Food And Law

MILLBROOK, Nov. 22—(ENS).—The girls' club, known as "The Home Front Guard," met this week at the home of Mrs. Charles Thorndyke, with the president, Maretta Graham, in the chair, and Martha Belch calling the roll, which was answered by "One Traffic Law I Have Learned."

Mrs. W. H. Armstrong, leader, gave out the tickets to be sold on a fruit cake, and also gave the talk on "Invisible enemies, and how we may fight them." The headings were: 1, Safe milk; 2, Sewage disposal; 3, House flies.

Another subject was "The Food We Eeat," with a guide to food selection, such as: 1, Proper food and how to avoid over-cooking; 2, How to eliminate waste by proper cooking. Safety first outside and inside the home, individually and collectively, knowing and observing the laws when walking or driving led to each girl being given a "Motorists' Manual," to help her in learning the traffic rules and regulations.

As a demonstration in food safety the leader showed "the result of experimental growth and micro-organism," by three slices of bread one of which had been placed in a saucer of water; one in a sterilized jar, and one on a dry saucer. The one in the jar had become moudly, the one on the wet saucer spoiled, and the one on the dry saucer also spoiled though not mouldy.

For the home assignment the girls are to make a list of people who have made outstanding contributions to health, and write a story about one of them. The roll will be answered by "The person whose story I have written, and what he did." The National Anthem closed an instructive gathering.

St Thomas W.A.

Mrs. C. M. Westmacott entertained the W.A. at St. Thomas' Church for its November meeting, held at her home on Monday at 8 p.m., with the president, who was also the hostess, in the chair, and a goodly number in attendance

Before opening the meeting, the president asked that the members stand for a moment in silent tribute to the memory of the late Mrs. E. J. Whyte, for many years the efficient secretary of the organization. Following this "O God Our Help in Ages Past" was sung; Mrs. G. Raper read the 1st Psalm, and Mrs. Westmacott led in the special prayers for peace, and the W.A Litany.

The Dorcas secretary, Mrs. Norman Lamb, reported one quilt completed for the bale, another to be done this week, and the outfit for an Indian girl already under way. For the Junior W.A., the superintendent, Miss Bella McCorry, sent in a report of a successful Hallowe'en tea held at the end of October, and a sale of homemade candy to take place on Saturday, November 22, for which a generous patronage was solicited.

Miss H. Needler reported the sale of 56 church calendars for 1941, the largest number sold in any previous year The president reminded the members of the annual Corporate Communion observed by the W.A. on St. Andrew's Day, but as this falls on a Saturday this year, the special service will be on Sunday, December 1, Veneral Archdeacon William Simpson officiating.

Discussion regarding the annual distribution of Christmas baskets led to the decision to send these only to the sick this year, and Mrs. Simpson told of the ultimatum of the Japanese Government that no foreign money may now be received by the Christian church in that country, nor may any foreigner hold office in the church, hence the withdrawal of all missionaries of the Anglican church, leaving the work wholly in the hands of the native leaders, and Christians.

Miss Rose MacNamara took up the chapter from the study book, "Conflict," describing the beauties of the city of Peking, where Rev. William Simpson, B.A., only son of the rector of Cavan parish, is now attending University, taking up language study, and other subjects. The annual nomination of officers led to the fact that no new names were submitted, hence the list for 1940 will continue for the next year, and be formally elected and installed at the January meeting.

The plan adopted last month, of discontinuing the service of refreshments was followed for the first time on Monday night, and instead the two hostesses, Mrs. J. E. Allen and Mrs. H. C Attwooll, put the approximate cost in their allotment boxes; this will be done by all supper hostess for the future.

A hymn, and the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

School Bus Quit Taking Children

DOURO, Nov. 22 — (ENS). — Douro's first venture into bus transportation of High School pupils has come to a sudden and disappointing close. Last August the Lakefield High School Board, with the principal, met the prospective bus driver, W. Wright, at a meeting in Warsaw. At this meeting, it is reliably reported, the Board promised a substantial grant to the driver which with the very moderate fees charged the pupils would make the venture feasible. Mr. Wright purchased a bus in Toronto, and for two months all went well. But when no grant was forthcoming, Mr. Wright could not continue. Failing in Lakefield, he interviewed the Norwood Board, which promised to make a grant. All but three or four of the pupils made the change to Norwood, but as was to be expected they found themselves lost. Different text books in some cases, ahead of the Norwood classes in some subjects, behind in others. At last they threw up their hands and quit. Six of them are going to drive to Lakefield, two or three have gone back to rooming, one boy has a wheel, and one girl has quit. Mr. Wright is left with the bus on his hands and the parents are disappointed.

Warden Is Given Gold Watch By Councillors

COBOURG, Nov. 22 (ENS)—Warden W. H. Morrow was tendered a banquet Wednesday night in the British Hotel by his fellow members of Northumberland and Durham Counties Council and was presented with a gold watch. Chairman was Deputy-Reeve W. A. Smith of Murray township. At the head table were ex-warden Fred Bowen of Newcastle; ex-warden Percy Stinson of Millbrook; Lieut. H. R. S. Ryan of Port Hope, former member of the counties council; Reeve Percy Gooding of Brighton township; the Warden; Deputy-Reeve Smith; Col. J. C. Gamey of Orono, C.O. of the Midland Regiment, who was guest speaker; ex-warden T. A. Reid of Clarke township; Lieut. J. James of the Midland Regiment; Reeve G. A. Edmondstone of Bowmanville and Cecil Mercer, M.L.A. for Durham County.

Other ex-wardens who were present were Herbie Nelson of Percy township; Milton Elliot of Bowmanville; George Hootan of Cavan and Frank George of Murray township. In addition there were the members of Murray township council, counties officials and friends of the warden from various parts of the counties. The presentation of the gold watch to the warden was made on behalf of the counties council by Deputy-Reeve W. Brown of Cavan township. The following address accompanied the presentation:

"Dear Mr. Warden—We, your associates of the counties council of 1940, have assembled on this happy occasion to extend to you our hearty congratulations on the administration of these united counties which you, as warden, have guided so successfully this year. Our municipal year has been a fruitful one. These united counties are in a sound and flourishing condition and we close this year, in which it has been our privilege to have assisted you in a faithful and diligent stewardship, feeling confident our successors will agree that our joint task has been well done. May we in passing reaffirm our loyalty to the democratic institutions, which we have in our municipal sphere represented as grateful subjects of Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, long may they reign, personifying as they do that political freedom which is the life blood of Britons in all the far places of our Empire, even as at its heart and centre.

"May we in conclusion express to you our appreciation of your kindly leadership this year, and as a remembrance of our associations we ask you to accept this gift hoping that it will ever recall your fellow members of these sessions and their accomplishments. Please convey to Mrs. Morrow our felicities and to you both we offer our best wishes for the future, a Merry Christmas soon to come and happiness in the years which we hope you will long be spared to enjoy. Signed on behalf of the Counties Council at Cobourg, Wednesday, November 20th, 1940."

Toast List

The toast to the Country was given by Reeve Percy Gooding in which he declared that Canada, besides sending men to the Empire's cause, had a duty at home of being the breadbasket of the soldiers and of Great Britain. The toast was replied to by ex-warden Percy Stinson of Millbrook who declared that it was stirring to see the spirit and morale of the young men of Canada who were leaving homes and all they cherished to take up arms on behalf of King and Country.

Reeve G. A. Edmondstone of Bowmanville proposed the toast to the boys in uniform and the reply was given by Lieut. Ryan. Lieut. Ryan stated that in this war the men in the ranks had the most important jobs to do and got the least for it. He expressed the hope that the soldiers of this generation would at least approach the splendid example set by the soldiers of the last war.

Warden Morrow's reply to the presentation was brief but reflected the sincerity of his words.

"We have laid aside a lot of our petty differences, realizing that we are in difficult times with a war to win," stated the warden. "You will remember that I asked you at the January session to keep in mind the demands of the war effort in all your council business and I am glad to say that throughout the year you have done this. It has been very pleasant working with you all, and I am deeply grateful for this gift which you have presented to me this evening. I want too, to express my appreciation of the co-operation of all the counties officials and this, along with your own valuable assistance, has made my duties as warden very pleasant and satisfactory," said Warden Morrow.

Colonel Gamey, speaker of the evening, was introduced by Reeve T. A. Reid of Clarke township, who told of the guest speaker's rise from the rank of private in the last war to colonel in this one. One of the interesting features of the speaker's address, in which he spoke of war conditions in England while he was there this year before returning to take command of the Midland Regiment, was an account of an air attack against a British convoy in the Channel—how he saw it and how "Lord Haw-Haw," described it.

Convoy Attacked

"I and some others watched a convoy going down the channel with its destroyers and freighters. About 100 German bombers seemed to appear from nowhere and within a few moments bombs were dropping thickly around the ships. Great pillars of water were thrown into the air by the explosions and at times obscured the vessels. Then a small force of R.A.F. planes appeared on the scene and within a short time dispersed the raiders, downing several planes. I, nor the others with me, saw any of the British planes come down. After the battle was over, there was the convoy poking along down the channel as if nothing had happened at all. That evening when we were listening to Lord Haw Haw on the air, we heard him describe the battle which we had seen that afternoon but his version was how the convoy had been dispersed and the R.A.F. badly beaten. Later the B.B.C. came on and their description of the battle corresponded with what we had seen ourselves, with the exception that the B.B.C. told of two R.A.F. planes coming down. If they were shot down, they made landings somewhere on the coast or inland because we saw no R.A.F. planes go into the water," stated the speaker.

Cecil Mercer, M.L.A., and others gave brief speeches during the course of the evening's program.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Stores or any druggist a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. —(Advt.)

out a second glance her way, and she could have hugged him in relief. After a week of reporters popping up at every corner, cameras flashing unexpectedly, and fingers pointing, it was good to be home. Home, where she could forget. . . . She'd take her luggage to her room, she decided, as she paid the driver before her boarding house door. After she had freshened up a bit, she'd leave a call for Jim at Mrs. Peterman's, and then go to the office and report for work.

"So you're back!" the landlady said, before Lona could bring out even a hesitant greeting. "It's a wonder you've the nerve to show up here at all."

For a moment Lona stared at her. "Why, what do you mean?" she brought out.

"This is a decent boarding house. That's what I mean." The woman's eyes flashed, and her lips curled. "I'm an honest woman trying to make an honest living, and I don't harbor no notorious characters."

"Notorious characters! You don't mean—surely you can't mean—"

"Look at them newspapers!" The stricken look in the girl's eyes brought the woman's voice up defensively.

Flouncing to the table where she kept the house supply of newspapers, she picked up a morning edition angrily. It had her picture on the front page, Lona saw with sinking heart. One of the innumerable snaps the news cameras had caught of her the last few days. Sickeningly, the headlines glared out at her.—"Girl Who Thwarted Jail Break Buries Father," it shrieked. "The Last Chapter in a Tragic Story Was Played Yesterday in the Quiet Country Cemetery of Bridgewater. . . ."

"This is a decent house, I tell you," the landlady's whining voice repeated. "We can't be mixed up with no convicts here!"

"I see." Lona's voice was tired. "I suppose you want me to—go."

"I'd be obliged if you'd pack up and turn over your keys. I'll give you back the rest of your week's rent. That's fair enough." She waited, her lips tight.

"You can wait until evening." Her point won, the woman relented slightly. It'll probably take you all afternoon hunting a room."

But Lona shook her head. "I'll go now," she said, wearily, and trudged up the rickety stairs with heavy feet.

A half hour later, out on the street with her suitcase heavy on her arm, she remembered that she hadn't put in her call to Jim. She hesitated, then hailed the first taxi she saw, recklessly. Nothing could induce her to go back into that house again. She couldn't ask that terrible woman for even the use of her telephone. The first address that came to her mind was the hotel to which Jim had directed her that night he had found her walking the streets, homeless, as she was now. With sudden resolve she gave it to the taxi driver.

It took all her nerve to force herself to walk unconcernedly into the familiar lobby and ask the clerk for a room. As she took up the pen to sign her name to the register, her hands trembled. For a moment she was tempted to sign an alias, any name but her own, but her pride intervened. Carefully shielding what she was writing with her left hand, she traced a bold "Lona Ackerman," and with a toss of her head added a defiant, "Bridgewater." Her heart came into her mouth as the clerk scanned it casually and, without a sign of recognition, handed her a key from the rack behind him.

Once upstairs in the privacy of her room, she sat down limply on her bed and gave way to the feeling she had been carefully keeping in check. That woman, how dared she! "Decent house," she had said. As if she were something—unclean. Was she never to get clear of this thing that was haunting her? Would it follow her like this always? Even here in the city she had been so glad to see this morning was there to be no peace?

She sobbed there on the bed for a few minutes in utter wretchedness. Then, sitting up, she wiped her eyes with sudden determination and, getting to her feet, stood before the mirror. Deliberately she forced herself to obliterate the traces of her tears and to tidy her loosened hair. After all, what was one spiteful woman in a whole city full of people! Why let it get her down? Not everybody was like that old cat!

Picking up her phone she put in a call for Mrs. Peterman's boarding house. In a steady voice she left directions for Jim to call her at the hotel as soon as he returned from work. The sight of his lean face and the sound of his drawling voice across a dinner table was what she needed.

Hesitating, she almost made up her mind to call Mr. Sanders at Western Realties and tell him she would be on the job in the morning. But she thought better of it and, putting on her discarded hat again, she decided to go and see him in South) contended the government had failed to keep the people fully advised of their wartime responsibilities and of the progress of the war effort. He claimed this "constitutes a great danger to Canada."

Canadian people likely would fail to realize the seriousness of the situation if they were not told all the facts. "Canadian people can take bad news," Mr. Green said.

He urged a definite program of voluntary enlistments for overseas service and said there was no reason why the government could not say at once what men would be required fr the Canadian Active Service Force for the next year. This would give potential volunteers an opportunity to make their plans.

L. P. Picard (Lib. Bellechasse) said reliance must be placed on the fact that "the sentiment of the majority of France will prevail" on the government at Vichy and that ways will be found to prevent a clash with Britain.

"But even should things come to the worst," he said, "no one need fear anything about the sentiments of French Canadians. They will be even mbre than ever on the side of democracy and its valiant defender, Britain."

He said French Canadians admitted the necessity for the "incident at Oran" when British naval units shelled the French fleet based there, and they would still say "go ahead and do it again" if it had to be done again.

Wants Break For Farmer.

A demand that farm producers be given the same assurance of production costs plus a fair profit that the government gave manufacturers of war essentials was made by A. M. Nicholson (C.C.F. Mackenzie). He condemned the recently announced bacon agreement with Great Britain as "bad medicine" for the Canadian producers.

Arthur G. Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound) renewed the warning he voiced in the House last spring, that Canada should be on guard against "the enemy from within."

He urged the government to reinforce the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and to increase the pay of men in the force so they might receive compensation in keeping with the important work they perform.

Victor Quelch (ND Acadia) and Harry J. Leader (Lib. Portage La Prairie) both advocated payment by the government of $1 a bushel to wheat producers in Western Canada.

Plan For Wheat Crop

Mr. Quelch presented a detailed plan for handling the wheat crop in co-operation with other chief world producers. Mr. Leader would have the dollar a bushed paid only up to deliveries of 1,500 bushels so there would be no encouragement for over-production. This would put enough cash in circulation to ensure even small producers some ready money.

Harry Jackman (Con. Toronto-Rosedale) complained that each "recital" by the government was climaxed by a statement that production was ahead of schedule but members were not told what the schedule was. "In a struggle for life and freedom we can never be ahead of schedule," he said.

Conservative House Leader Hanson's remark earlier in the session that aid in the defence of Britain should be Canada's first objective was the subject of harsh comment from Wilfrid Lacroix (Lib. Quebec-Montmorency).

"No one has worked harder than he (Mr. Hanson) since the outbreak of war to disrupt national unity," Mr. Lacroix declared.

"If the present session is to have no other result than to allow our conscriptionists and imperialists to continue their work of disintegration, it cannot prorogue too soon," he added.

In his review of his department's policies, Mr. Ilsley said taxation, as far as practical, was a better method of financing than borrowing, "because it is fairer and final." "But there are practical limits beyond which taxation cannot be carried," he said.

"The government must also do some borrowing which should be, as far as possible, out of voluntary public savings."

The minister recalled that he had said in September last year that "some expansion of credit is often possible without inflation" in the early stages of a war, but should not be continued when employment and production approach their limits.

"I have not had occasion to change my basic views on this subject but I believe that the tax program of the government has been and will continue to be such that some additional financing of a short-term character, accompanied by some increase in total bank deposits, will not, under the circumstances, have inflationary results, and will, I believe, avoid undue stringency in the monetary field at a time when the working capital requirements of industry are increasing because of expanding business activity due to war orders."

Canada was now spending on the war at the rate of about $1,000,000,000 a year, but non-war expenditures for the current fiscal year were down by about $29,000,000 from the same period last year, and larger reductions would be made in the second half.

Revenue so far this fiscal year had increased by $145,000,000 over the same period a year ago, in spite of the fact that income and excess profits taxes applied last June would not be reflected in the revenues until next spring.

Start Paying Early

In this connection the minister advised income tax payers to take advantage of the opportunity to start paying their income tax before next April when it falls due.

"I trust that as many tax-payers as possible will take advantage of this plan and begin to save now for their income tax payments. Otherwise there may be a rude awakening when the magnitude of the tax payable becomes recognized," he said.

Repatriation of Canadian securities held in Great Britain to provide dollars with which the United Kingdom may buy war essentials in Canada was proceeding at a rate of about $200,000,000 a year, the minister stated.

Referring to C.C.F. claims that war production should be "on a socialistic basis," Mr. Ilsley said that theory was "thoroughly disliked and disapproved by the overwhelming majority," and to attempt adopting it now would be to dislocate industry.

Industry was co-operating with the government and "should this co-operation be not forthcoming the government has ample power to take appropriate action and will not hesitate to use it."

Council Grants

be turned over to the Midland unit. The announcement brought a broad smile to the face of Lieut.-Colonel J. C. Gamey, C.O. of the regiment, who had made an appeal to the council for some assistance to get a brass band together.

Lt.-Col. Gamey informed the council that government appropriations did not cover such items as bands, and the Midland Regiment was in the position of either getting a grant from the Counties Council or doing without the band. Their C.O. pointed out that the boys of the regiment made up as smart a unit as he had ever seen but the fact remained that when they went to train at some central point, their appearance would suffer if they were competing with other units possessing the smartness that a brass band imparts. He drew attention to the fact that in the last war the Counties Council supported the local units, contributing funds for field kitchens and bands.

The Council was in the difficult position of being about to wind up the session's business with all committee reports passed just as the time that the request of the Midland Regiment was made. However, council adjourned and located $1,000 which still remained within the budget.

Reeve Edmondstone of Bowmanville drew attention to the fact that in the June session a resolution had been passed providing for equalization of the bridges rate at the November session. This was not done, he declared, and Council was about to adjourn. There had been enough grief in the past because the road rate had not been equalized, stated the Reeve, and for that reason the bridge equalization should be settled. It was too late to do anything about it at the present session. Council found, but it was decided to have the figures prepared at the end of the year and referred to next year's council.

Two by-laws were passed, one providing for the payment of the road rebates for 1940, due April 1, 1941, and the other appointing solicitors in the Reynolds vs. the Counties case, an action for damages sustained in an accident. The Agricultural Committee's report was very brief. The committee did not approve the resolution of Waterloo County Council in which it had been recommended that the Canada Bacon Board give surplus bacon to the amount of 10,000,000 pounds as a gift of the farmers of Canada to Great Britain.

A pleasant event took place just before the session closed when Reeve Edmondstone of Bowmanville and Reeve Gooding of Brighton township presented Warden Morrow with a silver cream and sugar set with tray, on behalf of the council, in view of the fact that the Warden had recently joined the ranks of the married. In some mysterious fashion a baby's rattle had got mixed up with the silverware when it was presented to the Warden, an extra which the members of the Council greeted with glee.

Duisburg-Ruhrort. The Air Ministry News Service said the latter attack "must inevitably have disorganized essential traffic and destroyed indispensable raw materials."

The ministry also reported air victories in Africa and Albania. Ten Italian planes of a formation of 60 were shot down without a British loss in an air fight over eastern Libya. In Albania the R.A.F. blasted hangars at Tirana, the capital, and wharves at Durazzo, main Italian supply port, a communique said.

Official sources in London said today that all British bomber operations scheduled for last night were cancelled because of "unfavorable weather conditions."

Dies Turning

Democratic member of the House of Representatives said in St. Louis that the German report was "unique in American history" and that any Nazi effectiveness would be destroyed" by its contents. It was Dies who gave the report its "white paper" title prior to publication.

Aides of Dies said that he had decided to take charge personally of inquiries now under way in many cities in the hope that activities of any agents unfriendly to the United States might be discredited.

Simultaneously with the publication of Thursday's report, the committee announced agents had been sent into Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Pittsburg, Milwaukee, Cleveland, New Orleans and St. Louis seeking data.

The committee said that when Hitler came into power he made the Nazi Transocean News Service into an agency "for the dissemination of propaganda" in foreign countries and that the agency sought to place its propaganda in Canada, Mexico, and Central and South America.

The committee declared Mandred Zapp "felt himself to be under the direction and supervision of the Germany embassy." Zapp has headTransocean since 1938.

Furthermore, the report said the committee had evidence that Transocean was the chief propaganda organization of Germany in Guatamela, Mexico, Cuba, Ecuador, Argentina and Brazil.

The committee's white paper also reported relationship between the Transradio Press Service and Transocean. (Several Canadian radio stations received Transradio's short wave broadcasting service via the United States.)

TRAINEES ARRIVE FOR SECOND CAMP

MAIN STREET TOPICS

TRUCK IS STOLEN.

The Beatty Transport Company here has received word that one of the trucks belonging to the firm was stolen from the Toronto office last night.

WANT ROAD FINISHED.

An appeal to the Ontario Government for the completion of the Apsley-Bancroft highway was made by the county council this morning in a resolution introduced by Reeve M. H. Johnston.

INSPECTING CLASSES.

Roy Fenwick, director of music for the province of Ontario, was in Peterborough this week making his annual rounds of the various classes in the Peterborough schools which are under the supervision of Miss Musa Cox.

A LITTLE TWISTED

In an article which appeared in Tuesday's Examiner describing a meeting held at the Legion Hall, the organization of women was mentioned as the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion. This was incorrect and it should have read Women's Auxiliary of the War Service Council meeting at the Legion Hall.

ARMY HARNESS ORDER.

B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company have received the first order for army harness issued since the outbreak of the war. The size of it illustrates the difference in equipping the army of to-day with its mechanized units compared to conditions in the last great war when large numbers of horses were in use. The order received by the Ackerman firm is for 120 sets of harness for the use of the Forestry Corps overseas.

STOLEN CARS FOUND.

An automobile abandoned on Park Hill Road several days ago, police have discovered, was stolen from Welland. The owner has been notified. A second machine picked up here about the same time is thought to have been stolen from Barrie.

A QUIET MORNING.

For the first time in weeks there was an absolutely clean sheet at Police Court this morning. Not even a liquor charge was on the docket and the court frequenters found the door locked when they arrived at the usual time for the morning performance.

ONLOOKERS ADVISE.

Six veterans of the first draft were seen at the Exhibition Camp this morning handing out advice to the new crop of trainees reporting to-day. They were liberal with their advice upon how to best enjoy the camp, and stopped many of the new men to tell them what to expect on the inside.

GARAGES HIT.

Garage men in the city report that army enlistments and the trainee drafts has hit their staffs and at several garages the managers are hard put to meet customer demands on car repairs. Any motor mechanic who is out of work certainly has no excuse for being idle.

SHE WON THE ARGUMENT.

An interesting argument developed in a local residence a few nights ago when a man mentioned that the Chemong bridge ran north and south, and a woman replied that it ran east and west. A look at a Peterborough county map or a military aerial map will convince anyone that the bridge is much closer to running east and west than north and south.

No Delays Seen As Camp Gets Under Way

A husky smiling lot of trainees more than 500 strong jammed the entrance to Exhibition Park under the grandstand this morning waiting in a triple line to be admitted for the 30-day training period.

The first to arrive was John Albert Osborne of Millbridge, a small village north of Madoc and he came in good time, reporting in at 10.40 Thursday morning, a day ahead of schedule. By five o'clock last night 65 more had checked in most of them from Hastings county and the farm district of Northumberland.

The line began to form at seven o'clock this morning when several Peterborough boys came early in order to avoid the usual rush, and by 9.30 they were walking around the camp completely outfitted with uniform, hat and boots.

By 10 o'clock more than four hundred had passed through the gate and indications were that the quota would be in by the latest tonight.

Shortly after seven this morning upwards of 200 smart looking, young men carrying every type of suitcase and parcel walked from the C.N.R. station uptown to restaurants for a snack before trekking to the military camp.

An interesting angle to the arrival was the fact that this crowd was a gay one. There was much banter, and as one powerfully built trainee remarked, "They better put on a few more military police, the first draft were a delicate lot, compared to us."

On the day the camp opened to receive the first trainees back on October 9th, there were quite a few of the boys in tears, and mothers were on hand to bid them goodbye. The draft entering camp today were apparently made of sterner stuff, or else they have been convinced from publicity and from talking with the first draft that the camp was a real experience instead of an ordeal.

The plans for receiving and outfitting the men worked smoothly as the staff had learned many things from the first experience. There was absolutely no delay and the men who arrived yesterday were all outfitted and ready for bed early. They were fed on the grounds.

Quite a few of the men coming in this morning failed to get by the medical board, in one hour, seven men from one company had been turned down, leading many of the staff to believe that medical examinations prior to entering camp had been somewhat cursory.

Boys Of 22 Years Line For Entry To Training Camp

Contest Leaving Residue Of Estate To Hospital

Former nurses and G. N. Gordon, K.C., affirmed that Mrs. Margaret Anker, who died here on February 23 last, was mentally competent on August 10, 1934, when as a patient in St. Joseph's Hospital she revised her will which is being contested in an action begun on Thursday in the Surogate Court of the County before Judge Coleman of Whitby.

A former resident of Rochester, where she had lived for many years, and where her husband and only son are buried, Mrs. Anker had lived in Peterborough as a girl, and returned in 1932 after spending two years in Lindsay. She had suffered several strokes and preferred to stay at St. Joseph's Hospital during that period from 1932 until 1940.

In her last will, Mrs. Anker left $100 to Mrs. Anne Fagen Fox of Lindsay; $100 to Mrs. Catherine Kennedy of Rochester; a gold watch to Lawrence O'Connor of Peterborough; a seal coat to Mrs. Minnie O'Brien of Vancouver, B.C.; to Mrs. Lawrence O'Connor (Vera Hill) $300, and $300 to her son on coming of age; $100 to Ettie Hill; $5 to Mrs. Catherine Hill, Sherbrooke Street; $5 to Mrs. B. Zoofeldt, Lindsay; $200 to Leo O'Brien, son of Mrs. Minnie O'Brien; $300 to Rev. Father Guiry of Port Hope; clothing and personal effects to the House of Providence; and the residue of the estate of St. Joseph's Hospital; also $200 to the trustees of Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, Rochester.

By her first will, drawn in 1932, Mrs. Anker made various small bequests and divided the residue between her nieces, Etta Hill and Vera O'Connor, and she named Herbert Hill as executor. A codicil in 1933 substituted M. James O'Brien, Downie Street, for Mr. Hill, as executor. The final will in 1934 transferred the residue from Mrs. Anker's nieces to St. Joseph's Hospital.

G. N. Gordon as solicitor for Mrs Anker when the change was made testified that Mrs. Anker was sound in mind when she directed the new will to be drawn. The reason for the substantial alteration, Mr. Gordon related, was that Mrs. Anker said she had come to the opinion the Hills were more interested in her money than in herself.

Other witnesses were Miss Mary O'Brien, librarian and recorder at St. Joseph's Hospital, and Miss Leonore Niles of White Plains Orthopedic Hospital, New York; Mrs. Mary Campbell, Lansing, Toronto; Miss Margaret Moher of Ontario Mental Hospital, Toronto; and Mrs Marie Muir, nurses at St. Joseph's Hospital in 1934 when Mrs. Anker ordered a new will to be written.

Mrs. Catherine Hill of Peterborough and Mrs. Zoofeldt of Lindsay are sisters of the deceased. As the result of a cavet effected by Mrs. Catherine Hill at the time the will was being probated, M. James O'Brien is made the plaintiff, and the heirs are defendants. Mrs. Anker was in her eighties at the time of her death last February.

The case was adjourned yesterday afternoon until next Monday morning when the court will sit in the chamber of the County Council.

In this action, W. B. Gordon is solicitor for the executor; Jacob Low for Mrs. Catherine Hill, Etta Hill, and others; R. I. Moore, K.C., Lindsay, for Mrs. Zoofeldt; William Fox for the Sisters of St. Joseph's Hospital, and Charles P. Glover was present for the Official Guardian in behalf of L. O'Connor, the minor mentioned in the will.

The value of the estate of Mrs. Anker was not mentioned in the course of the evidence on Thursday, but it is understood to be about $7,000.

The will is being contested on the ground of alleged fraud and it is also alleged that Mrs. Anker was not of sound mind to make a last testament when the second will was drawn.

JOHN JAMES SANDY

The passing of John J. Sandy, in his 83rd year, removed a rare spirit and a most highly respected citizen from the vicinity of Omemee. There he was born, and had lived in the district all of his life.

To his friends and neighbors, Mr. Sandy was known as the soul of honor; he was free from all vestages of false pride, and his quiet and friendly disposition won, for him, the respect of all who knew him. He was a lover of his home, and was seldom long away from it. The official paper of the United Church, of which he was a member, was his constant companion.

Omemee has reason to grieve since death has taken one of its residents who made richer the village's wealth of friendship, for his love for his fellow man deepened with the years.

MRS. M. E. CROWE.

WARSAW, Nov. 22 — (ENS). — In the death of Mrs. M. E. Crowe, which took place at her home near Zion Church on Saturday, the community lost a splendid Christian woman, a good neighbor and one beloved by all.

Mrs. Crowe was in her 93rd year, and had lived in the neighborhood for over seventy years, in fact, ever since she was married. Mr. Crowe died fifty-four years ago.

When Zion Church was built she was one of the active workers, and a tea was held in the Crowe's drive shed.

Mrs. Crowe left six sons, Thomas, David, William, and Henry in the West, John in Detroit, George at Niagara; two daughters, Mrs. Bray, Toronto, and Mrs. Hoskins in Peterborough. There are two brothers, Joseph in Peterborough and David at Saskatoon, and one sister, Mrs. John Dewart, Indian River. Her hobby was flowers, and she made beautiful artificial ones. She was ill only about three weeks.

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson conducted the service in Zion Church. Mrs. William Miller, Alexander Darling, Violet Darling, and Garfield Crowe sang "My heavenly home is bright and fair."

Pall-bearers were six nephews: William, James and Edward Dewart, and Thomas H., John A., and William Crowe.

Flower-bearer was Alec Darling.

Flowers were sent by friends in the West, Toronto, Peterborough, Montreal, Ottawa, Detroit, and many old friends.

Economy In Powder

Frank C. Paterson may have strained the credence of members of the county council this morning with a sketchy story that one of the men who accompanied him on a deer hunting trip into the Parry Sound country several weeks ago killed three deer with one shot. Mr. Paterson said he heard two shots and when he arrived at the place from which the sound had come he found Reeve Harry Sirett of Cramahe township with four deer. That's the story, two shots—four deer; three of them felled with one shot. That story utterly silenced Reeve Wallace Shearer of Harvey who admitted that he didn't bag even one. Perhaps it will also reach Adam Humphries who has been hunting since he was a youth, and that was long ago, and it seems safe to say that in all those years he never heard of such an exploit, such an economy in powder and lead as three deer with one shot. Both Mr. Paterson and Mr. Sirett of Brighton are otherwise reputable citizens, and so the story will have to be accepted although it sounds like something out of Munchausen.

Fred L. Scollie Dairyman Dies

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 22.—Fred L. Scollie, proprietor of the Fort William Dairy which bears his name died Saturday after a short illness. Mr. Scollie, 72, passed away at the family home, 600 Catherine street, Fort William.

Death of Mr. Scollie brought to an end a life filled with service for his country and high-lighted, in his youth, by personal service to the late King George V, when His Majesty visited Canada as a midshipman before the end of the 19th century.

At that time Mr. Scollie was a student at a Quebec cavalry school and was honored by being picked as mounted orderly for the young prince.

Born in Peterborough, Mr. Scollie received his early education in that Eastern Ontario centre. At age 16 he enrolled in the cavalry school and attended for three years.

At the completion of his course there, Mr. Scollie joined the active service forces for service in the first Riel Rebellion. His youth, however, kept him out of action and he joined the Royal North-West Mounted Police, aiding in quelling several Indian uprisings.

An injury sustained while attempting to tame a wild horse forced Mr. Scollie out of the police service and for a short period he engaged in private enterprise. With several other men he rounded up, broke and took to England a cargo of western horses.

On his return to Peterborough, Mr. Scollie was married. At the outbreak of the Boer War, he enlisted with the 14th Fileld Battery and saw service with the 2nd Canadian contingent in South Africa. At the completion of the Boer War, he returned to Canada and continued his military activity.

In the year 1905, Mr. Scollie resigned as batter sergeant major with the Peterborough unit and moved to Fort William, where he opened a dairy business, for some time operating a store opposite the C.P.R. station. Mr. Scollie also operated a dairy in Port Arthur for several years.

He was a pioneer in the advocation of pasteurized milk and owned the first pasteurizing equipment at the Head of the Lakes. He also owned and drove the second motor truck in the Lakehead cities.

Mr. Scollie was a member of Kaministiquit Lodge, A.F. & A.M. He was also a member of Algoma Lodge, I.O.O.F. and attended St. Paul's Anglican Church, Fort William. He is survived by his wife, four sons, one daughter and one sister. Sons are Robert, Stanley; William, 733 Franklin street, Fort William; Fred, 607 South Vickers street, Fort William; and Harold, at home. His daughter, Edith, also resides at home. Mrs. W. Stewart of Peterborough is his sister.

Suburban Area Commission Makes Report

Although a detailed statement of expenditure on county and suburban roads is not usually available until January, the members of the Suburban Area Commission gave the County Council Thursday afternoon a verbal report of work done this years on roads in the system under their supervision.

The commissioners are M. H. Gainey, M. E. Smithson and J. A. Middleton.

Mr. Gainey outlined the improvements to Ennismore, North Monaghan, Westwood, Selwyn, Warsaw, Douro and other roads. He said a settlement had been made with Joseph P. Leahy, paying $300 for right-of-way for a road from the Peterborough-Warsaw road into Douro centre.

Mr. Smithson pointed out that it might seem Otonabee had "missed out" this year on suburban expenditure. He said that the policy of the commission was not to distribute its funds over the townships from year to year, but to take the long view and to "level up" expenditure over a period of years. There was some possibility that the Highways Department might pay a subsidy on the filling of Park Street ditch. Mr. Smithson said the expense on that job might be heavy if it was undertaken. The ditch on the north side of the road from Crawford's Grove was also a problem. It could not be filled, but it should have a guardrail that would cost about $1,000.

Deputy-Reeve Archibald of North Monaghan called attention to the sewer connections that are being made on Monaghan Road north of Sherbrooke Street. The permanent surface was being broken for these connections, and some action should be taken to have the road restored to the condition in which it was before it is broken up. He suggested that the county should adopt the city's policy of requiring a deposit to be made before sewer connections were permitted.

Reeve Johnston said a good job was made on Monaghan Road where a sewer was laid into Exhibition Park for the military camp. The city puts its new roller on that work and left the road in good condition.

A vote of thanks was extended to the Suburban Area Commission by Reeve Johnston, seconded by Reeve M. Coughlin.

Reeve Anderson hinted to the Commission that he hoped it would not be too long until Keene had a permanently surfaced road and that its work in that section should be done on No. 6 line instead of the road south through Zion and east. The most of the traffic to Keene was now going the other way.

Warden McColl said the people in Asphodel were well satisfied with the road work done by the Commission in and around Westwood this year.

Plenty Of Feed Stock Starving

A pure-bred Holstein bull dead in a stable, a valuable sow dead in a field, and other high-class cattle in a starving condition were some of the things found by Provincial Constable David Silvester when he investigated a complaint from Harvey Township.

As a result a charge will be laid against a well-known farmer of failing to feed his stock.

It is stated that there was an ample supply of feed in the barns, but in spite of that fact the animals on the farm all showed evidence of starvation. The farmer was similarly charged several years ago, and on that occasion was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Driver Injured In Collision

Thrown against the steering wheel of his automobile after his machine and a taxicab had met in collision at the intersection of Park and Romaine streets last Thursday night John Shaughnessy, 10 Haggart street, sustained injuries to his nose and lip.

Shaughnessy had been driving his car south on Park street and at the Romaine street intersection was making a left turn when a taxi owned by Darrell Rose and driven by Kenneth Fife, George street, moving north on Park street came into collision with Shaughnessy's car. Both vehicles were very badly damaged by the impact. After the crash the taxicab was forced over the sidewalk and collided with a tree at the northeast corner of the intersection.

Shaughnessy was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital where he was found to have a lacerated upper lip and a fracture of a bone in his nose.

WHAT PRICE GLORY?

A salesman in a downtown clothing store was asked this week if his store carried ribbons for soldiers. This is quite a routine request, ribbons are sold every day, but this time it was a little unusual, for the customer was a woman.

Proudly pointing to the stock of ribbons, that was almost complete, the clerk asked which of the ribbons the questioner wanted.

"Oh, I don't think it really matters," she said. "George is a cook down at the Exhibition camp, and all of the fellows down there seem to have these pretty ribbons on their tunics. Some have two, and some have three."

Then she looked over the ribbons, and was "simply enchanted" with the appearance of several.

"I think I'd like these," she said, and handed her attendant three of the most vivid.

Then came the sad news that her George was not privileged in the direction of military ribbons, and that they could not be worn unless he had, so to speak, won them. In spite of the persuasive power of the salesman, she left the store reluctantly, and said that she would certainly look into the matter, and furthermore, would find out from George just which of the ribbons he would like to wear. So far, the salesman has triumphed, and George is within the law, but without his ribbons.

Christmas Trees Boost War Chest

OTTAWA, Nov. 22 — (CP). — War or no war Canada's Christmas tree trade is growing and, according to the bulletin of the Department of Mines and Resources, this increased trade offers no serious threat to Canada's forests.

"Under proper management the present cut could be produced in perpetuity on an area of less than 200 square miles," says the bulletin.

Indiscriminate and wasteful methods used by some tree dealers are condemned, but the orderly cutting and marketing of the annual crop provides the basis for a legitimate and profitable industry. Within the past few years, a scarcity of suitable trees has been experienced in some localities with the result that many farmers are now growing the Christmas trees on managed plantations.

So Canada's Christmas trees will be harvested this year in thousands and a big percentage of the crop will go to the United States.

"In addition to supplying a supplementary source of revenue to Canadian farmers, this year the export of Christmas trees to the United States will help establish foreign exchange for the purchase of war supplies," the bulletin points out.

Nazis In Mouths Of Own AA Guns

LONDON, Nov. 22 — (CP). — Three times within one week Spitfire pilots have chased German raiders across the English Channel and shot them down within range of their own anti-aircraft guns.

"We chased 50 Messerschmitt 109's from over London and came into range half-way between Dover and Cap Gris Nez," the Air Ministry News Service quoted one pilot as saying. "As we approached the French coast we continued to attack. The enemy were in a ragged looking formation. One of our chaps got the first one. I got the second."

Before returning to his base the same pilot spotted a Heinkel 111 lying in the water just off the French coast. A second Heinkel and eight Messerschmitt 109's were circling around it. He attacked the circling Heinkel and sent it into the sea to join the first.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—(AP).—Huge long range bombers and bomb sights to go with them made up a new installment today in the United States program of aid to Britain.

The army announced that 26 four-motored Consolidated bombers were being made available for British purchase, disclosed that the Sperry bombsight had been released, and indicated that 20 "flying fortresses" might be the next installment of aerial assistance.

The Consolidated bombers, credited with a 3,000-mile range, would be capable of carrying a full bomb load to almost any existing target area in Europe From bases in the British Isles, they could strike at any objective within 1,500 miles and then return. Or they could operate on even longer missions by shuttling between airdromes in Britain and British bases in the Mediterranean theatre.

The release of those bombers was made known by Gen. George C. Marshal, army chief of staff, at a press conference yesterday. He announced that the 26 bombers originally ordered by the United States army from the Consolidated Aircraft Company at San Diego, Calif., were being made available for purchase by Britain as fast as they came off the production line.

Delivery Started

It was his understanding, he said, that the first of these planes was delivered last Saturday and that the others would be turned over at a steadily increasing rate between now and March 1.

Marshall revealed at the same time that the United States army already had made available to Britain the Sperry bombsight—a mechanism used by the United States Air Corps before the present jealously guarded Norden bombsight replaced it. Some military sources describe the Sperry sight as very effecient equipment, although it does not match the high efficiency of the newer Norden sight.

Marshall said flatly that no bombers released for British purchase would have the Norden sight, which has been developed by the Navy and subsequently adopted by both branches of the United States armed services.

The chief of staff then announced that the negotiations were under way for the release of 20 B-17C bombers—the long distance "flying fortresses" made by the Boeing Aircraft Corporation of Seattle, Wash.

Asked if these planes would be ones already delivered to the United States army or others scheduled for delivery in the near future, he said that would depend upon whether it was faster to substitute the Sperry for the secret Norden bombsight in existing planes or in machines still on the production line.

In his announcement that Britain were being given priority on first deliveries of B-24 bombers, the four-engined ships just beginning to come from the Consolidated Aircraft plant, Gen. Marshall said that the United States was receiving in return sufficient engines to equip 41 of the Boeing B-17C "Flying Fortresses."

Britain ordered these engines from an American plant early in the war, he explained. Unless the army obtained them, he said, it would have no power plants for the 41 "Flying Fortresses" recently delivered without engines or to be delivered before Jan. 1.

From the viewpoint of the United States, Gen. Marshall said, the primary purpose of releasing the "Flying Fortresses" was to obtain "an actual service test" of the B-17C. In addition, he added, this government would receive "at least the equivalent of these planes."

Union Heads Fight

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21 (AP)—David Dubinsky, president of International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, and Joseph Fay, vice president of the International Union of Operating Engineers, early to-day figured in a series if fist-fights following a discussion of an anti-racketeering resolution before the American Federation of Labor convention.

Job Netting $300 Sees Union Nab $57 'Fees'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—(AP).—Robert Bruskin, Washington Star reporter, who never did a lick of carpentering, told how he got a carpenter's job at Fort Meade, Md., where, he said, the pay is $75 a week or more (counting overtime).

At Fort Meade a construction company is doing a great deal of building to house National Guardsmen and draftees. There has been a heavy demand for carpenters. As a foreman explained to Bruskin, "all the good carpenters got hired a couple of weeks ago, but we can use anybody who even looks like a carpenter and can drive a nail."

Bruskin, in a story to the Star, said he waited in line for hours in a chilly wind, along with cab drivers, clerks, laborers, farmers, miners and others eager to become carpenters.

"You Gotta Join."

Finally he reached the window of the employment office.

The manager pulled out a small printed form.

"Your name?" he asked. "Your address — y'married — who'll we notify in case of death—d'y' belong to the union—well, you gotta join—sign here."

Then Bruskin said he joined another line of men leading to a shack where three "collar-and-necktie" officials of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America (American Federation of Labor) were signing up new union members at an initiation fee of $57.50.

"The man who signed me up," Bruskin wrote, "complained that he hadn't had a breath of fresh air for a week because of the number of men joining the union. He guessed maybe 1,000 or 2,000 men had signed up and agreed to pay the initiation fee. There was no chance of working without joining, I was told.

"I said I had no money. (It was the day before pay day). But he smiled.

Given Time To Pay.

"'That's all right, buddy. You don't have to pay now. But come in Friday and pay up $23.50 and pay the rest of the $57.50 in the next two weeks.'

"I asked about dues. He seemed somewhat surprised, and a couple of other applicants waiting their turn snickered.

"'Do you think you'll be working more than a month here?' he replied.

"I quickly learned that few of the 'hammer and saw' carpenters intended to remain union members after completion of the job unless other work could be obtained on Government contracts nearby. They considered it an employment fee, similar to that which a private employment agency might charge to find a job for an applicant."

Nittany Turkey An 8-Pound Bird

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 22.—(AP). — The Thanksgiving turkey of the future, a bird bred to suit small family pocketbooks, has been developed by the Pennsylvania College Department of Poultry Husbandry.

This new breed is small, under 12 pounds, its growth limited by heredity. It is a cross between wild turkeys and domestic.

It is named the Nittany turkey in honor of Nittany Mountain which overlooks State College.

This experiment in heredity took nine years, first in State College laboratories and then on Pennsylvania farms, until the poultry scientists were sure they had a true-breeding, marketable bird that appealed to diners.

Three years after the State College experiment started, the United States Department of Agriculture took up the work as a national need, due to the smaller size of American families and the wish of housewives for smaller and smaller birds.

At that time, the average for small birds was 12 to 15 pounds. The Nittany birds run down to eight pounds. The big birds that run up to 40 pounds are 90 per cent. of the present United States turkey crop, and are suited particularly to hotels.

Mail With Davy Jones

OTTAWA, Nov. 22—(CP).—Post office officials said Thursday they "understood" the Canadian steamship Beaverford was sunk recently by a German raider, and if that were so a number of bags of mail addressed to Canadian soldiers serving overseas would be lost. Many parcels of tobacco and cigarettes were included in the mail shipment, it was said.

(The Beaverford sent out a distress signal November 5, saying she was being shelled by an enemy vessel. No further report has been received on her whereabouts).

Suspect Russia Balked At Triple Pact

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—(AP).—Hungary's admission to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance was looked upon by informed diplomats here last night as a possible indication that other countries, notably Russia, had baulked at formally joining in the triple pact.

Some significance was attached by these sources to the fact that out of all the negotiations going on in Germany and elsewhere for some time, Hungary should be the first to become a full-fledged partner since Japan joined the Axis.

Hungary was a member of the original German-Italian-Japanese anti-Comintern pact which Germany promoted against Russia before those two countries were reconciled in 1939, and long has been regarded here as an obedient associate of Germany.

The Vienna ceremony which took Hungary into the pact was interpreted here also as a probable forerunner of a German military move southeast to help the Italians against Greece.

But diplomats speculated on why such formal display was considered necessary to permit this.

It thus was regarded as a sign that Russia, and possibly Spain, might have demurred at joining the alliance, and that Germany, wanting something to display as a diplomatic achievement, had chosen Hungary for this immediate role.

It was pointed out in these quarters that in the week since Russian Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff was in Berlin the only public announcement of the results of his talks was the non-committal communique that "mutual accord" had been reached "on all important questions of interest" to both countries.

Not Ready Yet

Spain's Foreign Minister, Ramon Serano Suner, has made two recent trips to Germany in circumstances which indicated the Axis is seeking to bring Spain into the war, or at least into the Triple Alliance, but no change in its status has yet become apparent.

Diplomatic quarters explained that both Russia and Spain appeared to be co-operating with the Axis and might yet become more active partners, but they considered it possible that neither is ready yet for such a development.

Spain's internal situation and especially its lack of food was given in these quarters as a reason for that country's possible reluctance with the Axis

In the case of Russia, diplomats here said there appeared to be no advantage to be gained by that country in joining the Triple Alliance or otherwise assuming a more important role in Germany's "new order."

Tame Turkeys

Short Changers At Work In Tweed District

TWEED, Nov. 22—(ENS).—Local merchants of the district have been advised to be on the look-out for two short change artists who have been operating in Central Ontario towns. Their practice is to purchase a small article, and then issue a $20 bill in payment, and then create an argument on the change. Several merchants in nearby towns have been victimized.

Tweed High School Rugby team lost to Stirling High School in the round robin series; total points to count. The first game was won by Stirling on their own grounds by a 9-4 count, while they came back to trounce the Tweed team 9-7 on their own grounds, winning the round 18-11. A snow-covered field greeted the teams, but the visitors apparently found it to their liking.

Nabs Fawn Barehanded

When "Bob" Palmateer, Hungerford Township nimrod, goes hunting, he bring home his quarry, even if he had to use his bare hands. It seems that Palmateer was waiting patiently on a Denbigh runway for the deer to appear and suddenly a fawn crashed through the thicket. The hunter let fly by the first shot struck the animal in the nose and the second in the tail.

The deer was only slightly wounded but the dogs were quickly on its trail, and Mr. Palmateer went in pursuit as well. According to the story told by his fellow hunters, "Bob" finally managed to reach the weakened animal and seized it by the horns. He was successful in manoeuvring it near a tree where he braced himself and then shouted for other hunters in the immediate vicinity to come to his assistance

HAVE you ever thought of your bank as a citizen, taxpayer, employer and consumer? Your bank strives to be a good citizen — to render a useful service for a moderate remuneration. ¶ AS A TAXPAYER, your bank pays heavy sums to your community, your province and the Dominion — Canada's chartered banks paid over $9,000,000 last year alone; $42,000,000 in the last five years. ¶ AS AN EMPLOYER your bank and other chartered banks in Canada furnish employment to thousands of persons who are an asset of real value to the Community and to the Dominion. The banks paid last year over $35,000,000 in wages — in the last five years, $174,000,000 — a direct distribution of buying power all over Canada. The value of the services rendered by our men and women workers cannot be appraised in dollars. Their efficiency, courtesy and integrity are largely responsible for the goodwill and pleasant relations between Canada's chartered banks and the people they serve. ¶ AS A CONSUMER the bank is a customer of your utilities — water, light, power; it pays rent, buys fuel, office equipment, telephone and telegraph services, everything needed in modern business.

In war, as in peace, Canada's Chartered Banks maintain, uninterrupted, their useful services — safeguarding depositors' funds; facilitating the nation's business — looking forward to peace with freedom as the only sure basis of enduring prosperity.

Economics, Social Changes In Laws Affecting Women Outlined To Local Council

Various Economic and Social changes in laws, particularly concerning women and children, were outlined Thursday afternoon by W. R. Philp, barrister, at a meeting of the Local Council of Women in the Y.W.C.A. He referred to the Old-age Pension and Mothers' Allowance as a reflection of socialistic thought, as well as the Married Women's Act, which permits women to contract property in their own name, and the change in the fundamental law of wills, making it impossible for a man to "mark his wife as a fool by omitting her name in his will." Today a woman and her children have the first charge for maintenance from her husband's estate.

Mr. Philp paid tribute to the Children's Aid Society, which, under a Provincial Legislation, looks after the interest of children, providing homes for those who require them; giving medical attention and doing other work of which the general public often has no knowledge. The organization works in conjunction with the Public Welfare Department of Toronto, and is supported in many cases by voluntary means.

The speaker told also of the workings of the Juvenile Court, and the Court of Domestic Relations, which cover an important work in connection with domestic duplicity, disputes, and juvenile delinquincy. "In the cities where these courts operate, they have been recognized as great assets," Mr. Philp said. "Since the founding of the Juvenile Court in the City of Ottawa, of over one thousand cases annually, only 60 per cent ever reach the court— the others are settled amicably outside. Juvenile delinquicy has fallen off 22 per cent," he stated. The Children's Dependent Relief Act, which forces children to provide for parents unable to care for themselves, was also outlined.

"Almost every act affects women and children to a certain degree," Mr. Philp said as he pointed out that old English Common Laws, from which our present-day laws grew, were set to favor women and children.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. J. S. Cridland, and thanked by Mrs. B. W. Harvey.

Mrs. C. M. Scott gave a report on a special constitution formulated for the Peterborough Local Council, which will go to the National Council of Women for approval. Council members endorsed the resolution of the City Council for free transportation of soldiers; Mrs. E. Wand, president, urged women to use more Canadian apples, the "national fruit", thereby assisting in disposing of the surplus; Mrs. N. Stanger and Mrs. K. Simpson were appointed transportation conveners to the annual meeting of the Provincial Council of Women in Toronto, December 5 and 6.

Announcement was made of the Local Council tea to be held next Thursday afternoon at the Y.W.C.A., when life membership certificates will be presented by Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., and Alderman James Dutton. Mrs. W. Hepburn was heard in an enjoyable solo with Mrs. F. Grey at the piano.

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—My husband having recently died, I am about to make my home with my daughter, my son-in-law and their two teenage children. I do so want to get along with them and not be a typical mother-in-law. What are the Ten Commandments for mothers-in-law who live with their married children? WIDOW.

First—Don't do it unless it is absolutely financially necessary. If you have enough money to live even in the plainest way, have your own little home, even if it is only one room and you cook your own meals on a gas plate. Have some place that belongs to you where you can do exactly as you please and know the joy of independence.

Second—Remember always that you are a guest in your in-law's home and conduct yourself like one. It is not a guest's privilege to criticize her host or to interfere in any way with the way the house is run and the children are reared. Fall in with your in-law's ways and adapt yourself to them, no matter whether you like them or not.

Third—Don't always be underfoot. Don't pre-empt the back seat of the automobile. Don't always be among those present when your daughter and her husband have company. Don't have your feelings hurt if you are not invited to go everywhere they are. Don't make them feel that they have to drag you around wherever they go. Spend a lot of your time in your own room. Every husband and wife want to be alone together much of the time and to have provate conversations without mother listening in on them.

Fourth—Keep out of the kitchen unless you are specifically invited. If your daughter does her own housework, she has her own little ways of cooking things in which any outsider meddles at her peril. If she keeps a cook, she will probably give notice and quit the first time you poke your nose in the door and begin inspecting the garbage can.

Fifth—Don't give unsolicited advice. No doubt the way you kept house and brought up your children and managed your husband was far better than your daughter's way, but it will get on her nerves to have to listen to you tell it over and over again.

Sixth—Don't interfere with the children. Bite your tongue off before you voice any criticism of the way your daughter is rearing her children. Don't start a fight every time Sally goes out of the house by asking her mother if she is going to let her go with a skirt that short, or slacks, or whatever she has on, and with paint on her face, too. Don't say you don't know what the world is coming to when children of 15 or 16 are allowed to use the automobile and have dates and go out at night. It won't do any good and you will just make yourself unpopular.

Seventh—Don't feel that you are called upon to reform your son-in-law. Just because he is giving you a home doesn't give you any right to interfere with all of his personal habits and regulate his diet. What he eats is between himself and his own stomach and is no concern of yours.

Eighth—Cultivate some interests of your own so that you won't be driven by sheer boredom into hanging, like the Old Woman of the Sea, around your daughter's neck all the time and meddling with her affairs. Get busy with church work or hospital work or political work. Join clubs. Knit sweaters. There is an endless need for intelligent, healthy, middle-aged women to help along causes.

Ninth—If you are a healthy woman under 70, get yourself a job. Don't be satisfied to just sit down on a do-nothing stool for the ballanceof your life. You have 30 years probably of good work in you yet and you will be so much happier if you have something to do.

Tenth—The last commandment is the same as the first: Don't go to live with your daughter if you can possibly avoid it. It won't make for your daughter's happiness nor for yours.

When "Best Friend" Steals Your Husband

Dear Dorothy Dix—My husband has told me that he and my nearest and dearest girl friends are lovers and intend to continue as such. He says he loves me and will never give me up; that there is no one who could ever take my place; that I fill a very definite need for him, but he must also have this friend.

This has nearly killed me, for I adore my husband, and he is furious with me because I am so upset over it. He says I am making a lot out of nothing. That I have lost nothing and will [illegible] a great deal, because it will m[illegible] him so happy and give him such peace of mind that he will be more agreeable at home. He also says that the thing that will keep him the most in love with me is for me to be gay and happy.

He has forbidden me to let my false friend know that I know anything about this affair and has ordered me to treat her just as I have always done. Is there any solution to this awful mess? I am at my wits' end. HOPE.

Answer—Philandering husbands and best friends who are husband-snatchers are common enough, more is the pity, but your husband has, so to speak, gilded the lily and painted the rose in expecting you to enjoy their little romance with them.

That is a little too much. Women are not noted for their sense of humor, and it would take one with a funny bone as big as a mastadon's skeleton to see how comical the situation is and be gay and lighthearted over it.

There are rules to all games and one of the principal ones has been that unfaithful husbands should, at least, show their wives the courtesy of keeping their affairs secret and not flaunting them in their faces.

Also, men who had any decency left in them did not force their

V.O. Nurses Have Work on Home Front

Keeping up the morale on the home front is the new war-time task of the Victorian Order of Nurses, and a movement is on foot to bring a branch of the organization to Peterborough the first of the year. Tales are coming in from all parts of Canada as to the manner in which the Victorian Order of Nurses is bringing comfort and cheer to the homes of soldiers' dependents, and in the picture ABOVE is shown a typical scene in which a V.O. nurse is bidding goodbye after a visit to a mother and her family.

Three V.O. Nurses Planned In Peterborough's Set Up

Definite steps toward establishment of a Victorian Order of Nurses' branch in Peterborough were taken Thursday night when the Provisional Committee appointed to make the necessary arrangements met in the Council Chamber with Alderman James Dutton in the chair.

A high standard of health among the civilian population is the ultimate objective of the Victorian Order of Nurses, which carries on its work in 91 districts of Canada. In cities where this group carries on its work, thousands of visits are made each year into homes where skilled part-time nursing is needed. Those who can afford to pay the fee and those in less fortunate circumstances receive the same kindly and efficient service. The deficit in the V.O.N. budget is made up by grants and through the support of citizens.

Bedside nursing with teaching in the homes, as well as aid in the prevention of disease and the maintenance of health are among primary objects of the R.V.O. The services of a trained nurse are within the reach of all, and in places where this service is operated the maternal death rate has been tremendously reduced.

It is the intention of the local association to employ three V.O. nurses, Alderman Dutton explained, one of whom will be Miss Helen Anderson, who has for many years worked under the auspices of the Peterborough Health Association, which will be discontinuing its nursing service at the end of the present year.

The work will be organized in Peterborough under the direction of Miss Ross, who is at present in charge of the Victorian Order of Nurses' work in Cornwall, where she has carried on most successfully. She will commence activities the first of the year. An annual meeting is to be held during the second week of January, 1941, when it is hoped a permanent organization will be brought about.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has impounded services rendered to their policy-holders and maintained a staff of fully qualified nurses, but where the Victorian Order of Nurses is organized this work is carried on by members of the Order. In all probability when the V.O. begins operations in Peterborough, the work now being done by the Metropolitan Nurses will be undertaken by a member of the organization.

Alderman Dutton and Fred J. Overend were appointed to interview certain manufacturers, and appeals are to be made to service clubs. Charles Elliott is to be in charge of publicity. A membership in the Victorian Order of Nurses is one dollar per person, and memberships, which will be welcomed, may be forwarded to the treasurer of the Association, F. C. Potter, Manager of the Bank of Toronto, Peterborough.

St. Paul's S.S. Rooms Crowded For Festive Tea

St. Paul's Church Sunday School rooms took on a festive air Thursday afternoon for the bazaar, tea and sale of Christmas cake of the Ladies' Aid Society. The yuletide notes of lighted Christmas trees and spruce boughs, though in evidence, were not as noticeable as in former years, patriotic themes coming to the fore on the tea table, and in the flags draping piano and gaily decked booths, where many types of handiwork, useful Christmas gifts, homemade candy, fruit cake, and garden products were sold.

Receiving the large number of guests were Mrs. W. H. Hill, honorary president; Mrs. H. G. McKenzie, president, Mrs. R. J. Goring, first vice-president, and Mrs. A. T. Barr. Hostesses were Mrs. W. A. Burrell, Mrs. R. Ross, Mrs. H. Morgan.

Delightful songs were given by Mrs. L. R. Mitchell, with Mrs. W. J. Gordon at the piano, and Miss Helen Clarkson, accompanied by Mrs. Adam Sands. Mrs. W. J. Moorhead was tea room convener, and presiding at the lace-covered table with its red, white and blue tapers and bowl of white chrysanthemums, were Mrs. F. Weir, Mrs. James Dutton, Mrs. E. Mahood, Mrs. H. Dodds, Miss Graham. Mrs. D. W. Clarke was in charge of tea arrangements, assisted by Mrs. R. McWilliams, Mrs. Adam Sands, Mrs. J. Grierson, Mrs. J. Watson. Tea room hostesses were Mrs. A. Rudd, Miss F. McNaughton, Mrs. A. Powers, Mrs. J. E. Hill, Mrs. M. Fry, Mrs. W. McBride, Mrs. F. Board, Mrs. Geo. Coleman, Sr., Mrs. G. H. Simpson, Miss Maude Finnie. Mrs. Thos. Smith and Mrs. Wm. Easton assisted in the kitchen, and Mrs. Thos. Henry was treasurer. Individual tea table, laid with green-checked covers, had centres of spruce green and scarlet berries.

British Women Work With Men In Raid Areas

By GLADYS ARNOLD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 22—(CP).—The volunteer services, the adaptability of women to new work and extraordinary conditions in the Battle of Britain drew high tribute from Canada's Director of Material Resources, R. J Waterous, who has return to Ottawa with War Services Minister J. G. Gardiner, after four weeks in England. Mr. Waterous is Mayor of Brantford, Ont.

"The morale is something that cannot be described—it leaves one speechless and humble," he said in an interview with The Canadian Press.

If Canadian citizens want to make a real contribution to the defence of London—mobile canteens for the A.R.P. (Air Raids Precaution) workers are urgently needed, Mr. Waterous said.

"This body of men, fighting fires and searching debris for entombed persons; these women helping them calmly with never a glance upward though planes drone overhead have shown matchless courage and heroism," Mr. Waterous continued. "But they need more mobile canteens so they may have a cup of tea and a sandwich served to them while fighting."

During his weeks in London Mr. Waterous spent many hours each day among the civilians. He discussed the voluntary work done by women with Mrs. Vincent Massey, wife of Canada's High Commissioner.

Mrs. Massey gave him a message to carry back to Canada. "It should be borne in mind that people bombed out here have lost all their possessions and there is an urgent need of clothing. Some has already been sent from Canada prepaid to the port of embarkation—but to be really helpful it should be prepaid to London," she said. A corps of volunteer Canadian and British women is prepared to distribute these shipments.

Hostels Carry On

Mr. Waterous visited many of the hostels carried on by Canadian women for soldiers in London. In one he saw a woman sitting under a glass roof making sandwiches. The siren sounded. In a few moments the air raid warden on his round told her to take shelter. She remained where she was, saying "I have to get these sandwiches done because the lads will be in for them soon."

Mr. Waterous told of being asked to a luncheon and finding a neat card on the house door saying a time bomb had dropped in the back garden and the luncheon would be held in a club. While reading, the door opened and an old servant apologized for his being inconvenienced. Mr. Waterous asked him what he was doing there, and the butler replied. "Somebody must stay and look after things—it's only my duty, sir."

Mr. Waterous visited docks, shipyards, factories and munition works all over England, Wales and Scotland. He saw many women turning out shells. Talking to one young girl who until three months before had never worked in a factory and knew nothing of the delicate instruments she now used expertly, Mr. Waterous asked her how she liked her work. "Fine," she replied, "I feel I'm doing a bit to help." She told him she cycled eight miles to work in the morning and back home at night.

Spirit Unbroken

Mr. Waterous saw a shop with all the windows boarded up, displaying a sign saying "We're shuttered, not shattered." Another had all windows blown out and a sign went up "Open as usual." The next night another bomb took another big chunk out of the building. Another sign went up: "More open than usual."

Visits to the "tubes" or underground railway stations to see the million sleepers there left an unforgettable impression, said Mr. Waterous.

"All—men, women and children—had expressions of such fearless serenity—and determination — there was something in their faces I couldn't name—but it somehow was unlike anything I'd ever seen before."

Invariably where there were families, the father lay with his arm around his wife, the wife with her arm around the youngest child and then the other children—the whole setting of confidence and protective care was one of the most moving things he had seen, Mr. Waterous said.

Obituary

MRS. CECELIA DUNLAY.

MARMORA, Nov. 22. — After about three weeks' illness, Mrs. Cecelia Dunlay passed quietly away at her home here about 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon. She celebrated her 83rd birthday on October 28, and until the past few weeks was remarkably active for one of her age. She liked to meet people and her legion of friends were always glad to meet her so that through the years she was busy and happy. She gave her support to every worthy cause and seldom missed any event held in aid of any of the local churches, the Women's Institute, or other local organizations.

She was a devout member of the Sacred Heart Church, and for many years was particularly active in its various activities including the Catholic Women's League of the Sacred Heart. Friendly and sympathetic, with a keen and kindly sense of humor, she made many friends who will regret her passing.

The late Mrs. Dunlay was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Crawford, pioneer residents of Marmora Township or Village. Her husband, the late Daniel Dunlay, who was a prominent business man in the early years of Marmora, predeceased her in 1902.

Through the many changes which took place during her life time the late Mrs. Dunlay kept abreast of the changing times and was always young in spirit. Many will recall the occasion a few years ago when Marmora Agricultural Society put on an "old time dance" which drew a record attendance, Mrs. Dunlay and Mr. D. E. Bell, now of Peterborough, won first prize for the best dancers at the event. Mr. Bell stated that Mrs. Dunlay had taught him to dance and their graceful and clever dancing won rounds of applause. Her home was always a social centre where friends loved to gather.

The late Mrs. Dunlay is survived by three sons, Bert of Duluth, Minn., J. Edward and Harry at home, and one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Deacon, and one granddaughter, Miss Rita Deacon, both of whom resided with the deceased. She is also survived by two brothers, John and Bert Crawford, of Marmora Township.

The funeral was held on Monday forenoon and was very largely attended. Leaving her late residence at 9.45 a.m. it proceeded to Sacred Heart Church, where High Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. Father H. J. Farrell. Interment took place in Sacred Heart Cemetery. The pallbearers were F. D. O'Connor, H. R. Pearce, C. W. Gladney, T. R. Warren, John Murray, and Daniel Shannon.

Among the out-of-town friends attending the funeral were: Mrs. J. M. Bacon and Mr. and Mrs. A. McCallum of Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson, Eldorado; Mrs. Minnie Hugle and Edward, of Belleville; Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Ells, Ottawa; Mrs. Walter Allore, Belleville; Mrs. Charles Fennell, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Turcotte, Buffalo, N.Y.; Mrs. Fannie McCann, person. At least, she told herself, she'd have nothing to fear there!

The typewriter at her desk was clicking under the fingers of a strange girl when she opened the door of the office. From his end of the room Barney, the office boy, stared at her blankly for a moment, then brought out a hesitating "Hello, there!"

His blue eyes wavered before her glance and went quickly to the other girl's bent head, and back again.

"Is Mr. Sanders in?" Lona asked, and Barney ducked his red head toward the inner office with an air of what looked like relief. As she passed his desk, she saw her own picture staring up at her from the paper he had flung down hastily at her entrance, and her face burned in sudden apprehension. Was it possible that even here . . . her steps lagged as she reached Mr. Sanders' door. It took courage to open it. She thought of the words the landlady had screamed at her only a little while back, and squared her shoulders as she marched into the room.

wives to associate with their mistresses or bring their light o' loves into their homes. But your husband has broken all of these regulations of even the Association of Amalgamated Bounders.

As you appear to still love the cad and say nothing about leaving him, there is nothing that you can do except to take his advice to be gay and merry-hearted. But I would certainly draw the line at singing a joyous carol with the girl friend. I would let her do a solo, tra-la-la.

But your husband really should emigrate to some country where wives come in bunches instead of one at a time, as is the narrow and restricted custom in this country.

You Grope in the Dark When You Don't Budget

Plan for the Things You Want

"Where does the money go?" moans Sally. She and Fred are always in the dark about money matters. And in the red, too!

"It's a budget we need," says Sally, and starts by listing all their expenses for a month. They begin to see daylight ahead!

They find they've been spending 30 per cent. of their income for rent. "Let's move to that little house and put the rent to 20 per cent.," says Fred.

That saving alone will enable them to buy the new refrigerator Sally's been wanting.

"Why's the grocery bill so high?" asks Fred. "Plain extravagance!" says Sally. "Hereafter we'll have stew sometimes instead of steak. Evaporated milk's as good as fresh for cooking, and I'll save about half on the cost."

What she saves goes toward her new dress, and there's enough left over for movies, too.

Budget to have the things you want! Our 32-page booklet gives you an easy-to-follow budget plan, helps you to check money leaks, buy efficiently, save for the new car or furniture. Has ruled pages for a year's entries.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO BUDGET AND BUY FOR BETTER LIVING to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN NOT TO LEAD TOP

AVERAGE players are usually taught that they should lead their top card when opening the suit bid by their partners. For years expert players violated that upon proper occasion until finally along came the late Wilbur C. Whitehead with advice as to just when a different card usually was a better lead. First of all, it was generally when you held at least four cards of your partner's suit, lacking the ace or touching honors. Secondly, it was when you had reason to believe the declarer had a secondary honor such as a twice guarded queen, which might get knocked off by you if you underled three headed by the ace or queen. In this case leading high would establish his card.

	♠ K Q ♥ K J 10 9 3 ♦ Q 6 3 2 ♣ 6 3
♠ 10 2 ♥ 8 7 6 5 4 ♦ 2 ♣ K J 8 2	N. W. E. S.	♠ J 5 3 ♥ A Q ♦ J 10 8 5 ♣ A 10 7 4
	♠ A 9 8 7 6 4 ♥ None ♦ A K 7 4 ♣ Q 9 5

(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♥
Pass	5 ♦	Pass	5 ♠

Everybody hates to be in a contract of five in a major suit or four in No Trumps, because it merely makes your job harder than being in a bare game, without any concomitant rewards for the greater risk. But South was lucky this time, because he had in the West a defender who always leads the top of his partner's suit.

After winning the first trick, West repeated with the J, won by the A, and East made it a third round, hoping that by forcing the dummy to ruff he could protect his own trump honor. But the Q won, a diamond being discarded, leaving declarer in position to have three rounds of high trumps. A small spade to the Q made possible one heart ruff, another to the K was followed by a second heart ruff, setting up the suit, and the spade A settled East's J. The diamond Q was an entry now to dummy, from which a heart furnished a diamond discard, making the contract.

If West had led his fourth-best club to the A, a club return would have trapped the Q, the third round of the suit compelling dummy to ruff. That would have made it impossible to shut out East's spade J, which would then have taken the setting trick.

Mrs. McLauchlin Again Heads Havelock Red Cross Group

HAVELOCK, Nov. 22 — (ENS). — Holding their annual meeting on Monday afternoon in the council chamber, with a representative gathering in attendance, the Havelock-Belmont Red Cross Society re-elected Mrs. Andrew McLauchlin to a second term as president of that organization.

T. P. Lancaster, honorary chairman, presiding for the election of officers, briefly addressed the members. Stating that it was an honor and privilege to be associated with Red Cross work, Mr. Lancaster endorsed the remarks of Reeve E. W. The following appointments were made also, when Mrs. McLauchlin resumed the chair, after the elections: Honorary president, Mrs. (Dr). Jos. Holdcroft; chairman of the executive, Reeve E. W. Seeney; social committee, Mrs. R. Jones, convener, Miss Edna Haig, Mrs. D. J. Holdcroft, Mrs. G. Rutherford, Miss Margaret Voyer, and Mrs. T. P. Lancaster; packing committee, Mrs. R. J. McCutcheon, Mrs. Clare Price, Mrs. A. Anderson, Mrs. S. Southward, Mrs. J. Anderson, and Mrs. H. Davies.

Opening at 3 o'clock with the National Anthem and prayer, the first part of the meeting included the presentation of reports from the different committees.

Total receipts amounted to $984.87 according to the report presented by the auditors, Miss E. Wright and Miss K. Anderson, and expenditures were $716.97.

Splendid Lot of Wool

The work-room report given by Mrs. A. Anderson was as follows: material shipped during past year, 50 quilts, 19 blankets, 92 pairs wristlets, 52 pairs pyjamas, 14 sweaters, 20 large bandages, 3 helmets, 1,500 wipes, 16 scarfs, 30½ doz. handkerchiefs, 8 hot water bottle covers, 1 doz. pair mitts, 342 pairs of socks to Red Cross warehouse, 45 pairs sock to Midland Regiment; material on hand—25 pair mitt, 21 helmets, 8 scarfs, 38 pairs socks, 1 quilt; refugee clothing—6 skirts and 6 sweaters for girls 12 years old, 6 pair bloomers, 31 pair mitts, 5 pair pyjamas.

The amount of $13.75 was received from the Red Cross salvage campaign, and the president reported that another quantity had since been shipped. The old radiators donated by the town were sold for $60.

Mrs. W. Drew, convener of the blanket fund, reported the amount of $40 still on hand. Twelve knitting instruction books have also been donated to the Red Cross by the Bell Telephone Co.

Surveying the achievements of the society during its first year, Mrs. McLauchlin in a few concluding remarks prior to the election of officers, thanked the members for their splendid support. Thanks was also extended to the various lodges, organizations, canvessers, and individuals who have rendered assistance. She stressed the fact, that everyone must work together for the good of our country.

Representatives of the Belmont Women's Institute who have actively assisted the Havelock-Belmont Red Cross Society throughout the past year, announced that they intend to sponsor a concert in behalf of the Red Cross on Wednesday, November 27, in the Belmont Township Hall. It is planned to present the same concert in the Havelock Town Hall on Friday, November 29.

The meeting concluded with an afternoon tea, served under the direction of conveners, Mrs. C. Price and Miss E. Wright.

Spitfire Squadron Downs Seven Blackshirt Fighters Without Loss

HUNS CONCENTRATE ELEVEN-HOUR ATTACK ON TWO MIDLANDS TOWNS SHATTERING CHURCHES, HOSPITALS, CONVENTS, HOMES, PLANTS WITH HEAVY TOLL OF CIVI LIAN POPULATIONS.

LONDON, Nov. 23—(CP). A squadron of Spitfires today shot down seven Italian fighters and one German fighter in the Strait of Dover without loss to themselves.

The air fight came as raiders renewed their attacks on Britain after an intense overnight hammering of the two West Midlands manufacturing cities in which a record number of planes appeared over that "workshop" area of Britain.

Churches, hospitals, convents and many dwellings and other buildings were riddled and piles of debris littered the two Midlands towns after the severe 11-hour attack.

Casualties were believed heavy. Rescue and fire-fighting squads worked until daybreak quenching fires and digging out trapped victims.

This latest in a series of attacks on the Midlands began at 7 p.m. (2 p.m., EDT) and continued without let-up until 6 a.m.

Shortly after 2 p.m. today 12 Italian biplanes in close formation crossed the Channel in bright sunlight and attempted to pierce the Kent coast defences near Dover Strait.

A curtain of anti-aircraft fire threw them back. The planes then swung down-Channel, seeking a gap in the defences, but the blistering fire forced them off each time and they finally passed from view over sea.

Openly Seals Bonds As Hun Ally

Berlin Hints Bulgaria Slovakia Next In Her March East

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Rumania sealed her bonds with Nazi Germany today by joining formally the expanding Axis bloc of treaty-pledged supporters.

Following Hungary into the bloc within four days, Rumania signed up as a member of the original Rome-Berlin-Tokyo 10-year military and economic alliance made here last Sept 27, an official announcement said.

By this diplomatic stroke, Germany pushed the Axis sphere toward the Near East to a point less than 250 miles from the vital Dardanelles. However, Nazi troops had already been in Rumanian for several weeks.

Two other countries on the route of "Drang Nach Osten" (drive to the East) were expected to be the next to affiliate themselves with the alliance.

They were Bulgaria, which borders Rumania, Greece and Turkey, and Slovakia, the Nazi-protected remnant of dissolved Czechoslovakia.

The Grand Signing

The official announcement said Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, Gino Buti, director of the political department of the Italian foreign office, and Japanese Ambassador Saburo Kurusu, on one side, and Premier Ion Antonescu of Rumania, on the other, signed a protocol sealing Rumania's entrance into the three-power pact.

The protocol merely stated that Rumania had become a party to the alliance, effective immediately, and —like Hungary—would be consulted on matters concerning her.

Envoys of Bulgaria and Slovakia are expected in Berlin next week.

Rumania, once strongly pro-British, began her swing toward the Axis soon after the fall of France last June. Since then the course of events has swept her ever closer to the Axis obit.

Until June, Rumania, fattened by territory acquired in the Allied victroy in the First Great War, was bound tightly to Britain and France. They dominated her oil industry and guaranteed her territorial integrity.

The Turning Point

Turkey Firm; Martial Law Ordered

Prepares Dardanelles Area For Action As Pressure Grows

ANKARA, Turkey, Nov. 23—(AP)—Sections of Turkey surrounding the strategic Dardanelles, which straddle the land route from Europe to the Near East and Africa, were under martial law today because of "the general political situation."

The Turkish Government ordered Corps General Ali Riza Artuo-Kalin, Commander of Gendarmerie, to take charge of these districts last night, only a short time after German Ambassador Franz Von Papen returned from Germany, presumably with a virtual ultimatum that Turkey affiliate with the Axis' "new European order."

A Government announcement said "the Prime Ministry and Council of Ministers as a result of its deliberation November 8 have deemed it necessary to proclaim martial law . . . for one month" in the districts of Istanbul, Kirkareli, Edirne (Adrianople), Tekirdag, Canakkale, and Kojaeli.

Observers expressed belief that Von Papen might be carrying a near-ultimatum proposal that Turkey, a friend of Britain, agree to stand aside in the event Bulgarian and German troops move to help Italy down Greece, another British friend.

Asked by Istanbul newspapermen if "normal relations" between Germany and Turkey would continue, the Ambassador replied, "I have no declaration of any kind to make."

Not Looking For Fight

The Istanbul press reiterated statements that Turkey, while not looking for a fight, would fight if it seemed necessary.

The newspaper Ikdam mentioned that "no one is able to say that Russia would accept easily a German attack on Greece, which would carry German troops toward the Dardanelles. However, the consent of Russia would not signify that

Nazi Radio News Sets Ottawa Upon Checkup

OTTAWA, Nov. 23—(P).—Repercussions in the Canadian parliament Friday followed publication of a report by the Dies Committee on Unamerican Activities at Washington alleging a connection between Transradio Press Service and Transocean News Service, an alleged agency of German propaganda.

The Dies report referred to circumstances touching Canada in connection with both radio and the press, Transradio's News reports are carried over several Canadian stations.

The committee's submission contained a purported report by Dr. H. Eckner, former German Consul in Montreal, outlining a proposed arrangement for supplying Transocean News to "L'Illustration Nouvelle" of Montreal, described as "the local Canadian Fascist organ." Ekner also wrote that "this new service (Transocean) in according with the general arrangements of the management of transocean in Berlin, is given to German newspapers in Canada for one dollar a month."

Conservative House Leader Hanson, in the House of Commons asked if steps would be taken to deal with the situation and Munitions Minister Howe, who has jurisdiction over radio in Canada, said the Gov-

Packed Bins To Sway Wheat Plan

Open Our Granaries To U.K. Says Bruce Skip Bargaining

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Canada's wheat policy for the next crop year will have to be based on the prospect of elevators already jammed when the new crop is ready and prospective export sales of only 140,000,000 to 175,000,000 bushels in 1941-42, Trade Minister MacKinnon says.

The minister, who is responsible for wheat marketing, gave that warning in the House of Commons yesterday as he stated that intense study was being given to the whole wheat problem. Policy for 1941-42 would have to be declared sometime in February, he said. Possible plans for the new crop year "and ensuing years" now were being considered by the advisory committee to the Canadian Wheat Board.

Only thing which might reduce the prospective glut of wheat next year would be unexpected developments overseas, Mr. MacKinnon said.

The minister gave no direct hint of restricting production. Production matters came under Agriculture Minister Gardiner's jurisdiction, he emphasized.

However, he did state that the information regarding seeded acreages contained in 300,000 statutory declarations involved in establishing present delivery quotas would be "extremely valuable in connection with arrangements which may be made before the next crop year."

Mr. MacKinnon was the seventh, and possibly last, of the cabinet ministers to report to the Commons on the state of their departmental activities. It is not expected at the moment that Labor Minister McLarty will speak before parliament adjourns, probably sometime next week, for two months or so.

Army Pounds At New Italian Line

Abandoned War Goods Clog Roads, 6 Divisions Routed

ATHENS, Nov. 23—(AP).—Victory-cheered Greek cavalry and Highland regiments, claiming the rout of six crack Fascist divisions of at least 72,000 men, smashed beyond Koritza today for a quick test of Italy's second Albanian line of defence.

The high command told a nation in holiday mood that its army had left "not a single Italian soldier in Greek territory" and was driving Italian lines of resistance deeper into Albania from north of Koritza to the sea.

The Greeks reported taking prisoners by the hundreds as they pressed forward on the heels of their foe and said uncounted military stores were seized—guns and equipment dumped by the fleeing Italians in such quantity that it clogged the mountain roads.

(Dispatches from Bitolj, across the Yugoslav frontier, said battered Italian defenders of Koritza were fighting their way backward toward Pogradetz on Lake Ochrida, 20 miles north of Koritza. They said Pogradetz apparently was the left flank anchor of a new Italian defence line roughly 30 miles back from the frontier along the whole 100-mile battlefront.

Fleeced Business Men 2 Million Charge Boxing Mogul's Gang

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 — (AP). — Hymie Caplin, big-time boxing manager, to-day found himself enmeshed in what Brooklyn District Attorney William O'Dwyer called "the clean-up of a nation-wide combine of card sharks" responsible for fleecing $2,000,000 from poker-playing business men in the last 10 years.

Caplin was arrested on a charge of grand larceny, specifically in connection with a "friendly game" at a Brooklyn hotel in May, 1938, when a clothing manufacturer dropped $5,000. Caplin denied the charges.

O'Dwyer's assistant, John Rooney, said Caplin was only one of a large syndicate; that hundreds of victims were taken and re-taken for as much as $150,000 a victim; that 13 men and women already had been arrested and that detectives are looking for "a number of others."

Rooney said Caplin had put up money for the combine's "window dressing"—trimmings to create the impression of a gentleman's game.

Rooney said "shills" posed as business men bent on a bit of fun and, as such, lured bona-fide business men from metropolitan clubrooms and resorts to hotel rooms where they were taken with "stacked cards"—for all they were willing to lose.

Also arrested during the night and charged with grand larceny in conection with various gambling losses were Mrs. Jennie Rubin, 49; Abrahm Blumenson, 40, and his wife, Gussie, 38. Five others were arrested last week. Four others were convicted and sentenced last February.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (OP)—If they had newspapers back in the boisterous era of Robin Hood, when Merrie England was finding her feet and Magna Carta was yet to be written, dispatches from the Mediterranean would have read quite a bit like the dispatches of today.

Crete, the large Island off the southern tip of Greece, where Britons have landed and advantageous bases for Mediterranean operations have been obtained thanks to the Italian invasion of Greece, would have made banner lines in the days of the third crusade, from 1189 to 1191. 150 Men Out In Weary Search For Fliers

EAST LAKE, Que., Nov. 23.—(CP)—Through forests thickly blanketed with new-fallen snow, more than 150 men tramped today in their weary search for three missing crewmen of a Royal Canadian Air Force plane abandoned almost seven days ago.

Three other airmen who were forced to bail out of the plane last Saturday night after 14 hours in the air are safe.

PO. U. J. H. Leblanc, the pilot, was lucky enough to land close to a nearby lumber camp. LAC. E. J. Benoit was taken to the same lumber camp yesterday by searchers who found him Thursday. Another search crew took AC. Elmer Johnson to the setlement of St. Pamphile, Que., about 30 miles south of here, at the same time.

"Zero-Zero" visibility caused by an alternating snow and rain storm prevented Royal Canadian Air Force planes operating from a temporary base at East Lake from making an aerial search of the area yesterday. Nine United States army bombers assisting in the hunt were simliarly grounded at St. Hubert Airport, near Montreal.

Searchers Stay in Bush.

Some three-score French-Canadian lumberjacks who began a search by land for the missing airmen last Sunday were assisted by approximately 100 R.C.A.F. men in training at Quebec City. They spent the night in the woods to avoid wasting the time required for

Greek Sweep May Force Hitler's Hand To Save Italian Rout

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(CP)—Whatever steps Nazi Germany may be planning to bail out Italy from her Greek fiasco, events in the 64th week of the war made it clear that they are too late to save the junior partner of the Axis from a humiliating thrashing at the hands of the Greek mountain troops.

The coming week will tell how able are the Italian forces to prevent their defeat turning into a rout. With Koritza, the main Italian base in Albania, in Greek hands, defence of the secondary base to the south at Argirocastro will be increasingly difficult and with good luck the Greeks might conceivably threaten Porto Edda, the Albanian Adriatic port through which supplies and reinforcements are received from Italy.

If Germany acts in an attempt to put an end to Greek resistance, it will be through Bulgaria, and probably under the pretext of helping the Bulgarians obtain an outlet to the Aegean through Thrace. A few weeks ago Greek resistance to such a thrust, if made with the usual Prussian thoroughness, would have been considered hopeless, but no one underestimates now the fighting qualities of the Greek soldiers and the generalship of his officers.

That Bulgaria is involved in German plans was indicated by a visit to Hitler by King Boris. Next week Bulgaria is expected to join the Axis, as did Hungary this week.

Germany's penchant for showmanship also moved her to summon representatives of two countries already occupied by German troops, Rumania and Slovakia, to Berlin to "join" the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alignment.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 — (AP). — Radio messages picked up by Mackay Radio said today that two British ships and a Swedish freighter had been torpedoed about 400 miles off the Irish coast. They were the Blairesk, 3,300 tons, the Tymeric, 5, 228 tons, and the 5,135-ton Swedish Anten.

The Anten radioed she had taken the Tymeric survivors aboard and was still afloat despite damage.

The Anten was built in 1920; her home port is Gothenburg. The Blairesk, out of Glasgow, was built in 1925, and the Tymeric in 1919 at Newcastle.

Cent Bushel Levy To Pay Half Wheat Bonus

OTTAWA, Nov. 23—(CP). — The one-cent a bushel levy collected under the prairie farm assistance act on all wheat marketed in Canada is expected to provide about half the money to be expended this year in assisting farmers with poor wheat crops, Agriculture Minister Gardiner said yesterday.

Last Wednesday, Mr. Gardiner told the House of Commons in reply to a question that the crop year 1940-41 has been declared an "emergency year" within the meaning of the Act.

This declaration makes operative the acreage bonus provisions of the Act, under which bonuses ranging from $1 to $2 an acre may be paid to wheat farmers in areas where the average yield is low.

Yesterday Mr. Gardiner said it looked like $2 might be paid out in benefits to farmers for every dollar taken in through the one-cent levy. Last year, he said, collections were about $2,225,000 and expenditures between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000, which meant about $4 was paid out for every dollar collected.

extent of Nazi sea piracy in the week ended Nov. 22. One small German merchantman, the Helogland of 2,297 tons, and three British ships aggregating some 20,000 tons were reported during the week to have been lost, but in the case of the British vessels it was not clear whether they had been actually sunk during the period or some time before.

Off Mexico the 4,137-ton German freighter Fhrygia was scuttled by order of her captain when he mistook United States warships for British.

The 4,791-ton British freighter Cree wirelessed that she was "torpedoed and sinking fast" 500 miles west of Ireland, but there was no further word as to her fate.

The latest summary of the British Admiralty, covering the week Nov. 4-11, showed 71,749 tons of British, allied and neutral shipping was sunk in that period, some 20,000 tons above the weekly average since the war began.

Midlands Hit Anew

Huns Concentrate Bombs On One City

LONDON, Nov. 23—(CP).—German raiders, penetrating to the London area, sent the capital's millions to cover during a brief daylight alarm at the morning rush hour today.

The alarm was brief, but before it ended a Nazi squadron crossed several London districts ringed with the black smoke of anti-aircraft fire and disappeared in the clouds. The twisting vapor trails of engine exhausts indicated they had met British fighter planes.

In bright sunshine, coastal anti-aircraft gunners near the Dover Strait broke up several small flights of German Messerschmitts returning to France and drove them into the clouds.

Overnight, Nazi raiders had put a West Midlands city to its second bombing ordeal of the week with what was called a record number of planes for that area.

The air ministry and ministry of home security communique did not name any city but said German attacks against the West Midlans had caused some deaths, started many fires and damaged houses, business premises and other buildings.

An all clear signal shortly after dawn ended a night-long alert for London. There was a flurry of activity soon after dusk last night, when at least two houses ere smashed by bombs, but comparative quiet reigned after that.

R.A.F. bombers were reported active, meanwhile, attacking objectives in Germany. The British did not disclose their targets.

Referring to the German attack on a west Midlands town, the Press Association listed a church, a hospital, two convents and dwellings among buildings struck by bombs.

Isolated Nazi attacks were carried out on Merseyside, Liverpool and some cities on the south coast, but casualties in these attacks were few, the communique said.

Glancing back 25 years.—The Battle of Ctesiphon, 18 miles from Baghdad, was fought November 22, 1915, Sir Charles Townsend's Indian troops defeating the Turks and taking 800 prisoners. Allied forces in Serbia continued to retreat slowly toward the Greek and Albanian frontiers in the week of November 17 to 23, but positions in other theatres of war were unchanged.

One of the woodsmen taking part in the search, Levi Gagne, said today's snowfall increased the difficulties of finding the men still missing, FO. J. G. Richardson, Flt. Lt. F. Clay, and LAC. H. E. Howard.

At the same time, R.C.A.F. officers conducting the hunt said the search area had been narrowed down to a few square miles.

Johnson, his legs badly swollen, but not frozen, was carried 18 miles on stretcher, by portage, horse and automobile from the place where he was found, on the west side of East Lake, to St. Pamphile. Dr. Bruno Cloutier, who is caring for him, said that, aside from his legs, he is "feeling fine."

Another dateline would have been Brindisi, where modern Britain's Royal Air Force has been pounding Italian objectives. Brindisi lies on the Adriatic, at the "heel" of Italy's "boot."

Still another dateline would have been Bari, just north of Brindisi, which the R.A.F. gave a rough the Nazi air force sought to duplicate the previous week's devastation at Coventry with heavy attacks on Midland towns and ports such as Liverpool and Southampton. The R.A.F. hit back at Berlin and at the southern ports of Brindisi and Bari in Italy. A hit on the liner Europa in Bremen harbor was reported, while production at the great Krupp armament works at Essen was declared cut in half by repeated bombings.

Britain began a new session of Parliament and heard a confident message in the Speech from the Throne, which was read, as in years of peace, by the King. Britain was cheered, too, by increasing support from the United States, the latest measure being the famed Sperry bomb sight, which had been a military secret, together with 36 long-range bombers. In addition, early transfer of 20 of the United States army's huge "flying fortresses" was promised.

going-over in mid-November, battering docks and shipping.

An important dateline would have been Dyrrhachium on the coast of what was then the East Roman Empire. This figures to-day as Durazzo and the part of the East Roman Empire to which it is attached is now known as Albania.

These despatches would have been read as eagerly in crusade-minded England then as the news of the Graeco-Italian war is being read now. They would have told, in 1096 for instance, that Robert of Normandy and Stephen of Blois, leaders of the first of the great crusades, were wintering at Bari. Later these crusaders crossed the Adriatic to Dyrrhachium and made their way through Greece to the Holy Land—across territory which the Italians have been trying to take in their frustrated drive to the key Aegean ports of Salonika.

From Brindisi came other participants in the first crusade—Bohemun of Otranto and Tancred, leading a fine force of Normans. They, too, landed at Dyrrhachium, which in addition to being a useful port happened to be the terminus of the great highway to Byzantium. They might have mused, these swashbuckling crusaders, on the past as they pulled into this port, for here Pompey was besieged by Caesar in 48 B.C. and if they had been given foreknowledge of the shape of things to come they might have known that in 1940 A.D. British bombers would pound this port since Italians used it to mass ships and men against Greece.

In the other crusades the Crusaders went by sea around Greece. In the fourth crusade, Doge Dandolo of Venice sailed down the Adriatic, touching at Dyrrhachium, but continued by sea, past Corfu and around the tip into the Aegean on his route to the Holy Land.

Another crusading visitor to Crete, 40 years after Ricard, was Frederick II. He was the most extraordinary of all the Crusaders since he had been ex-communicated by the Pope. But it did not deter him from making war on the infidel.

At the same time a flight of invading planes crossed another part of the Kent coast at great height. Later other aircraft were reported over the Midlands again.

It was disclosed today that War Secretary Anthony Eden spent Friday touring the Midlands industrial region, including bomb-wrecked Coventry, where he inspected anti-aircraft defences.

London's two daylight raids were of brief duration. The first, during the morning rush hour, saw a Nazi squadron cross several London districts before being dispersed by R.A.F. fighter planes. The second alarm came during lunch hour. No bomb damage was reported.

Birmingham members of Parliament moved to "make the strongest possible representations" to Prime Minister Churchill to give Midlands defences "immediate and urgent" consideration.

Nazi long-range guns on the French coast again shelled the Dover area.

Casualties High

Casualties were believed heavy in one town which bore the brunt of the overnight attack in the Midlands.

A bomb hit one of the municipal buildings, blocking a street with smashed masonry. Rescue and fire fighting groups toiled until daybreak, much of the time amid bursting bombs.

Soldiers helped civil defence workers clear away debris and by the time townspeople went to work transport services were functioning again, "surprisingly little" affected.

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security joint communique: "Last night, though bombs were dropped in many part of England, including Merseyside and the London area, the main enemy attacks were directed against the West Midlands. In this area many fires were caused but these have all been brought under control, thanks to the splendid work of the first service. Many houses, business premises and other buildings were damaged.

Full reports of casualties are not yet available from this area, but it is known that a number of people were killed and others were injured in these attacks. In an isolated raid on one town in the Northeast, a small number of casualties were caused. In the London area, on Merseyside and in Southern England damage was done to a small number of houses and other building but the number of casualties reported is small."

Ottawa to Handle All '40 Wheat Before July 1941

OTTAWA, Nov. 23—(CP).—The Government intends to take delivery of all of the 1940 wheat crop during the present crop year which ends July 31, 1941, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced in the House of Commons yesterday.

To this end additional wheat storage space will be constructed and the general delivery quota will be increased next week from the present level of eight bushels an acre to 10.

Speaking in the Throne Speech debate the Minister said: "We all fully recognize that a wheat policy covering the 1941-42 crop year must be announced some time in February, well in advance of the seeding season."

Busy On Plans For 1941.

A sub-committee of the advisory committee of the Canadian Wheat Board was appointed last week and now is working on possible plans for 1941 and ensuing years and will report to the whole committee early in December, the Minister said.

Mr. MacKinnon was the seventh Cabinet Minister to speak in the Throne Speech debate and outline activities of various departments, since Prime Minister Mackenzie King addressed the House November 12.

The Minister said plans for the 1941 wheat crop would depend upon circumstances but from the standpoint of the trade department that policy would "have to be decided upon with a knowledge that apart from domestic consumption only between possibly 140,000,000 and 175,000,000 bushels can be exported in the crop year ending July 31, 1942."

"Any matters relating to operations on the farm lie within the jurisdiction of my colleague, Minister of Agriculture and the Provincial Departments of Agriculture," he said.

MONTREAL BUTTER UP, QUIET

MONTREAL, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Butter prices pushed quietly higher on the Canadian Commodity Exchange this week. Supplies were closely held and buyers were inclined to purchase for immediate requirements only. The uncertainty regarding possible Government action with respect to prices continued to be the main factor in the market, and it tended to curtail trading activity. At the same time, relatively higher prices prevailing in Toronto and Western Canada prevented supplies from the West coming into Montreal. That prices advanced despite these factors demonstrates the firm underlying tone of the market.

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of a rather singular, sudden and probably breath-taking occurrence which may have its final denouement far into the future. Such visitation may be radical and thrilling in its peculiar nature and its happy culmination depends on much discretion, discernment, and wise choice when confronted by dilemma.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of adventure and experience quite out of the routine. There may be dramatic, romantic, or startling visitations reaching far into the years for their real significance. These should be met with wise decisions.

A child born on this day should possess remarkable talents, with originality, freedom from all conventions and regulations, independent in thought and action. These are supported by subtle insight, strong intuitions and marked ingenuity.

For Monday, November 25.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a lively and enterprising day, with the energies and faculties under fine stimuli for success in new projects or where static conditions need aggressive and forceful readjustments. Push these with vigor and zest, especially in connection with well organized groups, but be alert to snares or petty treacheries.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fair success, with matters of new interest or innovation in old methods under particularly enterprising sway. It is a time for pushing with aggression and initiative in combination with well founded groups, but with a keen eye to deception, intrigue or small trickeries.

A child born on this day should be forceful, resourceful, energetic and have much executive and constructive ability, alert, powerful and resolute.

Jesus Speaks In Parables Heals The Sick By Miracles

By NEWMAN CAMPPBELL

The International Uniform Lesson for Nov. 24 is Luke 8, the Golden Text being Luke 8:18, "Take heed therefore how ye hear.")

The chapter of St. Luke which comprises today's lesson is one of the most charming pictures of the life of our Lord on earth. It mentions three women who believed in the Lord and ministered to Him. Mary Magdalene had been cured of evil spirits by Him; Joanna was the wife of Chuzas, steward or chamberlain of Herold Antipas, and Susanna, who is not mentioned anywhere else in the New Testament. All three were faithful followers who aided the Lord in His great work.

A great multitude was following Jesus, and He told them a parable of a sower who scattered grain. Some of the grains fell on to hard, barren ground, and almost at once birds flew down and ate them for food; others fell on stony ground that gave no moisture, and when the seeds came up they quickly withered. Still others fell in ground that allowed them to sprout and grow, but thorns grew also, and choked the good grain. Others fell into good ground and grew up and made a good harvest. As He told the parable He cried, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

The disciples wanted to know the meaning of this parable, and Jesus explained that the seed was the word of God which was heard by many people. Some hearts were hard and the word made no impression on them. It was as if the birds flew down and plucked the words and ate them. Others' hearts were stony, and while the good words might be sown in them, they soon were forgotten because the minds of those who received them were not interested and gave them no thought in which to grow.

Others heard and believed at first, but allowed other interests, like weeds, to choke out all thought of them. But there were many whose minds and hearts welcomed the fruitful thoughts and cherished them, and gathered a rich harvest of fine Christian living from them.

Storm on Galilee

The Sea of Galilee is a beautiful body of water 350 below sea level. It is usually calm, but sudden storms arise on it. After teaching the people, Jesus and His disciples embarked in a boat to go to the other side of the sea. Jesus, being wearied, went to sleep, and a great storm arose, which rocked the boat and frightened the fishermen so that they called Jesus, telling Him that they were about to perish. Jesus rebuked the waves and they stilled. Then He turned to His disciples, reproving them for their lack of faith.

On the other side of the sea they were met by a man sorely afflicted with demons. So tormented was he that he hid in tombs and wore no clothes. The evil spirits spoke through his mouth, asking Jesus not to command them to go into the sea, but into a herd of swine which was feeding near by. Jesus did as they asked, and the swine ran down a steep place into the sea and were drowned. The man flung himself at Jesus' feet, and later went about telling everyone of his release. But the people who saw the miracle were frightened, and asked Him to go away. So He went back to the ship and returned to the other side.

The people on the other side of the sea received Him gladly. A man named Jarius, a ruler of the synagogue, came to Him, saying that his young daughter was ill, and asking that Jesus make her well. People crowded about the Master, and as He made His way to Jarius' house, He felt power go out of Him, and looked who had touched Him. The disciples had seen nothing and told Him the multitude pressed so close about Him that no one special had done so. Then a woman who had been ill for 12 years came to Him and threw herself at His feet, saying that she had come behind Him and touched the hem of His garment and had been healed. He said to her: "Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace."

Just then someone came from Jarius, saying that Jesus need not go to the house as the daughter had died. But Jesus said, "Fear not; believe only, and she shall be made whole."

And when He came to the house He took only Peter, James and John with Him, and the father and the mother of the maiden. All in the house were weeping and wailing, but Jesus said, "Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth." They laughed Him to scorn, but He put them out, and taking the girl by the hand He said, "Maid, arise."

What lessons do we learn from this eighth chapter of St. Luke? First, to keep our hearts and minds like fertile ground, to receive and cherish the Word of God and yield a harvest of blessing. And second, to have faith and not to fear, though storms rage and ills assail us. We are saved by faith, and faith shall make us free.

The Golden Text

Parable of the sower

"Take heed therefore how ye hear."—Luke 8:18

Where Is Israel?

Men do not believe in the Bible now,
As our fathers used to do,
They have locked the door on the chosen race,
And won't let "My Nation" through.
There is not a print of Israel's foot,
Or a dart from Joseph's bow (Gen. 49:24)
To be found in the earth or the air today,
For the "Church" has voted it so.

But who owns the "Gates" of the world today? (Gen. 22:17)
Who it it rules the waves? (Psalm 89:25).
Who dwells alone in the appointed place?" (1 Ch. 17:9).
While the enemy 'hates' and raves?
Who stands today in the thick of the fight,
Oppression and sin to quell,
If it is not the host of the living God,
Will somebody rise and tell?

Who send's God's work round the great wide world
To prepare the path for His feet?
Who frees the captive, and plants the rose?
Who is reigning from David's seat?
Israel is voted not to be this, is of course untrue;
But who is doing the kind of work that Israel alone can do?

We are told that the "Church" takes Israel's place,
But the Bible quite plainy says,
That a kingdom of stone, cut out for His own,
Shall stand at the end of the days!
Who owns and carries the flag that waves,
To the earth's remotest bounds,
If Israel, by unanimous vote, is nowhere to be found?

Will not somebody step to the front forthwith
And make his bow, and show
Where the "chief of the nations" is today?
We very much want to know!
Israel is blindly voted out,
And Israel! 'tis said, is gone!
But the British lion would like to know
Who caries his business on?
—By "A Student."

Institute Marks Peace Day

WARKWORTH, Nov. 23—(ENS).—The November meeting of the Percy Women's Institute held in the council chamber on Wednesday afternoon was called "peace day." The president, Mrs. Lorine Hutchison, opened the meeting by all singing the Ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer. This was followed by a prayer for peace, given by Miss Blanche Baker. The motto, "In Darkest Days May Hope Burn Brightest" was beautifully illustrated in the paper given by Mrs. Will Honey. The roll call, heartily responded to by the members was a verse containing the world 'peace.'

The following business included a report from the secretary of the Christmas boxes sent to the boys now overseas. It was also decided to have the usual exchange of Christmas gifts amongst the members at the December meeting. The members decided to ask for the $3.00 grant from the government. Reports were heard from the visiting and sunshine committees and letters read from members receiving cards from sick members or those bereaved.

Guest speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Clarke, of Campbellford, district president, who gave a most interesting and appropriate talk on the topic, "How can we improve our Institute." The afternoon's program included a vocal solo by Mrs. Gordon McCubbin, entitled 'Smiling' and Mrs. Will Campbell and Mrs. Charles Puffer sang 'Whispering Hope.'

Mrs. Will Shaw took charge of the current events and Mrs. James Black conducted the question box.

Mrs. Wm. Shaw moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Clarke for her splendid address and after singing the Doxology and God Save the King the hostesses and their assistants served a dainty lunch.

The December meeting will be held on December the 18th, as the regular date falls on Christmas Day.

Burnbrae Aid Presents Play

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 23. — A large audience which nearly filled the basement of Burnbrae church witnessed an unusually fine performance of the play, "Governor Joe's Amen" which was presented under auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society on Wednesday evening. The play, filled with action and snappy dialogue, was put on by a cast of twelve members of the Ivanhoe Young People's Union under the direction of Rev. Delve, who himself took a leading comedy roll which made him one of the stars of the show.

Dr. M. E. R. Boudreau, D.D., pastor of Burnbrae church, was chairman of the evening and on behalf of the Ladies' Aid extended a welcome to the cast and expressed appreciation for the whole hearted support people of the district gave the affair. Mrs. Victor Taylor, president of the Ladies' Aid announced she was highly pleased by the fact the show was a fiancial success.

Roseneath W.A. Plans Quilt

ROSENEATH, Nov. 23—(ENS).—At the regular meeting of the United Church W.A. it was decided to hald a quilting on November 28 in the Town Hall and if possible quilt two quilts now on order. Volunteering to assemble quilt blocks and put in frames were Mrs. C. Thackeray, Mrs. Arthur Braithwaite, and Mrs. L. Tucker.

Mrs. E. Sandercock, convener of parsonage committee, announced the society's share of expense on the new stove for the parsonage was $30.

Mrs. C. Grigg was named program convener for December meeting.

The meeting was held in Mrs. William Robins' home, and Mrs. Charles Sandercock, vice-president, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. A. Nill.

Mrs. M. Davey was in charge of the devotional period, with "Brotherhood" as the theme.

Mrs. W. Robins had charge of the program, including readings by Mrs. E. Grigg, Mesdames Charles and Clarke Sandercock and Mrs. Ray Bradshaw, and several contests.

The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting and the hostess served refreshments.

Breach In The Brotherhood Seen In Mother's Request

(BY REV. E. R. JAMES.)

She saidth unto Jesus, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on Thy right hand and the other on Thy left, in Thy Kingdom.—St. Matthew 20, 21.

Perhaps St. Matthew remembers the incident very clearly. "Then came the mother of Zebedee's children." The Master is on His last journey to Jerusalem. "He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem." His soul is filled with the agony and horror of that future and its apparent failure. He gathers His Apostles together and clearly describes what is ahead of Him: betrayal, mockery, death and the third day He will rise again. The men are silent. They have no word of comfort for Him. "These things are hid from them"; "their eyes are holden." "Then" a woman draws near. With the eye of faith she sees Him on His throne. She prostrates herself before Him, offering Him kingly honor and reverence. He is sure of His future victory, though the darkness is very great. Her soul is bound up in the future of her two sons. How truly natural. 'Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on Thy right hand and the other on Thy left, in Thy Kingdom' is her request.

She knows that the Lord has carefully chosen His Apostles. He Himself is in dead earnest and needs for His work a band of men similarly enthused. He finds no moral stuff really to His Hand for His work. It is a new wKingdom and a new Order He is starting and He needs men of character and determination; men who are prepared even to hate father and mother for His sake. They are to be shock troops of His Kingdom.

Can you see that Jewish mother placing her two sons on either side of her, making this request. They come of the fighting breed of Galilee—the home of every revolt. Their Lord and Master has given them the name of "Sons of thunder"; men of enthusiasm and courage; thundering into battle. She knows that the Lord is asking great things of them. They are to give up everything for His sake. She is sure of the loyalty of her sons.

The Master looks into the eyes of the two men, His first cousins on His Mother's side, according to Bishop Westcott. "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I drink of and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" Looking into His eyes they calmly reply: "We are able."

He Himself is a Man of courage, and His heart thrills with joy at the response of these men of the inner circle. They have drunk deeply of His Spirit. So in the same quiet tone He adds: "Ye shall indeed drink of My cup and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with, but to sit on My right Hand and on My left is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of My Father."

They are closer to Him spiritually, but they have not yet learnt the lessons He would teach them.

How near they are to us for they ask exactly what we would ask of God. "Give us what we want." These Apostles wanted something that could not be had by any other of the fellowship. There are only two places of highest honor; one on the right hand and the other on the left.

Naturally the ten are angry; "moved with indignation against the two brethren." They also were of the same mind, thinking only of themselves. The Lord inquires: "Can you share My sacrifice?" He would teach them and us that humility and service are the high notes of the Kingdom. Moreover they make the mistake of thinking that the Kingdom is His and not the Father's.

The two men make the still greater error of striving to break up the brotherhood and fellowship. They are brethren, having the life and spirit of the One Father in them. They shew that they have not the Spirit of Christ, which is, to obey the will of the Father. "I am come to do the will of Him that sent Me" is His constant ideal—therefor He is the Beloved Son.

How far we all fall from that spirit of brotherhood and fellowship, which is the secret of all true unity in the Kingdom of God.

BEHOLD WHAT MANNER OF LOVE THE FATHER HATH BESTOWED UPON US, THAT WE SHOULD BE CALLED THE SONS OF GOD.

Attitudes Toward the Gospel Lesson ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher

Jesus went to sleep in a boat in which He and His disciples were crossing the lake. A storm arose and, frightened, the disciples awoke the Master, who rebuked them for their fear and bade the waves be still.

When Jesus and the disciples landed, a man afflicted with many devils met them. Jesus drove the evil spirits out of the man, and they entered into swine, which ran down a steep place into the sea.

A sick woman came behind Jesus in the crowd and touched the hem of His garments. "Who touched me?" He asked and said to her, "Daughter, be of good comfort. Thy faith hath made thee whole. Go in peace."

A young girl, daughter of the ruler of the synagogue, died, but Jesus said, "She is not dead, but sleepeth." He took her by the hand saying, "Maid, arise," and she did.

Consider The Chinese

If there is any one lesson we can learn from the Chinese it is that of patience. The patience which refuses to recognize defeat and which does not wear out under adversity.

Within recent weeks the Burma Road was opened, and it climbs 755 miles from the British railhead at Lashio to Kunming, the pivot point for Chinese distribution.

On that road there are 500 bridges; there are miles where it clings perilously to the mountain side, and at no place can it be called a road in the same sense that we apply the term.

When it was opened the Japanese said they would bomb it out of existence, and they have been doing their best to carry out that threat.

They have secured direct hits on bridges; they have ripped to pieces many of the spots where space is narrow and detours are impossible; they have dropped bombs on working parties.

And yet no bridge has yet been closed for more than 48 hours.

Day in and day out, and the same at night, there is that stream of trucks making their way carrying military, medical and industrial necessities. Of protection against bombing there is little.

Japanese smash a bridge and the patient Chinese swarm in to repair it, and they do nearly all their work by manual labor. Their hours of rest are few, and their periods of labor are long.

If they lose a load before reaching the destination, they turn back for another. It is no gentleman's war in which they are engaged. It is hard slugging, it is all times dangerous, and above all relentless.

And yet China through it all never thinks of quitting or making terms with the enemy. Trip after trip, always under bombs, work, work, work. Yes, we can well take a few moments out now and then to consider the Chinese. By all the rules and statistics of war they should have been defeated long ago. Today they will tell you plainly they are on the road to victory. But such a road!

Have Not Found The Cure

Officials in Britain are doing what they can to tell their people that they have not yet found the remedy for raiding planes which fly by night. In recent weeks we have noticed several references in despatches to something new which was being brought out. Each time such a story appeared the people expected to see results in the way of enemy planes being brought down in numbers or forced to turn back.

It is stated plainly by officials that they do not possess the remedy. If they did they would be making use of it.

Nor have the Germans anything to stop the night raiders. If they had the R.A.F. would never have got through to bomb the Krupp works, nor would they have been able to make the long trip to attend to the Skoda factory in far-off Bohemia. The searchlight and the anti-aircraft gun is the only known defence against night raiders.

Who Told Him?

Some remarkable things about the war are being printed, and under that classification must be included some of the statements of Ralph Ingersoll, editor of the afternoon tabloid in New York which travels under the abbreviated title "P.M." The Globe and Mail is using his material, although making it clear it does not of necessity associate itself with the views expressed.

Ralph Ingersoll is an interesting writer; he pens his stuff in the first person singular, and with that we have no fault as it is the most effective way of telling a story. But one is inclined to wonder if Mr. Ingersoll has found out things while spending ten days in London which have been hidden to the rest of the observers who are continually there.

This we mean: Some place between September 7, which fell on a Saturday, and September 15, a Sunday, Hitler and Goering had actually taken London. All that was needed was that they keep up their tremendous scale of air raids and nothing could have saved London. The loss of 200 planes per day for five more days would have ended the whole business, but the German high command decided against continuing the raids on such an etxensive campaign because they could not stand the loss.

One would need a great deal of information to make that statement stick, and we cannot but wonder who told Mr. Ingersoll all about it. Then it would have been necessary for some one to tell him about the reason why Hitler and Goering found they could not stand such a heavy loss of planes and pilots and navigators. We have always believed, and with good reason, that the loss of life did not weigh heavily with German high command. One would indeed need a great deal of information to deal with such a matter and keep clear of the popular field of ordinary speculation.

The dates mentioned are those which were regarded as the most opportune time for the invasion of Britain. While the pounding of London was taking place there were hundreds of thousands of armed and determined men waiting day and night for the invaders. The Royal Air Force saw to it that the invaders never landed. And there is a long dreary trip between bombing London and invading England.

Yes, Mr. Ingersoll writes in an entertaining way, but he must have been able to see things in his short visit in London which were hidden from those who have been there for months, and who are just as competent to secure information as Mr. Ingersoll. We have often noticed that it is somewhat dangerous for a man who spends 10 days or two weeks in any land to come back posing as an expert and an interpreter of the national viewpoint.

The Idea Of Sacrifice

Reading Parliamentary Debates of November 20, one finds a question asked regarding the services and salary of Major-General L. R. LaFleche. The information asked was if he were employed by the Dominion government; in what capacity; extent of salary; any other military pension or pay.

The answer gave the information that he is an associate deputy minister; he has a salary of $9,000; receives a war disability pension of $1,200 and dependents' allowances of $744.

Putting those together it means that he is in receipt of income of $10,944. He is not a deputy minister but an associate deputy minister with the duties of a deputy minister. That is the confusing way it is stated in the official report.

Our belief is that while Ottawa is seeking to impress the entire country with the need of financial sacrifices in order to have on hand funds for the immediate and constant development of war work, it might well make certain that some of the salaries being paid are kept in line with that general idea of sacrifice.

Mussolini's Estimate

Benito Mussolini in his speech of several days ago said that 372 Italian soldiers had been lost in the attack on Greece. By lost he meant killed. Although no casualty figures are released from Rome, we wonder that the man had the nerve to make use of that 372 total.

His troops have been up in the mountains for three weeks and they have been fighting all the time apart from the rather protracted periods during which they have been retreating. There have been reports of one Alpine division which was said to have been so hopelessly surrounded that it was virtually annihilated, and in a division of that sort there are 15,000 men.

There is nothing to indicate that the Greeks have been in the mountains waving their hands at the Italian invaders or merely throwing sticks or stones at them. There has been frequent reference to airplane attacks, machine-gun fire and also to the use of that rather formidable weapon known as the fixed bayonet.

It may be Mussolini had word of the speed with which his men were retreating and took it for granted the pursuing Greeks could never catch up with them.

The world will not believe that his troops lost 372 men. His own people will not believe it because it will soon be known that thousands who started out on that invasion expedition are not coming home.

A Farmer And His Hogs

Elgin County Council moved to ask the Federal Government to take over the production of export bacon as a war measure and to guarantee to the farmers a fair return on their hogs. That is a fairly large order as the government has no machinery or organization for going into the hog or bacon business on that scale. But farmers are mightily interested in the bacon production business and in the price they are being paid.

One farmer who was in this office a few days ago was telling his experience. When the first contract was announced with the British government it was made to appear there would be many more hogs needed, so he went in for breeding and added eleven sows to his stock. When he was ready to go to market there was too great a supply, and American hogs had been coming in. He dropped out and went back to his normal number of hogs on the farm.

"What we are concerned about in the bacon contract is the price," he explained. "We are placed in a different class to others who are engaged in war-time production. There was a meeting in London at which we were not represented, and the men at that session who would know little enough of our costs of production set the price which we were to receive. They do not do it that way in other government orders. When something is wanted a manufacturer or a contractor is allowed to submit a tender, and in that price he will include a profit for himself. We have no objection to that as long as it is reasonable, otherwise the man could not remain in business. If he is successful he gets the work at his own price. We claim we should be in somewhat the same position. We are not expecting or wanting to make great profits out of the war, but we do think we have a right to be used the same as others and allowed to have something to say about the price which we shall be paid for what we produce."

NOTE AND COMMENT

An officer driving at 90 miles an hour fired a shot at a speeding car he was chasing. Going at that rate the wonder is the bullet did not stick in the barrel.

Residents of the hamlet, Peninsula, Ohio, are going out to rid their community of bill boards, desiring to have one place in the state pleasant to look upon. Our best wishes to them.

Mussolini says he will never turn his back on the Greeks. But it may be his troops hadn't heard that idea discussed before starting on their campaign.

An Australian air man says the girls in Canada paint too much, and he felt rather let down when he saw Niagara Falls. Just wait until that lad sees the city halls in Brantford and Woodstock.

United States Thanksgiving was officially declared for Nov. 21, but in 16 states it will be observed on the last Thursday of the month. Yes, we run our daylight saving system on the same plan.

Man at Brampton court on liquor charge offered to demonstrate to the Crown that he could drink 25 bottles of beer in two hours, but before the exhibition could get under way the magistrate had said something about thirty days.

A four-day rain in Washington ceased in time for the official dedication of a new building which houses the Weather Bureau. Just a coincidence, of course, as we have lost faith in the ability of a weather bureau to start or stop the rain business.

Brantford has established what appears to be a record. Nothing to do with industrial expansion, increase in population or new buildings. Something actually better than all that; there has not been a case of diphtheria there in ten years.

Member of the camp at Borden turned up at Brantford charged with driving a car while intoxicated. He went to jail for a week, had his car impounded and his license to drive was lifted for three years. Those who make it possible for such a man to get soused are certainly not aware that this country is at war.

WHISKERS

¶ Grandfather used to have a beard, I don't know when the thing was reared, for it seemed always there; he'd brush it and he'd comb it too, and kept it looking good as new, it took a lot of care.

¶ For growing beards and whiskers then, was custom with the adult men, each had his own design; some whiskers used to catch the dust, were wide and thick and fit to bust, to straighten them took time.

¶ I often wondered why they grew, what whiskers were supposed to do, I watched grandfather's face; I often noticed ere he spoke, he'd give his whiskers quite a stroke, did that with easy grace.

¶ On days when he'd be quite annoyed, then with his whiskers too he toyed, he'd curl them up like wool; he didn't stroke his whiskers then, but acted like high tempered men, and gave them quite a pull.

¶ I've watched him when he sat in thought, to find if things were so or not, he walked with thoughtful men; once more his hand went to his face, as soft as handling bits of lace, he stroked them gently then.

¶ So I concluded whiskers grew, to give men's hand something to do, they stroked or pulled in turn; but if that helped them think more clear, or took from them a sense of fear—that's what I've yet to learn.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

NOW is the time to begin thinking about your Christmas shopping, and in all probability you have made out your list. Beside some of the names you will have written "Book," which seems to settle the matter for the time, but inevitably there will come a moment when you will have to decide which particular book of the enormous choice offered you will be the one for your needs. Therefore this column will discuss some of the new books as possible Christmas gifts, without attempting to give them anything like an adequate review.

C & B

If you want a Christmas book for someone of a literary turn of mind, someone who likes to keep abreast of what is considered best in current writing, you might consider giving them Charles Morgan's new novel, "The Voyage." This work has been given enthusiastic notices by several reviewers of note, and is the work of an author whose large following among discerning readers entitles him to respect; the present writer happens not to like Mr. Morgan's particular brand of mysticism, but that is a disagreement upon philosophic, rather than literary, grounds. The scene of the story is France during the last quarter of the nineteenth century, and the plot is slight. It is the story of a simple and sincere man, Barbet Hazard, who is almost a saint; he falls in love with a cafe singer, Therese Despreux, who, by dint of hard work and determination, becomes a favorite entertainer in Paris. She has many lovers, but eventually turned to Barbet, for she finds in him something more nearly akin to herself than in any of the men of her own world. The resemblance is this: both are true to the promptings of their inmost nature.

C & B

"The Voyage" is distinguished by some very fine writing, for Charles Morgan is considered to be the foremost stylist of our time, by critics who discount Bernard Shaw, and several other great writers who have now grown old. This book will prove a most acceptable gift to almost any cultured and sensitive person.

C & B

If you want a book for someone abroad who is interested in Canada, or for a Canadian who is interested in the development of our native literature — would that there were more such—you cannot do better than to give them "Thirty Acres," by Dr. Philippe Panneton, who writes under the name of "Ringuet." This book, which was first published in French in 1939, was received with great enthusiasm in Paris, and was awarded three literary prizes, including the much-coveted Prix de l'Academie Francaise. Now it has been translated into English by Felix and Dorothea Walter, who have succeeded admirably in conveying the atmosphere of French speech without resorting to the vice of 'translator's English.'

C & B

The story of "Thirty Acres" is about a farm in Quebec, and its owner, a habitant farmer named Eucharist Moisan. Suspicious, crafty, and penurious, but with much that is admirable in his make-up, Eucharist raises a large family and collects what appears to him to be a considerable fortune. Then misfortune overtakes him; he loses his wife, and his eldest son whom he has worked hard to educate for the priesthood. Through his own carelessness he loses his farm-buildings and his stock in a fire. His money goes in a lawsuit against a neighbor; his last savings are lost when the notary, who acts as his banker, absconds. Eucharist grows old, his beloved farm is taken over by his son, Etienne, and the old man finds himself living with another son and his hostile Irish wife in the United States, a country he has always abhorred. The theme of the book is the constancy of the land, the mortality and fallibility of those who till it.

C & B

Apart from its great merit as a novel, this book may do much to bring about a better understanding between Upper and Lower Canada. The insight which is given into the French-Canadian attitude toward the last war will be a surprise to many readers; it is surprising that such ignorance should exist, but where it exists it is hard to give blame. "Thirty Acres" is a novel highly recommended to all Canadians.

C & B

Readers who prefer lighter fare than either of the novels mentioned will perhaps be glad to hear that Warwick Deeping has published a new book, "The Man Who Went Back," is a story on the ever popular theme of a man who is thrust back in time to an age earlier than his own. In this case a motor accident throws the writer back into Sixth Century England, where he helps to repel the Saxon Invasion and wins the love of a Roman maiden called Meona; sophisticated readers will not like this book, but hundreds of boys and girls will be delighted with it.

C & B

For girls, Muriel Denison has produced another book about Susannah of the Mounties; this one is called "Susannah Rides Again." Readers of the other books about Susannah will know what to expect and will act accordingly. Next Saturday this discussion of books for Christmas gifts will be continued. The reviewer is now going out to lay his brow against a cold stone.

• He Saw How France Went Down

MR. P. J. PHILIP, now Ottawa correspondent of the New York Times, was among the trained observers who saw the fall of France—and failed to write a book about it. That, says the Ottawa Journal, was the gain of the Ottawa Canadian Club who heard Mr. Philip on Tuesday, of Journal readers who were given the text of his address.

For Mr. Philip's picture of France, the reasons he assigned for her fall, the hopes he held for her future, made a moving tale. This was history at first hand, told as history should be told, with authority, objectivity, with understanding and sympathy.

France, held Mr. Philip, had been bled white by the Great War, lost two millions of her best. The men who might have been her leaders slept at Verdun; their places were taken by the second and third best—by a generation of fatherless children drifting from their ancient moorings among new ideologies and doctrines. Scandals in public life, upheavals in finance and industry, joined to other things, were too much for dreamers and weak leaders. France's martial spirit was gone.

There was the sinister Laval. Mr Philip, living in France for 24 years, knew his story, knew his evil designs, told of them vividly, with contempt. But he was fair, sympathetic, towards the aged Petain. The last, a "great gentleman," incapable of dishonor, had been the victim of Laval. The French army had been "overpowered without being beaten." Laval with his evil associates, did the rest.

But Mr. Philip, looking at the heart of France, bid us remember, have faith. He did not believe the French people he knows would march with Hitler against England. In their agony, "living in misery under the German heel," they still cry in their hearts: "Vive l'Angleterre."

That is a tale good to hear.

• No National Spirit In Russians

(Letter in Montreal Star)

SIR,—I must confess that no subject affords me more amused interest than does the insensate political blundering indulged in so munificently by the poor deluded fools at the head of the various totalitarian Powers.

Perhaps the most enigmatic of these is Joseph Stalin. The purpose behind his actions, while not immediately clear, must assuredly be a foul one. The recent dispatch of his representative to Berlin is a matter worthy of some note beyond the usual conjecture aroused by such events in journalistic circles.

Surely this was not merely a reciprocal visit, bound by convention, as has been implied. Neither was it likely for the promotion of good will, since the supremely egotistical nature of the Nazi does not permit of harmonious relations with the malign, soul-destroying philosophy of Communism.

Can it be, then, that Russia is in fear of Germany? I think perhaps, it can be, and probably is so. True, Russia is possessed of enormous natural resources. Her numerical superiority is unquestioned. War materials in every conceivable form she has no doubt, in incalculable quantities. This, you say, would seem to be an unbeatable combination. However, the reverse is true. Endless years of oppression under the Tsarist rule; two decades of tyrannical bulldozing by Communist overlords; heartbreaking conditions of constant food shortage, and the lack of other vital necessities of life, have left their mark on Russia.

Individuality is a thing of the past. Her people are no longer conscious of, nor have they faith in, their destiny. Soon they will not care at all. Thus will they be encompassed by a doom, not of their own making, but whose insidious advance they, and later other totalitarian nations, will be powerless to halt.

Therefore, I should say that this is very definitely a beatable combination, for no matter what her material resources, lacking as she does the irrevocable determination to win at all and any cost, she must inevitably bow before the unquenchable spirit of all free men, and all her vaunted military might and material possessions become as useless clay.

This, then, is why Britain will win the war. Come Hitler and all his murdering allies, or come what may, we shall win because we are determined that nothing shall put us aside from our unshakeable resolve.

King-O'-Roses

Having extended her visit longer than she meant to, the old lady was going home after dark—and it was dark.

Presently, in spite of all her care, she bumped into a dimly-seen man and they both crashed on the pavement. At once the man was all apologies.

"So sorry," he murmured. "Careless of me. Let me help you up. So sorry."

"Never mind all that," returned the old lady, curtly. "Will you please tell me which way I was facing before I was knocked down."

An Added Advantage

He (gnawing at his wife's hard cake): "It's a pity I'm not an ostrich." Wife: "Yes, you're right; then I'd have a chance to get a new feather for my hat once in a while."

Efficacious

Conceited actor: "Last night I had the audience glued to their seats." Candid critics: "That's one way of keeping them there."

Beloved Ground

"I tell you," exclaimed Brown, "that Charley is wholly unselfish in his affection; he loves the very ground that she walks on." "Yes," replied Foss, "when she is walking on her father's estate."

Didn't Think Much Of It

Little Felix: "Why does the lady close her eyes when she sings?" Moth: "Shh-sh!" Father (unsympathetically): "She doesn't want to see her audience suffer."

Practical Reply

Dear Mother:

Please send me money for a new dress immediately. Have had several dates with Jimmy and have worn each of my dresses once. We have a date tomorrow night and I must have another dress right away. If you don't send the money, send a new dress. Thanks, RUTH.

Her mother answered:

Dear Ruth:

Get yourself a new boy friend.

Bad To Worse

The music master of a school near Bradford had been lecturing on Mozart, Beethoven, and other great musicians, when one of the scholars was struck by an original thought. "How is it, sir," he asked, "that musicians are always so ugly?"

The music master looked embarrassed.

The seeker after truth suddenly realized with horror that his question might be taken personally, and he hastened to make amends. "Of course, sir," he said, tactfully, "I only mean good musicians."

THE ROAD TO RENO

THE ROAD to Reno is paved, not with good intentions, but with the great American delusion that marriage should be thrilling, glamorous, romantic, exciting and adventurous. It isn't; thank God! It can't be, because it is founded on prosaic, everyday matters like bread and butter, work, bills, and bringing up babies. A really good husband is as boring as a nice, substantial rice pudding. There's nothing fancy about it satisfies." — Constance J. Foster in Your Life Magazine.

SPEAKER'S GUIDE

"I HAVE checked up almost '57 varieties' of places for a public speaker to park his hands," writes Dr. John F. Cowan. "In pockets—trousers, coat, vest; upper pockets, lower, rear; hung by thumbs or 'immersed'; hooked in vest armholes; clasped across tummy, ditto back, wadding handkerchief, and unwadding; clenching lapels of coat, pounding desk, brushing head, slapping (camouflaged) at flies; full-arm gesture, half arm, finger; pointing at audience; twisting mustache; finger-tips together uplifted; fumbling papers; pulling down vest; snapping, and, when not otherwise emphasizing the truth, sawing imaginary wood in the air."—Christian Advocate.

THEY CAN FIGHT

A RECENT dispatch describing the Arabs as "religious fanatics" is in error. At least so one would judge from Lowell Thomas' reference in his book, "With Lawrence in Arabia." There he points out that the Bedouin Arab, at least, observes the three main rules of the Moslem faith in the breach rather than in the observance. The Bedouin, according to Mr. Thomas, never fasts because he hasn't enough to eat as it is; he seldom bathes because he hasn't enough water to drink; and he rarely prays because he says, "Our prayers are never answered." But he can fight and the Italians will probably find that out.—Brantford Expositor.

DISASTER OF 1896

COLLAPSE of the $6,000,000 suspension bridge at Tacoma has recalled the first bridge disaster on the north Pacific coast. It occurred here in Victoria on May 26, 1896, when a street car crashed through the high centre span of the old Point Ellice Bridge. Sixty-five persons, part of a holiday crowd, on their way to celebrations at Esquimalt, were carried to their death.

Because the bridge was known to be weak, the number of persons permitted to ride across in a street car was reduced. The theory being that the passenger-weight reduction would be sufficient to make it safe. The surplus passengers had to get out and walk across, boarding the car at the end of the bridge. However, they always walked alongside the slowly-moving car.—Victoria Times.

Tenant Ousting Made Harder Under New Rule

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 (CP). — New regulations relating to eviction of tenants from premises in controlled rental areas across Canada have been issued by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, the board announced Tuesday.

The regulations give any tenant in a controlled area the right—subject to certain exceptions—to renew his present lease on the same terms and conditions, provided he gives his landlord adequate and proper notice of his intention to renew.

"Although the first order provided that no tenant could be evicted for refusing to pay more than 'the maximum rent' (approved by a local rentals committee on the rentals administration) cases have come to the administrator's attention where landlords have attempted to evade this provision by alleging other and often specious reasons for eviction," the board's statement said.

Tenants' notices of renewal must be given in writing and, in the case of monthly or yearly leases; must be within 10 days after receipt of a landlord's notice to vacate, the statement continued. Where a lease is fixed for a term of years or for six months or more, at least three months' notice of renewal is required. In the case of a lease for a fixed term less than six months, at least 30 days' notice must be given.

Landlord Loopholes.

A tenant will not be entitled to renew his lease if the landlord can satisfy "the Provincial Court of Competent Jurisdiction" that the tenant has not paid his rental, has broken the terms of his lease, or is not willing to pay the rental authorized by the Local Rentals Committee or Rentals Administrator W. M. Martin.

Other legitimate reasons for failing to allow renewal of a lease are committal of a nuisance by the tenant or anyone living with him; use of the property for immoral or illegal purposes; lack of reasonble care of the property; or if the landlord needs the property for use by himself, members of his family, a dependent or an employee.

If a landlord proposes to make major alterations, to remodel or sub-divide any housing accommodation, the tenant is not entitled to remain in occupation unless he is willing to accept the altered accommodation and pay any new maximum rental prescribed by the local Rentals Committee or the administrator.

A tenant is not entitled to renewal if the property is sold, or if he is using the premises for other than housing purposes.

The board's statement said no increase in rental would be effective under lease renewals in controlled areas unless they are approved by the local committee or the administrator.

Godiva's Protest Boomerangs

BOSTON, Nov. 23—(AP)—A modern Lady Godiva rode up Beacon Hill Friday to protest against proposed State "luxury" taxes, and rode down again with the assurance of State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long that she personally needn't worry, "for there wasn't much on her to tax."

With skimpy red shorts and a white silk blouse substituting for the original Godiva's long locks, Showgirl Yvette Dare dismounted from a white horse in front of the State House and delivered to Long this ultimatum:

"The way things are going we girls in the show business are having a hard time buying things we need like perfume, dresses, cosmetics, shoes, hats and other things you want to tax. Please don't tax us any more."

But Long, author of the proposed taxes which would assess the articles—and others—which Yvette mentioned, looked at it in another way.

He expressed belief that Miss Dare would benefit, for "there wasn't much on her to tax. But if the luxury levies which I have suggested are put into effect conditions will improve for everybody. And by little visitors could get salary raises and thus be able to buy more clothes."

Baiting The Owners

SEATTLE, Nov. 23—(AP)—Bothered by an accumulation of unclaimed umbrellas, officers of the ferry boat Santa Rosa put them into a show case with price tags prominently affixed to each. "What we have in mind," purser Ed. Johnson said, "is that if the owners see their umbrellas for sale in this showcase they will make a beef and reclaim them." (No charge for this service).

Cavan, S. Monaghan Convention Fine Review Of Sunday School Year

CENTREVILLE, Nov. 23 (ENS)—The 51st annual convention of the townships of Cavan and South Monaghan was held in Centreville Presbyterian Church on Thursday, November 21. There was a fair attendance of teachers and senior scholars from the various Sunday Schools. A great deal of interest was manifested in this important work.

The President, Mr. J. Stewart McGill presided, and extended a cordial welcome to the representatives. Rev. A. Raeburn Gibson conducted the devotion.

During the business period the following resolution was adopted to be sent to the Hon. James Gardiner, minister of national defence: "We the delegates from the Presbyterian and United Churches Sunday of the Townships of Cavan and South Monaghan of the counties of Peterborough and Durham assembled in convention on Nov. 21st, for economic and moral reasons, universally desire and request that everything possible be done to curtail the sale and use of intoxicating liquors during the progress of the war, and that you lend the utmost of your influence to achieve the reforms in this regard, indicated by the committee of representative churches and temperance workers, which appeared before a committee of the Dominion Cabinet at Ottawa on July 24, 1940."

In the round table conference conducted by the Rev. A. L. Siscoe, many Sunday School problems were considered and many helpful suggestions were brought out.

Following a hymn the convention adjourned to the Sunday School hall where all enjoyed a splendid supper supplied by the Centreville Church ladies.

Evening Rally

Beginning the evening session, Rev. M. E. Rowland conducted devotion and emphasized the necessity of fellowship with Christ so that Sunday School teachers may implant on the pupils a Christian spirit that will lead to high and noble living.

Following an anthem by the choir the election of officers was announced and they were installed by Rev. J. Everson as follows: President, Fred Fallis; vice president, Reg Sutton; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. R. C. Hanbidge; children's department, Miss E. Sharpe; boys, Oakley Carley; girls, Mrs. Kenneth Syer; mission, Mrs. Norman Thompson; adult, Miss Esme Johnston; home, Mrs. Garnet Shield; young people, Gerald Anderson; teacher training, Miss Estella Hetherington; temperance, Messrs. Joseph Burns and Gomer Robinson.

After a fine solo by Mr. John Anderson of Peterborough, the retiring president, Mr. J. Stewart McGill, thanked all who co-operated with him in the work during the past two years.

The new president, Mr. Fred Fallis thanked the convention for the honor and confidence placed in him. A splendid quartette was rendered by Messrs. Jake Isbister, George Berry, Mrs. O. B. Johnson and Miss Allie Berry.

The special feature of the evening was an address by Rev. J. W. Gordon of Port Hope. He stressed the fact that what is wrong with the Sunday School is wrong with ourselves. The Sunday School is what we make it, and the only way to improve the church and Sunday School is to improve ourselves by divine fellowship and following the standards in the New Testament.

Ladies Guests Of Hunt Club

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 23—(ENS). — In keeping with the custom for the last three years, members of the Lakefield Hunt Club entertained the ladies to a banquet on Tuesday evening. The event being held this year at "Woodburn Lodge," the home of Mrs. Dora MacMillan, Queen street.

The table was attractively decorated with a small evergreen tree, a snow scene with deer placed on the central reflector.

A special feature of the evening's program was the singing of several of the camp songs, especially the theme song, which is always sung when the hunters open and close camp, and it found special favor with the ladies when sung before and at the close of the evening program. As Pakesly is where this club has its hunting ground, the song is dedicated to that part of the country.

"O Pakesley land, dear Pakesley land,
Upon a jack-pine stump I stand,
And look away across the trees
And wonder why my fingers freeze;
Old euchre howls, his bugle sounds
And says the deer are coming round."

Other items on the program included vocal numbers by Percy H. Skitch and a duet by Mrs. MacMillan and Rufus Payne.

Deserter Caught

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23—(AP)—A man found hiding in a church here today admitted deserting the Canadian army, police reported. Detectives Paul Robinson and Michael Gyongyos said he gave his name as Theodore M. English, 18, formerly of Flint, Mich., and confessed he left the army because he "did not like the treatment" he received. He told the detectives of joining the Canadian forces July 29 at Toronto, they said, but expressed determination to resist returning. Robinson said English reported that a companion deserted with him Friday, but they parted at the border.

Review Planned Of Canada's Defence Laws

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 — (CP). — A House of Commons committee to review the Defence of Canada Regulations under which subversive elements and alien enemies in this country are interned will get down to work as soon as Parliament resumes after the Christmas recess, Justice Minister Lapointe said today.

Mr. Lapointe announced in the House Wednesday that the special committee which studied the regulations last year will be re-established. Finance Minister Ilsey, who served as chairman last year when he was Minister of National Revenue, is expected to be in the chair again this session.

"The committee members want him to be chairman again this session," Mr. Lapointe said today. "He is a lot busier man now than he was last session but he promised me he will act." Mr. Lapointe added the personnel of the committee would be nearly the same as last session when it studied the regulations behind closed doors for many weeks.

A stirring defence of the regulations was made in the Commons last night by Arthur G. Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound) who last session took an active part in revising them. While admitting some amendments might be desirable he said: "It would, in my view, be a dangerous thing to relax our regulations."

Mr. Slaght said attacks were being made in many parts of Canada against the regulations, the principal attack being that they were contrary to British justice. People who voiced this complaint failed to recognize that the Canadian regulations closely follow those in force in the United Kingdom.

Claimed Too Severe

During the debate on the address to reply to the Speech from the Throne, several members of the House have attacked the regulations on the ground they are too severe and do not make sufficient provision to enable innocent persons to prove their innocence.

The new House Committee will have before it the representations of Members of Parliament and various organizations which have communicated with Mr. Lapointe.

The Civil Liberties Association of Toronto, headed by B. K. Sandwell, has written leaders of the Government and Opposition parties in the Commons and Senate urging several changes in the regulations, particularly to ensure that interned persons get a speedy review of their cases and adequate opportunity to defend themselves at such hearings.

The association's letter stated that Regulation 21 empowered the Minister of Justice to intern persons without trial or without any of the ordinary safeguards of appeal and publicity. On the other hand, Regulation 22 provided for appointment by the Minister for a review of the case of any interned persons who applies for it, such application to be disposed of "promptly and justly."

The letter said that "it appears to this association that a very serious delay is developing in the disposition of these cases. Nor is the reason far to seek, in view of the fact that only two advisory committees, one French and one English have been set up to deal with the entire list of cases."

The association urged that instead of two committees, each consisting of one persons, there should be a large number of committees to dispose of all the applications with reasonable speed, each committee to consist of not less than three persons.

The association also lodged several objections against the existing system of conducting the hearings. The interned persons asking that his case be reviewed should be given sufficiently definite particulars of the grounds on which his internment was ordered to enable him to bring rebuttal evidence.

Newlyweds Honored By Lakefield Legion

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 23—(ENS). — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barker, a recent bride and groom of Peterborough, were guests of honor at the home of Mrs. Helen Marling, Regent street, Lakefield, when members of Branch 77 of the Canadian Legion, of which the groom is a member, and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion, Lakefield, gathered on Tuesday evening, to present them with a beautiful table lamp and accompanying address.

The evening was pleasantly spent in cards, after which Ellis Simpson read the address and Mrs. W. Adamson made the presentation.

A suitable reply of thanks was made by the recipients, after which the ladies served dainty refreshments.

Census Reveals Population Over 12 Million

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 (CP)—Figures released yesterday on national registration indicated Canada now has a population considerably more than 12,000,000, compared with 10,376,788 at the last census in 1931.

National registration embraces only persons of 16 years and upward and the total number registered is more than 8,000,000. Census officials explained that in the 1931 census 66 per cent. of the total population was composed of persons 16 years and upwards.

If the ratio is the same now as in 1931, officials said, then there now are more than 4,000,000 persons in Canada under 16 years, or a total population of better than 12,000,000.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services, announced in a statement that during national registration on Aug. 19, 20 and 21, 7,860,470 persons registered. Registrations since that date of persons who reached the age of 16 brought the total to more than 8,000,000.

Of those listed during the August registration period, 3,988,760 were males and 3,981,710 females.

By provinces the registration showed the following totals with number of males in brackets:

Prince Edward Island, 63,018 (31,520); Nova Scotia, 382,599 (188,946); New Brunswick, 293,646 (145,936); Quebec, 2,152,240 (1,072,924); Ontario, 2,738,642 (1,360,382); Manitoba 500,075 (256,370); Saskatchewan 593,592 (324,100); Alberta, 537,768 (293,8852); British Columbia, 598,768 (314,830).

The number of single men and widowers without children between the ages of 19 and 45, inclusive, numbered 989,539, distributed as follows:

Ontario, 309,179; Quebec, 291,727; Nova Scotia, 49,338; New Brunswick 36,649; Prince Edward Island, 8,004; Manitoba, 65,877; Saskatchewan, 87 293; Alberta (including Yukon), 76,494; British Columbia, 65,178.

In British Columbia nearly 600,000 people registered out of an estimated 1939 population of 774,000. In Saskatchewan approximately 600,000 persons registered from an estimated 1939 population of 949,000.

This indicated a greater percentage registration in British Columbia than in Saskatchewan, but the Minister said the answer is that the census shows that in British Columbia 74 per cent. of the population is over the age of 16. In Saskatchewan only 62 per cent is over that age.

Also the figures showed the estimated population for Quebec in 1939 at 3,2100,000 and for Ontario at 3,752,000. Actual difference in 1931 between these two Provinces was approximately 500,000 and registration figures show the two provinces maintaining their relative position.

Fiery Dubinsky Upsets AFL Quiet

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23—(AP).—The dream of a quiet, business session that had enveloped the American Federation of Labor convention has been broken by David Dubinsky, unperturbed to-day after three fist fights and bitter charges he made against grey-haired chieftains of the group.

Police-guarded and nursing a bruised lip, Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, charged the executive council, the guiding body of the A. F. of L., had repudiated pledges made to him as part of the conditions under which he returned to the organization.

Dubinsky returned to the A. F. of L. fold last June after deserting the Congress of Industrial Organizations which he helped found following his departure from the A. F. of L.

He charged the A. F. of L., while talking of making peace with the C.I.O., was actually creating a "war chest."

He said that because of a measure he introduced at the convention here to outlaw racketeering from unions he was attacked by Joseph Fay, vice-president of the Operating Engineers' Union and a "red-headed" man.

Fay, who admitted a "brawl" with the five-foot four-inch Dubinsky, said the "argument" started when he blamed the garment workers' leader for helping organize the C. I. O.

The two "promises" which Dubinsky said were made to him by A. F. of L. President William Green but repudiated by the executive council were:

A two cent per capita tax on all members instead of the present one cent per capita tax and a special one cent assessment on each member; and stripping the executive council of its present power of suspending a union.

HEALTH PROBLEMS

By DR. L. A. CLARKE
Peterboro M.O.H.

In 1938, 2,360 death occurred in Canada from influenza, while the toll from pneumonia amounted to 7,428. These are impressive figures and when we stop to consider that 92 per cent. or more of the cases of pneumonia are preceded by the common cold, it gives us reason to consider the common cold a serious illness. The majority of colds are infections which we catch from other people and which are therefore largely avoidable either through the exercise of more care ourselves or on the part of those who have colds.

Dr. L. A Clarke

The common cold and the disease we now call "flu" are caused by definite viruses. There is, however, such a similarity in the symptoms that the two diseases are not always clearly differentiated. The "flu", however, causes more discomfort and lasts longer. Both these diseases enter the body through the nose and throat. A cough may spread the organisms which cause disease for many feet around the cougher, making it possible for individuals within the sufferer's coughing range to aspirate the viruses and in their turn develop a cold.

How may we prevent colds? One important method is for those who have cold to refrain as much as possible from contact with their fellows. No one has any moral right to deliberately endanger the health of his fellow beings. If he must mingle with other people, then he should be careful to guard his cough with a handkerchief and to avoid contaminating articles with soiled hands. For those who have not colds, the resistance to the infection may be kept up by avoidance of hunger, fatigue and chilling. The mother who has a small child to care for and who has a cold, should wear a mask and before ministering to the child should carefully wash the hands. Other members of a household who have colds should not even go into the same room, as small children are very susceptible to this infection. Too frequently when a child catches a cold he later develops pneumonia, middle ear disease, mastoid disease and even meningitis. So the importance of protecting the small child from the common cold should be particularly emphasized.

If you have acquired a cold the best thing to do is to go to bed and stay there for two or three days. There are several reasons for this. By this isolating of yourself you diminish the chance of infecting others. You, yourself, will run less chance of developing complications and the cold will get better more quickly. At present it is believed that about the fourth day a cold is practically non-infectious. There is no specific cure for the common cold. Certain remedies will alleviate the symptoms. Before spending your money on patent preparations you will probably in the long run be money in pocket if you consult your family doctor.

Remember that prevention of pneumonia lies to a great extent, in the prevention of the common cold and the common cold is preventable.

Some Closeup Shots In The Capital

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 (CP) — Because the war has dislocated continental Europe's normal business with the western hemisphere, Trade Minister MacKinnon probably will be able to effect a sizeable increase in Canada's exports by his forthcoming trip to the West Indies and Central and South America.

Already Canada's western hemisphere have taken a big jump. Britain's Navy controls the seas, and manufactured goods from enemy European countries no longer can reach the rich markets on this side of the world. Every South American country now buys more from Canada than it did before the war—Argentina almost twice as much. The Dominion has displaced Germany as the third exporting nation of the world.

Mr. MacKinnon and three other officials of his department leave at the end of this month on an exploratory trade tour to the British West Indies, Cuba, Panama, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil.

Copies of the late editions of the local newspapers appear by dozens on the members desks around 5 o'clock...they draw a lot more attention than whoever happens to be speaking...even Cabinet Ministers take second place for a few minutes.

An attendant stopped a man in the gallery from taking notes but Arthur Beauchesne, clerk of the House, says the attendant was wrong...not taking is allowed...but don't try to draw cartoons... Candid Camera shots of the House in action also are barred...as Mr. Beauchesne puts it: "this isn't an entertainment or a picture show—it's the most serious business in the country."

The gold-washed silver mace weighs about 20 pounds and cost a couple of thousand dollars...the Government paid for it but technically it shouldn't have...the mace is the symbol representing the King's presence at all meetings of the House...theoretically it ought to be owned by His Majesty.

Miscellaneous Intelligence

A semi-official cat lives in the tool house near the parliament buildings...almost nightly he visits the guard on the Senate door for a bowl of milk or some such, then sits contentedly until daylight before going about his business...he's a Solemn cat with a Senatorial air ...maybe that's why he prefers the Senate entrance to the House.

There's other things around the building at night, too...bats fly about the Senate and House doors ...where they go in the daytime nobody knows, but there are lots of nooks and crannies in the buildings.

Beards aren't common in the House but J. E. Alfred Dubuc (Lib. Chicoutimi) has a small pointed one...for size it's not a patch on the luxuriant, square cut beard carried by Senator Raoul Dandurand, government leader in the Upper House.

CBC To Revamp News Broadcast

OTTAWA, Nov. 23—(CP)—The Munitions Minister, Hon. C. D. Howe, who also has jurisdiction over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, said Friday, "We have decided to revamp our broadcasting of news to be effective the beginning of the year."

Mr. Howe was commenting on a report from Washington that the Dies committee investigating un-American activities had issued a white paper liking Transradio Press Service with operations of transocean news service which was alleged to be engaged in distributing German propaganda in Latin America.

Mr. Howe said:

"I called attention of the House of Commons to the fact that we were not satisfied with the position of transradio earlier this year.

"At the time we did not have anything definite upon which to act. It was proposed to stop transradio news being broadcast but there was a great deal of resentment against cutting it off.

"Now we have decided to revamp our broadcasting of news to be effective the beginning of the year."

Gladstone Murray, general manager of the CBC, said the CBC Board of Governors would be meeting in Ottawa next Tuesday. He said he intended to assemble all the facts in connection with the transradio matter and submit them for consideration by the Board.

DIT CLAPPER

Heading for the 200 goal division, which very few players in National Hockey League history have achieved, is Aubrey "Dit" Clapper, durable defence player of the Boston Bruins, as he begins his fourteenth season under the big tent, all of which have been spent in the livery of the Boston team.

In league contests; Clapper had scored 196 goals when the present season began, so that entering the 200-goal Hall of Fame does not appear to be a difficult task. He has exceeded 200 goals, when the 11 he scored in Stanley Cup play are taken into account. In the series of 1930, when Bruins swept through their own section and down to the Stanley Cup finals against the brilliant Canadien team of that era, Clapper had his big cup year, scoring four goals. In the league season prior to cup play, he had his biggest season, right-winging the great dynamite line of Weiland, Clapper, Gainor, with 41 goals, 20 assists, 61 points.

A chequered career has been that of Clapper. From defence, to forward, back to defence, and starring in all three, probably stamps him as one of the most versatile players the National Hockey League ever has known.

When Clapper joined Bruins in 1926-27, he was a defence player. With Boston Tigers he was schooled as a right-winger, with the result that when he joined the Bruins in 1928-29, he was a full-fledged forward and, in his third season, he blazed to fame as a unit of the highest-scoring forward line hockey ever has known, the "Dynamite Trio" of 1929-30, with Clapper on one wing, Gainor on the other, tricky little Cooney Weiland in the middle. Weiland scored 43 goals in the season, while Gainor got 18. On goals and assists, this trio totalled the staggering figure of 183 points. Bruins that year lost only five games of 44, tied one, captured 38, a phenomenal record. At one point they won 14 straight.

A few years ago, Clapper was relegated back to his old post on the defence, and dropped into the position as a hand drops into an old glove. With his physical bulk and strength, his ability to hit a heavy bodycheck, to break quick on attack and set up plays, he quickly became one of the most valuable players on the entire Bruin rearguard. And playing defence hasn't affected his scoring prowess so much as might be expected. Art Ross likes his defenceman to do plenty of puck-carrying, and so Clapper fitted into that scheme naturally. Last season, playing defence, he had 10 goals, 18 assists and was leading the defence players of the league in making points. At least, he was tied with another ex-forward, Ebbie Goodfellow of Detroit Red Wings, for the points honors, Goodfellow shading him by one goal in actual scoring. The previous season with 26 points, Clapper also led the points-making defence players.

Clapper's Record.

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Summoned to the state penitentiary where her father lies near death, Lona Ackerman is dismayed when he fails to recognize her. He is serving a life sentence for a murder which occurred when he sought to avenge his daughter's honor. Finding a friend in Jim Claridge, Lona had just begun to take a new interest in life when the prison warden telegraphed her of her father's illness. Alone in the world, she had spent months, finding jobs, then losing them when it became known she was a convict's daughter. Finally Jim had found her a new position, saw more and more of her, until they fell in love. The prison warden takes Lona to his home. As they enter, two convicts confront them with guns. Once in the warden's car, the convicts slug the warden and dump him out, then attempt a mad get-away with Lona in the front seat. Eventually she pretends to faint, then lurches for the steering wheel. Then they crash. Only slightly injured, Lona recovers in the prison hospital and finds her father has died. When she takes her father's body home for burial, she finds herself the object of all eyes, due to the wide publicity that followed the attempted prison break. Back in the city, her landlady asks her to leave because of the publicity. At her office she finds a strange girl at her desk.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

MR. SANDERS was bending over his work as Lona came into his office. He looked up and adjusted his glasses to his near-sighted eyes as if he did not recognize her for a moment as she stood, hesitantly, before his desk.

"Oh, yes, Miss Ackerman," he said then, and she smiled. "I suppose you've come for your check," he went on, hunting about his littered desk in the futile way he had when he was uneasy. "I'll have it made out for you if you'll wait."

"Check?" Lona stared, her heart sinking. "But I've just got back, Mr. Sanders. I've come to tell you I'll be ready for work tomorrow. I'm sorry I had to stay so long." The words tumbled out all over themselves, as if she were afraid to hear what he might say if she stopped talking and gave him a chance.

"Well, you see, Miss Ackerman, it's—this way." He stumbled, groping for words, not meeting her eyes.

"Didn't Jim—didn't Mr. Claridge tell you I was called away?" she cut in.

"Yes, I believe the young man did say something about your—ah—your father. But I didn't understand you were planning to—ah—come back to us. You see, I—I had to—I've already hired a girl—"

"You mean you're firing me?"

"Well, you see, after all, I—you must understand our position, Miss Ackerman. This is a business office with a reputation to maintain. This—stuff the newspapers have been printing—" He shrugged and pointed to his littered desk and again Lona saw her own tragic face framed in the high collar of her mourning dressing staring up at her mockingly.

"You mean there's no room here for a—a convict's daughter. Is that it?" Her lips curved in scorn and her eyes were hot.

"I'm sorry. Your work was good, Miss Ackerman, I'll give you a reference, of course. And I've added a week's salary to your check. No doubt you will be able to find a suitable place soon." He fumbled about his desk again, and then held out to her a folded check. "I hope you understand our position," he said, with an air of finality.

"I understand." Somehow Lona forced the words out calmly. "I understand perfectly. I just wonder if you do—" She broke off and turned hastily to keep him from seeing the tears that blinded her suddenly.

"Now, now Miss Ackerman," he protested in futile embarrassment. Feeling she could bear no more, she fumbled for the door, found it, and slammed it behind her, shutting out his half-hearted protests. Head up, she went past the two pairs of staring eyes in the outer office as if she did not see them.

There was only one thought in her mind as she went back to the stuffy hotel room where her luggage still stood unopened. If Jim should turn her down, too That would be the end.

There was no word from him, and she crowded back a feeling of panic as she unpacked her suitcase and, laying out fresh underthings and a clean blouse on the bed, made preparations for a bath. Of course it wasn't really time for him to call. He probably wouldn't receive her message for another half hour. It was usually about three when he quit work.

Mechanically she forced herself to go through the motions of bathing and fluffing up her mop of hair. With hands that fumbled a little she dressed herself in her blue suit again, smoothing out the ruffle of the fresh blue linen blouse that brought out the clearness of her young skin. She even went over her nails, one eye on the creeping hands of the dresser clock.

She wouldn't allow herself to think, even, of what had happened to her, until she had talked it over with Jim, she decided. It was too much to face alone. Jim would tell her what to do about it. He'd smile that little half smile of his and the blackness would go away. Perhaps with Jim across the table from her, looking at her with his brown "Tiny" eyes, she might even be able to laugh about it.

He was late in calling. Three-thirty and four o'clock passed and still no tingle of her room phone brought a drawling voice to her from the stuffy parlor of Mrs. Peterman's boarding house. Her head was whirling a little as she sat by the hotel window and watched the people crowding by on the street below, and she realized suddenly that she had had nothing to eat since the country breakfast the old minister's wife had forced on her back in Bridgewater before she had boarded the train. Not that she was hungry. The way she felt now, she never wanted to eat again!

Five o'clock came as she sat there staring, and she began to wonder if, perhaps, he might not have gone to dinner without visiting the boarding house. He might have decided to eat out. Or Mrs. Peterman might have neglected to give him her message. In a sudden need for action she dialed the hotel desk again.

"Are you sure there's been no call for 318?" she asked.

"Three-one eight? . . . Nothing today for three-one-eight," the clerk's droning voice informed her. Impatiently, then, she told him to connect her with Mrs. Peterman's number.

"That line seems to be busy," he told her, after a long wait. "Can't raise them."

In a panic she hung up. If the line was busy perhaps Jim was calling her now, trying to get her.

She paced the floor then, but no call came through. Six o'clock passed, then six-thirty. The dizziness in her head warned her that she should go out and eat, but she couldn't summon the courage. She felt, somehow, that she could never face the crowded street again with its hostile eyes. Not alone!

Slowly the minutes dragged. The clock's patient hand made its endless round again. And again. Seven-thirty, then eight o'clock . . . nine, finally. And still no call! Motionless by her window, she twisted her sodden handkerchief into a ball and smoothed it out again, over and over. He HAD to come, she kept reassuring herself. Something had kept him away from the boarding house. He had not received her call, couldn't have received it, or he would have come.

Sitting there in the dark, her mind went back again over the things that had happened to her in the past few days. She shuddered as she realized the enormity, and a little of her faith in Jim ebbed, leaving her old and shaken. What if, after all, it was too much for him? What if he, too, like her sour-faced landlady and the embarrassed Sanders, couldn't stand the publicity.

She sobbed, suddenly, as the suspense became almost unbearable, and began pacing the floor again. Once, outside her door, she heard the click of the floor elevator and the sound of steps coming her way and she held her breath. But they passed on down the corridor and her hopes fell again. Ten o'clock came! Ten-thirty. . . . At last she could bear no more. Picking up the telephone she put in another call to Mrs. Peterman's.

"Could I speak to Mr. Claridge?" Lona asked her, pleadingly.

"Mr. Claridge's not in just now. Who wants him?"

"He's not in?" Relief gripped her. "Has he been in at all this evening?" she brought out.

"He went out after dinner. Who wants him—"

"He was in to dinner? Tonight?"

"Yes. . . . If you'd tell me who—"

"Did you give him my message? The one I gave you this afternoon? The words seemed to come from her stiff lips of their own volition.

"About calling the hotel? Yes, I gave it to him. Wrote a note and slipped it in his door . . . do you want me to tell him again when he comes in? It's gettin' pretty late."

"No, you needn't bother." Somehow she managed to keep her voice calm.

She sat for a moment numbly holding the phone in her hands when the click of the severed connection had sounded in her ear. Jim, too! It was hard to believe. Surely, not Jim! Why, he loved her! She could have sworn he loved her. He couldn't be doing a thing like this. It was impossible. She felt stunned, bewildered, as if the earth had dropped abruptly from beneath her feet, leaving her gasping, not knowing in which direction to take her next step.

Quaker Aces Drop Game To Westclox

Four teams swung into action as the Ladies' City Basketball League inaugurated its annual campaign at the Y.W.C.A. last night. A powerful Westclox team, strengthened by several new players, turned in a fine game to down last year's senior title holders the Quaker Aces, 20-14 in a close opener, while the present junior champion St. John's team turned back Y Gym 14-9. Both winners turned in strong offensives in the opening half to pile up lengthy leads, that carried them to victory depite last period rallies by the losers.

Westclox piled up a commanding 14- lead in the opening stanza that was more than enough to stave off Quaker Aces' uphill fight in the closing minutes.

Westclox turned in a sharp shooting, fast attack that out-ran and out-shot the losers to give them a clear-cut edge, but Aces made it interesting in the closing minutes. Both teams missed a flock of scoring chances due to the early stage of the season, with the winners showing a little better marksmanship. A peculiar feature of this battle was that not a single foul was called against either team.

Elinor Craig with 10 points, led the winners in a fine showing, with B. Saunders and A. Flynn also prominent. D. Weese with 6 points and E. Alexander were the pick of the losers. The teams:

Quaker Aces (14).—J. Fowler, A. Grady 2, D. Weese 6, M. Leahy, E. Alexander 4, C. Kirn, H. Howden, P. Lawless 2, V. Wood.

Westclox (20)—D. Gibbs, J. Carter, B. Saunders 4, M. McFadden, E. Craig 10, A. Flynn 4, J. Crowe 2, H. Tighe, C. Metcalfe.

Referee, H. Smith. Umpire, J. Cooper.

Again in the second game it was the first half play that spelled the difference in the final result as St. John's gained an 8-3 margin in the opening period and hung on to win out 14-9. Y Gym, with ace scorer R. Dalliday, tied up by the winners' effectitve checking, were weak on the attack while St. John's made better use of thir scoring chances to earn the win. While the efforts of both squads at any kind of a passing attack was lacking as yet, St. John's were a little more potent in this department, also, especially in the opening half. Checking was more rugged in this game than in the opening contest and the winners were guilty six times to two fouls called against the losers. St. John's failed to count this way and Y Gym made 1 free throw in their half dozen tries.

E. Clark with six points, T. Laws and A. Bowler led the winners and R. Ellis and R. Dalliday were outstanding for the Y team. The teams:

Y Gym 9—B. DeMaio, S. Zacks, S. Florence, I. Young 2, B. Flynn, R. Dalliday 2, R. Ellis 3, D. Ackford, R. Sullivan 2, D. Duffus.

St. John's 14— A. Bowler 2, E. Harte-Maxwell, E. Clark 6, T. Laws, V. Douglas 2, H. Harte-Maxwell, D. Groombridge, F. Gynane, E. Gynane 2, J. Coleman 2.

Referee, L. Grose. Umpire, W. Thirnbeck.

Carpetball Notes

Once more the carpetball schedule is in full swing. The first batch of results showing only one draw game with the Auto Trimmers just managing to steal one point to keep them off the shutout list. The game from down south are regaining the name lost last season by taking six out of eight points. All teams should remember that their deposit money should be paid by the end of the month. We understand that another team may be added by the end of the coming week. If so, a game will be arranged between the new team and No. 4.

By FRED D. CRAIG

One trouble about the rules of hockey is that the legislators are always tinkering with them. For instance among the proposed changes in the O.H.A. playing rules brought before the annual meeting of the association today by the sub-committee was the following: "A puck kicked by a player of the attacking side deflected into the goal by any defending player, except a goalkeeper, shall count as a goal." Now there is something. Hitherto the rule has been that a puck kicked into the net by an attacker would not count as a goal under any circumstance and that was a simple and workable rule. Now they propose to make it tough for the referee by changing it so that an attacking player can score with a kicked puck provided it strikes one of the defending players, other than the goalkeeper on the way. If it does not hit any of the defenders and is deflected in off the goalie himself it does not count. But suppose the kicked puck hits a defence man first and then is deflected in off the goalie. Is that a goal or not?

There are a couple of changes however that will help to improve the game. One of them provides for a 10-minute misconduct penalty for any player who shows disrespect for the rulings of the official. That is in line with punishment handed out in baseball for players who show their disgust over umpire's decisions by tossing their glove into the air or violently throwing their bats upon the ground, although the baseball penalty is more severe. Another new rule provides a match misconduct penalty for any player who on the players' bench gets on the ice, throws any article on the ice or molests or interferes with opposing players or with the officials. That is designed to prevent some of the near riots that have been caused by players not on the ice who precipitate trouble.

Junior players who were born in November or December of 1920 get a break this year, by the way, for the O.H.A. has decided to change the age limit from January 1, 1941 to November 1, 1940, making all youngsters whose birthday is in the last two months of the year eligible for another season of junior hockey. The old age limit has stood for thirty years. At one time a player had to be under 20 on the first of January to be eligible for the junior ranks but a year was added on thirty years ago. After the change had been agreed on there was considerable discussion when the delegates realized that by extending the junior limit to 20 years they had paved the way for all but one of the champion Kingston Frontenacs to play another season as juniors. It was too late then to do anything about it and the rule has been in existence ever since.

Over 100 Juvenile Clubs

It may be a bit surprising to local hockey fans who seem to be oblivious to the necessity of doing something to train younger players to learn that this winter more than 100 clubs will operate in the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association. The figure indicates how rapidly this movement to provide hockey facilities for the boys not yet of junior age has been growing across the province and it also indicates that unless the local service clubs or some other organization comes to the rescue Peterborough is in danger of missing the boat altogether. Even such small centres as Tweed are blazing the trail for us. Tweed expects to operate either a team in the Ontario Juvenile Association or a juvenile league of its own this winter. Here the enthusiasm of youngsters is beating up against a wall of indifference and there are no signs on the horizon of a better day coming up.

Local ball fans will be interested in the announcement that Earl Whitehill, brother of our own Gunner, has been appointed by Roger Peckinpaugh, new manager of the Cleveland club as one of the coaches of the Indians next season. Whitehill, a veteran pitcher who has seen service in both leagues, will share with Luke Sewell the Cleveland coaching duties, "Peck" having decided to get along with two instead of three coaches. Whitehill who in his younger days spent a winter in Peterborough, working in the Quaker Oats plant will be called upon to take over the drilling of the Cleveland pitchers and although this is his first job as a coach it should be right down his alley. Earl should know about all the angles of pitching by reason of his long experience under the big top and his friends here will pull for a successful season for him at Cleveland in 1941.

The world lightweight championship battle at New York last night was billed as a grudge fight and the manner in which champion Texas Lew Jenkins waded into his old foe Pete Lello looked as if the press agents were more right than usual. Jenkins won by a technical knockout in the second round when Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the show after the champ battered the Chicago boy worse than the British fliers battered Taranto. Jenkins gave away three pounds but that didn't mean a thing. He gave Lello everything in his repertoire, flooring him four times in a row before Donovan decided that the massacre had gone far enough. It was a great fight for the champion, but not so good for the cash customers or the radio fight fans who had hardly time to get their cigarettes lighted before the whole thing was over.

The prediction that there would be plenty of action in the opening double-header of the Ladies' Basketball League at the Y.W.C.A. was amply verified when two fast exciting games were reeled off to give the loop a fine start for what promises to be a good season. The feature, of course, was the defeat of last year's senior champs, the Quaker Aces by the Westclox girls. Sparked by Elinor Craig who tossed in five baskets, the Westclox trimmed the title-holders 20 to 14. In the other end of the double bill, the St. John's team, always contenders, gave a good exhibition to take the verdict from Y Gym. All four teams looked good and there should be some great battles during the next few months. Incidentally the game between the new Y team and Quaker Debs, scheduled for Monday night, has been postponed.

Peterborough Curlers got together at the rink last night in a sort of curtain-raiser for the season and got pepped up for the games that lie ahead by watching several reels of motion pictures of the Macdonald Briar competition at Winnipeg last winter. The films showed shots of some of the best curlers in the country in action in this curling classic and the local enthusiasts enjoyed the action. Mr. Christie who accompanied the film here addressed the gathering briefly in regard to the competition and some interesting remarks on curling generally were given by Assistant-Secretary McMurty of the Ontario Curling Association who was a guest last evening. The affair was a good start to what local curlers are confident will be an unusually successful year.

Christmas Boxes

The Christmas boxes that are to be sent overseas to students, who have enlisted in the Active Service Forces since 1935, were on display in the main showcase the first few days of this week. These should prove to be most acceptable gifts and it is evident that careful planning has been done by the Girls' War Service Committee as regards their contents. Each box contains some knitted goods done by the girls after school hours and these will be very valuable to our soldiers when the icy blasts of winter whistle around their bodies. Another very important item is a tempting Christmas fruit cake colorfully done up in cellophane. Ex-students of P.C.V.S. are going to be very very popular when the Christmas mail is delivered to them about a month from now. Two packages of those ever-popular Lifesavers have also been included to enable the recipient to have a clear voice at all times. These peppermint-flavored candies will assist our sergeant-major to ring out his commands clear as a bell. A tin of peanuts, noisily eaten by the person sitting directly behind you in the show, will always be at hand when the soldier desires to quell the cravings of the inner man. We presume that the names of the girls who have donated and packed the box will be written on the enclosed School Christmas card. An exhaustive survey of names had been taken some time ago and it is nobody's fault if an ex-student has been overlooked. However, we are quite sure that these boxes will be appreciated by our lads overseas far more than we can tell at present, and will help them to remember that they are not being forgotten at home.

A small, but valuable, shipment of Christmas cards have arrived to send overseas so hurry up and mail them, now.

War Savings Stamps

On Wednesday afternoon we were told to proceed to the Assembly Hall after 3:30 instead of to form rooms and p.t. As we comfortably prepared ourselves for what was going to happen, we were startled to see a group of distinguished gentlemen stalk up upon the stage to the accompaniment of a rapidly disappearing screen and a more rapidly disappearing figure in brown.

Dr. Kenner introduced Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Peterborough War Savings Stamp committee, who in turn introduced de Gaspe Beaubien, joint chairman of the National War Savings Committee at Ottawa. Mr. Beaubien commended our school most highly on its sale of stamps and said when Britain wins the war, we can say that we had done our bit. He urged us to keep up the good work and to continue it for the duration. His supplementary talk in French drew a laugh from his audience—even though some of the students—or the most of them—did not understand the text of his speech.

We students of P.C.V.S. were duly flattered and impressed as we had good reason to, since we have now sold more than $4,000 worth of stamps. Last week's sale was $380, which is high, but not high enough to keep up a weekly average of $400. So, Serve by Saving and boost next week's sale over the $500 mark.

Labels, Etc.

Only four days are left to get Camay, Crisco and Chipso labels in. Do not wait until the box is finished but take the labels off as soon as your mother receives her order from the corner grocery store. We urge everyone to make a last minute drive and scrape up enough labels to be worth money. Discreetly ask your mother to order these articles on Monday and bring them to school on Tuesday. Don't forget.

There is an imposing array of boxes in Miss M. Montgomery's art room containing countless rolls of tinsel. These have come from ways deep and mysterious and at frequent intervals a fresh batch is brought from the assortment on the main landing.

We wonder how the collection of Red Rose tea and coffee labels is coming on? No one has ever said anything about these but surely there has been quite a number collected. Just clip the label off the package, drop it into the designated box in the usual place, and put the tinfoil in another box in the near vicinity.

Ironic

Some conscientious students have probably been racking their brains to find a new opening for the advancement of war work. Meanwhile, opportunity knocks. Pieces of scrap iron, big and small, shiny, rusty, dirty, dusty, and otherwise are to be found around the corners of the Industrial Arts shops.

Under the supervision of the teachers, this iron could be collected and with some other scap metals pitched in for good measure, it could be sold at a handsome price to whatsoever scrap iron dealer bids highest.

Mid-Week Assembly

Wednesday morning marked a great change in the history of morning assemblies. For the first time, the hall was filled with first and second form students. For the first time, middle and upper school students experienced the misery of a prolonged first period, which lasted almost an hour.

So, while they sweated over their books, the assembly commenced in usual manner. First-formers were given a "pep-talk" on how to sell War Savings Stamps. The two best stamp-sellers in the first forms told how they sold their share of the stamps. The cheering squad, represented by Jean Johnston, Alden Gourley and Bob Crocker led in the cheering and did a good job, too. This larynx-and-glottis streching practice was engineered with all the good intentions of showing to the first and second form pupils the best method of emitting the school yells. But, alas, the response was disheartenigly small.

Musically talented students of lower school were asked to show off their accomplishments at next Wednesday's morning assembly.

L. J. Pettit read a letter sent to him by a school teacher "somewhere in England." We must all admire the pluck and high spirits with which the students and teachers alike, bear their lot, under conditions which make education so hard to acquire, and life itself so uncertain.

Teasettes

The pile of papers in the basement has swollen to a huge imbroglio. Do your bit and bring a newspaper every morning.

A fine crowd of boys turned out for junior and senior basketball practices but we hope to see them in new uniforms before scheduled game.

Oh, oh! The tenth graders have the privilege of attending every assembly throughout the week. The lofty fourth and fifth, and possibly the third, will now cry out in mournful tones, "Oh, to be a second former."

Four lucky students were given the privilege of hearing Poldi Mildner, talented pianist, on Monday night.

The directors of the campaign for selling table-centre. Christmas trees find themselves handicapped by lack of efficient help to assist in making these ornaments. We understand that a Christmas tree is usually pointed at the top but the model displayed in a certain room is almost rectangular in shape. This is done without an appeal from the persons in charge, but we feel that volunteers would be welcomed by Miss Montgomery or John Franks. Try it, anyway.

Teachers are becoming more and more perplexed at the curious contortions in which pupils contrive to get themselves in order to look at a speedily passing airplane. P.C.V.S. must be very aeronautically minded if students are not yet accustomed to 'planes passing over our fair city.

Two popular war songs have been added to our repertoire. These are "Kiss Me Good-Night, Sergeant-Major," and "I Am a Canadian." When we get to know these better perhaps some more will be forthcoming.

Those of you who have received a Dominion War Savings Certificate will no, doubt, have read the enclosed piece of paper telling you what your money is being used for. If you have bought a $4 Certificate it may bring down a German plane since that sum of money will buy one anti-aircraft shell. We advise everyone to read this slip and to put forward a special effort to sell more stamps than ever before.

Firemen Jailed

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(CP)—Six auxiliary firemen were sentenced today to serve five years in jail for looting from bombed property. Four soldiers also were sentenced to varying terms ranging up to nine months for the same offence.

Hall Of Fame

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).

THE "Hall of Fame" idea is spreading since the baseball people brought it up, and by next summer United States golfers will have a full-fledged shrine of their own, it was learned to-day from Freddie Corcoran of the Professional Golfers Association.

A committee of newspaper golf writers is being formed to vote on the nominees, and the P.G.A. is donating a plaque on which to inscribe the names of the fairways immortals. In time it is hoped to build a regular shrine such as the baseballers have at Cooperstown, and to install busts of golf's heroes.

Both men and women will be eligible for golf's Hall of Fame, the sole stipulation being that they were born in the United States.

C. R. U. VOTES AGAINST SANCTIONING EAST-WEST BENEFIT GAME

President Hopes Way Be Found For Rugby Game

CALGARY, Nov. 23—John M. Bannerman of Calgary, president of the Canadian Rugby Union, said here Friday that he hoped an East-West exhibition football game would be staged in Toronto Saturday, Dec. 7, despite the fact his organization by a telegraphic vote had refused to give official sanction to the venture.

Mr. Bannerman expressed that hope after stating the C.R.U. was apparently not prepared to approve of a game involving the champions of Eastern Canada against Winnipeg Blue Bombers, 1939 titleholders. The C.R.U. last spring had ruled out East-West championship games until such times as Western Canada teams elected to adopt the standard C.R.U. playing code. After much deliberation, Western Canada officials last spring had decided against discarding their own code.

In announcing the decision of his C.R.U. executive, most of them Eastern Canada residents, Mr. Bannerman said a minority opinion expressed the hope that some way could be found to offer an East-West exhibition for the Sports Service League and other worthy causes that would benefit.

"While it is difficult for me to suggest how this might possibly be done," Mr. Bannerman said, "I am personally recommending to the powers that be in the East to carefully explore all possibilities."

Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, commenting on the announcement that the C.R.U. had voted against sanction of his proposed East-West football exhibition that is in the nature of a war effort undertaking does not mean that we will be obliged to abandon the idea," President Hamilton said. "Right now the C.R.U. apparently neither wants to sanction the game on our behalf nor sponsor the undertaking itself as a war effort contribution. Unfortunately there appears to be a concerted effort to block our plans to carry out a game at Varsity Stadium Dec. 7. For instance, for the first time in history a two-game series is being suggested for the Eastern final, with games Nov. 30 and Dec. 7. By booking a two-game Eastern final our proposed Dec. 7 date would be blocked."

"If a two-game Eastern final is decided upon, then we must consider that it is being done to deprive us of a date we suggested many weeks ago, as a Sports Service League undertaking."

"We'll keep on trying to book our East-West game," Hamilton continued, "although I am very disappointed that any group of civilians should raise so much opposition to such an obviously important war-effort benefit."

Given Until Monday

Manager Joe Ryan of Winnipeg Blue Bombers said today that unless the Western football champions are advised definitely by Monday morning that the proposed East-West charity game will be played they will disband for the season.

The Winnipeg team has continued practice outdoors on the frozen gridiron at Osborne Stadium despite near-zero temperatures. Ryan said today the team will disband and equipment will be stored away unless they learn by Monday that the charity game will be played.

"We didn't seek the game in the East," Ryan said. "We were asked to play and we agreed to do so against any opponent selected to assist a very worthwhile cause."

"At a great deal of expense to the club—we have to keep the stadium open and it is an expensive plant to keep operating — and at considerable inconvenience and hardship to our players and staff we have carried on while down East they continue to quibble.

"Our lads have done plenty of travelling and all they would get out of it is a trip and the satisfaction of helping out the men in uniform. We feel we have done our part and unless we know something Monday we are through.

"If a great opportunity is missed to raise money to supply recreational needs of the troops, we feel, that they and the public will place the onus where it belongs and no part of it rests on the shoulders of the Winnipeg Rugby Football Club."

St. Catharines Wins 4-2 From Oshawa

(By the Canadian Press.)

President-elect Ross Clemens of the Ontario Hockey Association called the shot when he told the annual meeting of the association in Toronto today that the Senior "A" circuit is expected to produce "the best hockey we have seen for several years." The fans are getting just that.

Almost any game this season has been a toss-up and no one team is a heavy favorite to cop the league title, as was the now-defunct Toronto Goodyears last winter. Then the teams are becoming more evenly matched as the winter progresses.

Take last night, for instance. There was plenty of action, suspense and speed as Toronto Marlboroughs and Hamilton Defascos battled to a 3-3 overtime draw in Tigertown; St. Catharines Saints outlasted Oshawa 4-2, and Niagara Falls Brights endged London Streamliners, 2-1 with a goal in the final two minutes.

The Hamilton tilt was featured by the brilliant netminding of Herbie Mortimer for the Toronto Dukes and Jack Eley, formerly of Brandon, Man., for Hamilton. Both stopped plenty of goal-labelled shots.

Scored in Overtime

Tied 2-2 going into overtime, Hamilton shot into the lead when Conick beat Mortimer on a pass from Polly Miocinovich. Three minutes later, lanky Murray Ezeard tied the count again on a pass from Eddie Shamlock.

Dick Groom and Miocinovich scored the other Hamilton counters, while Taylor and Shamlock were Toronto marksmen. It was Shamlock's best game since he came here from Edmonton at the start of the season.

The draw left Hamilton in the league lead, one point ahead of their traditional enemies—any Toronto team.

At Niagara Falls, husky Scotty MacPhail shot from 10 feet inside the London blue line with two minutes of play remaining to give the Brights a victory that left them undefeated this season in six games. They've tied two.

London started out strong and scored the only tally of the opening period on a clever sortie by Ilio Marzo, Kowalski and Galbraith. Marzo shot the goal with four seconds of the period to play. Hal Cooper evened the count with the only goal of the second period on assists from Blink Bellinger, who tried out with Toronto Maple Leafs this fall, and Bobby Walton.

St. Catharines, playing in front of a home crowd, took their third victory of the season with goals in the final frame by Roy Heximer and Art Rombough. George Hastie and Rosy Rossini drew assists on Heximer's tally.

Deflected Into Nets

Heximer's goal was on a long shot that Golie Harry McQueston blocked, but which was deflected into the net by Oshawa's Danny Daniels.

Heximer also scored for St. Kitts in the first period and was followed by Puff Carr-Harris for Oshawa and Paul Mundrick for the homsters. Mundrick, a Toronto Goodyear player last winter, came east from Winnipeg. On the only goal of the middle session, Oshawa's Jerry Cooper tied the score at 2-2 on a pass from Carr-Harris, a former Kingston performer who had a try-out this fall with Detroit Red Wings.

The results of the games left Niagara Falls tied for second place with Marlborough, each with nine points. St. Kitts and the idle Port Colborne Sailors are tied for third position, three points back. Oshawa have four points and London, in the cellar, have won but one game in seven played.

Team Shakeups Failed To Alter Standing

(By the Canadian Press.)

Some of the personnel still are a little strange, but the hockey fandom of Montreal Canadiens and New York Americans will watch their clubs battling for a far-too familiar spot this week-end.

The general shakeup that took place in both of the National Hockey League clubs since last season so far has failed to find a relative change in their positions in the standing. It's still the Amerks second to last and the Habitants last, just the order in which they finished last season.

By virtue of one victory and a draw in their six starts, the New York team holds a one-point edge over the Canadiens, who have been able to string together only two ties in their six games. They engage in a home and home series during the week-end, with the Americans playing in Montreal tonight and then both switching over to New York for Sunday night's game. To the loser will go the league's cellar position.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks also play two tough one-night stands as part of the N.H.L.'s six-game week-end schedule. The Black Hawks travel to Toronto for the first game, with the clubs meeting again in Chicago Sunday.

Two other games complete the schedule, in which no squad is left idle. Boston Bruins play twice, at New York against the Rangers Saturday, and at Detroit against the Red Wings Sunday.

Riding a five-game victory streak, Toronto will be battling to strengthen their hold on first place in the two-game series with the Black Hawks. The Leafs have not met defeat since they lost the opening game of the season November 2 to the Stanley Cup-holding New York Rangers.

The surprising Red Wings of Detroit, who play only once in the two days, are only a single point behind the Leafs. A double-loss by Toronto plus a Detroit victory could see them shoot into first position.

Rangers, who play only once during the week-end, will be striving to keep their record free of blemishes when they meet up with Boston. The Blue-shirts have won two and tried two of their four starts to hold a third place tie with Chicago.

Jenkins Kayos Pete Lello Retaining Crown

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.— (AP). — Give Lew Jenkins a man he can hit and the skinny ex-cavalryman from Sweetwater, Texas, still looks like a great lightweight champion .

In the first defence of his 135-pound title since he stopped Lou Ambers last Summer, Lew gave Pete Lello of Chicago the works in the Garden last night.

He knocked the Chicago boy down four times with sickening swipes to the jaw, and the fourt time Referee Art Donovan didn't bother to count. He gathered the outclassed Lello in his arms to save his life. That was at 2:37 of the second round.

It was the second time in a week that a big Garden crowd failed to see two rounds of fighting in the main event. Al (Bummy) Davis fouled out in approximately the same time against Welter Champion Fritzie Zivic on the previous Friday.

Clean-Cut Fight

At least, last night's result was clean-cut and stylish. Jenkins, looking lean and hungry at 131¾ pounds, slapped Lello to the canvas with the first clean punch he landed in the second round. It was a powerful left hook to the chin, and it settled the fight.

Lello, who probably is wondering today what became of the Jenkins he knocked out in Chicago in 1939, managed to get back on his pins at the count of nine. But all he did was run into another barrage of lefts and rights that smacked him down again and again. He was helpless when Donovan finally took pity.

Jenkins was not noticeably handicapped by the absence of his manager, Hymie Caplin, who usually shouts advice into Lew's tattered ears between rounds. Caplin was in Brooklyn telling District Attorney William O'Dwyer, what, if anything, he knew about an alleged gambling ring. Hymie subsequently was arrested and charged with grand larceny.

Lew said in the dressing-room:

"I missed Hymie, but I didn't miss Lello."

Indeed, he didn't.

Fights Last Night

By The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — Baby Breeze, 138½, Manhattan, Kas., stopped Jackie Wilson, 135½, Los Angeles (7).

"Bummer" Fined

Called onto the carpet at the New York State Athletic Commissioners' office, Al "Bummy" Davis, New York battler, was fined $2,500 and banned from New York rings for life for his part in the fight with Fritzie Zivic at Madison Square Garden. "Bummy" repeatedly fouled Zivic in the second round of the fight—fouled him so purposely, and openly that Referee Cavanagh overrode the commission's anti-foul rule to stop the fight and disqualify "Bummy." The unfortunate Mr. Davis, dark glasses, and his followers are shown leaving the commission's offices after receiving his punishment.

Fear Football Out At Sarnia

SARNIA, Nov. 23 (CP)—When Sarnia's soldier footballers turn out at Athletic Park this afternoon for the Senior O.R.F.U. final with Balmy Beach, it may be this city's last glimpse of senior football for a long time to come.

For one thing, Imperial Athletic Association may never return to the habit of sponsoring senior football as it has done for some years, and the 2-26th Battery, which has sponsored it this year, has found public support nothing to enthuse about.

On the other hand, in a football community like this, where the lads of six and seven start to kick the leather around and they carry on with it through public and secondary schools, the game can never die.

The immediate task in hand is to dispose of Balmy Beach today, something which even the most loyal fan does not believe can be done, with twelve points to spare. However, Mike Fitzgibbon's Battery lads have worked all week as if they had more than an outside chance, and will be in there fighting at the end.

The team is expected to be the same as in Toronto last week, with Jim Butler looking after the hoofing duties and Galloway and Freddie Daws at hand as alternates. Biggest trouble with the Battery this year has been the lack of spare backfield men, but there is no way of getting over that now.

Today's game is called for 2.30 p.m. Three hundred soldiers will march to the field in a body.

Crawley Wins Port Hope Race

PORT HOPE, Nov. 23 (Special)—J. C. Cawley of Haileybury was the first to finish in the forty-fourth annual running of the four-mile Oxford cross country cup race held at Trinity College school Friday afternoon. J. M. Locke of Belleville captured second place barely nosing out E. T. Stanger of Montreal. The order of the others was: Fleming, Montreal; Hart, Oakville; Austin, Chapleau; German, Ottawa; Duncanson, Toronto; Patch, Montreal. Winners time, 25 minutes 22 seconds. The race was unique in that the first five to finish were members of the same house, Brent, which therefore won the cup.

Petticrew—Mys

A pretty late autumn wedding took place on Wednesday morning at the church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, Hastings, when Doris Mys, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mys of Fort Francis, became the bride of Anthony Petticrew of Toronto, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Petticrew of Hastings.

The bride entered the church to the wedding march played by the organist, Mrs. E. J. Petticrew. The Nuptial Mass was said by the Rev. Father Paul Costello, assisted by the groom's brothers, Leo and Paul Petticrew.

The bride was lovely in a dress of powder blue dovetone crepe, with wine accessories and carried a bouquet of Briarcliffe roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Frances Shaughnessy wore a dress of Monterey rose crepe with black accessories with corsage of Sweetheart roses.

The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Patrick Petticrew. The junior choir sang beautifully as the music was played by the mother of the groom, who wore navy triple crepe with a corsage of baby mums.

Following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served at the home of the groom's parents. The dining room was prettily decorated in a color scheme of pink and white and the bride's table was centred with the bride's cake, Miss Rose Petticrew and Ruth McCarthy assisted in the serving.

Hazel E. Jones Is Bride Of F. A. Spencley

A charming wedding took place at four o'clock this afternoon in St. George's Anglican Church, when Hazel Elsie, eldest daughter of Mr. Wilfred Jones, Gordon Avenue, was united in marriage to Corporal Frank Albert Spencley of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, son of Mr. Albert Spencley. Rev. T. H. Floyd performed the ceremony, for which rose chrysanthemums and baskets of roses formed a background. Mrs. R. King was at the organ, and during the signing of the register Frontiersman Walter Farr sang "Because."

The bride's father, Mr. Wilfred (Soldier) Jones, gave her in marriage. Her gown of white triple sheer over taffeta, made on princess lines, had a bodice fashioned of satin ribbon, with full bishop sleeves, and her cloudlike veil of white tulle was bound with white satin ribbon and caught with orange blossoms. A plain gold cross was her only ornament, and she carried pink Briarcliffe roses. Miss Elsie Jones, younger sister of the bride, and Mr. Earl Spencley, brother of the bridegroom, were the attendants, Miss Jones frocked in robin's egg blue taffeta shirred at the shoulders, with tiny pink bows at the neckline, and short puff sleeves. She wore a Dutch hat of matching taffeta, pink elbow-length lace mittens, and carried pink nasturtiums and fern. The ushers were Bombadier Wilfred Jones and Edward Holland, both of the 4th Anti-Tank Battery, Lindsay.

A wedding dinner was held for immediate members of the family, and later the bridal couple left for Western points. For travelling the bride donned a smart wool suit of cameo rose, with cape collar and muff of mink, brown hat and accessories.

Bazaar Resembles Country Fair At St. Andrew's

One was reminded of a country fair at the bazaar in St. Andrew's Sunday School hall yesterday afternoon. There were crowds and crowds of people, tables and tables of homegrown produce, and establishing a fitting autumn touch, sheaves of grain and ferneries of evergreen on the platform, pumpkins sprouting sprays of pine needles in the windows, yellow and brown streamers draping the hall.

The country stall furnished by rural women of the church, stood in the limelight from start to finish. Visitors thronged to its well-laden table for plump dressed fowl, home canned asparagus, other vegetables and fruit, some done up in tins by a farm woman who explained that the process and tins were similar to methods and containers used by commercial manufacturers. There were glass shakers of summer savory, parsley growing in cans ready to be snipped off for meats and salads; Christmas cake, also in sealed tins; treated pine cones in green net bags with scarlet ties; sprays and sprays of bittersweet, and countless other treasures of rural farms and gardens. An Association worker plied orders into her handsome car and delivered them herself, exultant that she was received "at the front door" and not the tradesman's entrance.

Homebaked beans in brown earthenware jars were one feature of the home-cooking table, which boasted hundreds of delicious goodies; the fancy-work table had an unusually interesting gift assortment for shoppers with an eye out of Christmas presents, and articles at the "White Elephant" table were more practical than otherwise, in spite of the name's implication.

A display of beautifully patched and quilted quilts hung across the platform, all the work of the Association members. They were ten in number, and included a "congregation" quilt, on which names of church members were embroidered. Hand-made crochet tablecloths were also on display.

The ladies' parlor rang with happy chatter during the tea hour, comfortable chairs, a fireplace and shaded lights adding a homelike atmosphere to the room. The tea table was charmingly arranged with a centre of large bronze and yellow chrysanthemums, and lighted yellow tapers.

Two Comedy Skits Are Presented At George Street

Y.P.U. members of George Street United church are fast winning a reputation for skill in presenting comedy drama that really makes one laugh—last year's presentation kept the audience in tears of mirth, and Friday night's two comedy skits, short enough that there was little time for a dull moment if there had been one, left the audience clapping enthusiastically and wishing for more. The cast was well chosen, with a creditable performance give all round.

"Elizabeth's Young Man," a one-act farce comedy, was directed by Mrs. H. W. Ballard, and the second presentation, "Saving Dad," was directed by Mrs. George Gatfield. Mrs. Lloyd Ash, Y.P.U. president, assisted by group members, was responsible for much of the work "behind the scenes" that makes for a finished, smooth-flowing production. Rev. H. L. Roberts was chairman for the program, and musical diversion was provided by the well-known Aloha Serenaders, Helen Ludbrook Galvin, assisted by Miss Velma Scott and Miss Jean McIlwain.

A registered nurse who informs her aunts that she will drop in at their New England home en route to a sanitarium with her patient, a lunatic, whom she assures them is quite harmless, then changes her mind and comes on her honeymoon first, was material for the comedy "Elizabeth's Young Man," a skit rippling with fun. The niece arrives before her letter announcing the change in plans, and amusing complications develop when the bewildered aunts mistake the new husband for the lunatic, treating him accordingly.

The second story centres around Tom Walker, a jolly lovable man whose intention of enjoying life as much as possible is somewhat hampered by his sister-in-law, Aunt Jerusha, who, like many characters in real life, believes in doing her own duty and seeing everyone else does theirs.

The humor comes in when Aunt Jerusha works a little too hard at her job of saving Tom from marrying the young and pretty stenographer in his office, Mary Rogers, employing the culprit's son, John, to assist. Reluctantly leaving his study of "bugs" to come down and discourage the love affair, the tale ends on the amusing but quite expected note of John marrying the stenographer, and Tom the pretty, widowed mother, with whom the sly old gentleman was in love all the time!

"Canadian Weavers Setting Pace For Americans,' Says Joan Hall

A comprehensive idea of what Ontario has accomplished in producing good looking wearing apparel for which the material is grown in Canada, fast-dyed, with Canadian vegetable dyes, and meticulously tailored was given by Mrs. Joan Hall Friday afternoon at a meeting of the Women's Art Association in the Y.W.C.A. green room. Mrs. Hall told the group of spinners and weavers, organized first at her home, whose members do most of their spinning and weaving in their own studios.

Several years ago Mrs. Hall studied weaving in Sweden, and told of her discovery of a great many looms still in use in the country north of Stockholm. "Here a great many of the people who are weaving and spinning were taught by their parents or grandparents, but in Canada most of us have skipped a generation and have to learn after reaching maturity, studying either in the United States of England, where weaving is much more developed than in Canada," she said.

The group to which Mrs. Hall belongs came into being about two years ago following a visit to this country of Americans who are looking to Canada to supply them with things they cannot get elsewhere, Mrs. Hall said. She believes they come to Canada because they want something distinctly Canadian, and spoke of this demand as a challenge and an opportunity to establish here.

Pointing out the justifications of hand-weaving, Mrs. Hall explained that it meant opportunity for carrying out one's own ideas in color; manufacturing a fabric that is going to last a long time, and creating something that is definitely different and interesting. "Although the chief reason we weave is because we like it," she said, "it is not so slow, and therefore impractical, as some people think. Certain materials, especially drapery, which presents no complications in weaving, may be woven at about a yard per hour, while materials of wool that is fluffy or sticky take much longer."

Mrs. Hall was in charge of the handicraft show in the women's building of the C.N.E. this year, and folowing her talk models displayed styles in a brief fashion show similar to the one in Toronto. Highlights included an evening cape of peacock blue, lined with green matching the silk thread woven into the material; a powder blue wool suit, beautifully tailored; a striped jacket in blending shades of green and brown, and a beige skirt with matching sweater and jacket. Of interest was the tweed coat displayed by one model—although in use spring and fall for six years, it still showed no signs of wear.

Soft piano music was played during the show by Miss Florence Gladman, and models were Mrs. W. B. Gordon, Mrs. Homer Borland, Mrs. W. G. Ovens, Mrs. J. E. Girven.

Mrs. C. S. Thompson, president, introduced the speaker, and warmly welcomed Mrs. A. C. Mackie, national president of the Women's Art Association, who also spoke briefly. Mrs. Thompson's sincere words of welcome also extended to new members, and to war guests from Great Britain now residing in Peterborough, Mrs. H. B. Wyman, Mrs. Enid MacKenzie, Mrs. R. J. Breyfogle, Mrs. C. L. Jones, Mrs. J. French, Mrs. H. Miller, Mrs. G. A. Excell, who attended the program by special invitation, and to whom the club's doors "are always open wide."

Member of the Guild of Arts and Crafts were hostesses for the tea which was served after the meeting.

A much anticipated program is to take place on December 6, when Agnes Logan Green, pianist, and Dorothy Allan Park, soprano, will be the artists, with Gwen Craw at the piano.

Edna J. Thompson Weds C. A. Lough

St. Luke's Anglican Church was decked with chrysanthemums and ferns for the wedding at one-thirty this (Saturday) afternoon of Edna Jennie, daughter of Mrs. Thompson and the late William H. Thompson, Peterborough, to Charles Alfred Lough, son of Mrs. Lough and the late Charles S. Lough of Ida. Rev. G. J. Bousfield performed the ceremony; wedding music was played by Miss Margaret Flowers, and Mrs. William Hepburn sang "Because."

Mr. William E. Thompson gave his sister in marriage. She wore a graceful gown of traditional ivory satin cut on princess lines, with long, tight-fitting sleeves coming to a point over the hands. Her veil of bridal net was caught with pearls, and she carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Miss Gwendoline Lough, sister of the bridegroom, was the attendant, wearing a full-skirted frock of dull gold taffeta, the slim-fitting bodice laced with green velvet ribbon, small matching hat, and carrying a nosegay of chrysanthemums and roses in blending shades. Mr. Albert E. Thompson, brother of the bride, was groomsman, and ushers were Mr. Joseph Barnard and Mr. Russell Kitchen.

The Kawartha Golf and Country Club was the setting for the wedding reception, where the bride's mother received in a gown of black dinner-date crepe with metallic trimming, matching hat, and corsage of Bettertime roses. Mrs. Lough, mother of the bridegroom, was in a frock of black loreche crepe with matching hat, and corsage of Briarcliffe roses.

The bridal couple left later for Ottawa, the bride travelling in a rose wool frock under a seal coat, with black beaver hat and accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Lough will live in Brampton, Ont.

Mrs. C. McKenzie Attends Art Club

Members of the Peterborough Lyceum and Women's Art Association were honored by a visit from the National President, Mrs. A. C. Mackie of Toronto, at their Thursday meeting. Mrs. Mackie, who has a summer home at Young's Point, has many friends in the city, and accompanied the guest speaker, Mrs. Joan Hall.

Speaking briefly about the Women's Art Association from the angle of the Lyceum Club, of which headquarters are in London, England, Mrs. Mackie explained that there are ten Lyceum Clubs on the continent of Europe; three or four in New Zealand, and three in South Africa. She told of the warm welcome extended her by various clubs while en route recently to Johannasburg, remarking that Canadian Clubs are in the limelight far more than they know, and therefore charged with a tremendous responsibility.

A relayed message from the mother club in London, contained in a monthly booklet, "The Lyceum," which has grown slimmer since the war, was referred to by Mrs. Mackie. It urged that clubs carry on during war years by "maintaining their ideals, being constructive, and building a faith that will help make the world a better and safer place when this tyranny is over."

An invitation was extended to Peterborough members to attend the monthly luncheons of the Toronto Association. The Friday Morning Music Club will entertain at the December 11 meeting, Mrs. Mackie announced.

Mona F. Earle Marries J. E. Laycock

The marriage of Mona Frances, daughter of Mrs. Earle and the late Oliver Barton Earle, Peterborough, to Mr. Joseph Edward Laycock, Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Laycock, Brampton, took place this afternoon in All Saints' church, Canon J. Douglas Paterson officiating. Bronze and yellow chrysanthemums decorated the church, and wedding music was played by Mrs. Logan.

Mr. Ronald Earle of Toronto, brother of the bride, gave her in marriage. She wore a princess gown of wood-rose velvet, with braided coronet of the same material, and carried bronze and yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Muriel Earle of Peterborough was the attendant, wearing peacock blue taffeta, braided coronet of the same material, and carrying a Colonial bouquet. The groomsman was Mr. Wilfred Scott of Toronto, and the ushers Mr. Roger Earle, Toronto, Mr. Robert Laycock of Brampton.

A reception followed at "Brae Farm," home of the bride's mother. For the wedding trip to Eastern points the bride wore a grey kidskin coat and hat with soldier blue dress and grey accessories. They will live in Ottawa.

Love Is Tricky; Symptoms Often Are Unrecognized. Best Evidence Is When the One Afflicted Has an Urge to Go to Work for the Other.

Isn't it strange, considering that love is the paramount interest of our lives and the thing we desire most, that we know so little about it? We don't know what love is. We have no reliable recipe for winning it or keeping it. We don't know how much love we should have to marry on, nor what kind nor quality. We don't know whether it is more dangerous in youth or age. We don't even know how to tell with certainty whether we have it or not. There are those who contend that love is a succession of thrills, of going hot and cold and palpitating at the sound of a footstep. Others say that love is a calming draught that gives you a sort of satisfied, I-have-found-what-I've-been-looking-for feeling. Some say that jealousy is a necessary part of love. Others that love has to be founded on respect. Some hold that you should not count the cost of love. While others believe that in love you should be very sure that you are getting your money's worth, and that before you invest your all in it you should be certain it is what you want and that it is all-wool and a yard wide and won't run or shrink or fade in the wash of marriage. With all these conflicting opinions about love, it is not surprising that so many people find difficulty in diagnosing their symptoms and determining whether that fluttery feeling in their breasts when some particular he or she is about is the result of a sudden heart attack, or too much steak for dinner, and whether the treatment indicated is a wedding or bicarbonate of soda.

Nor is it surprising that so many men and women believe they have contracted a mortal love-sickness every time they run a temperature over some charmer, but who find that what ails them yields to the absent treatment, and is completely cured by marriage.

Cannot See Symptoms

Nor, inasmuch as there are people who have imaginary diseases and other people who have fatal maladies that they never even suspect, is it strange that there are many men and women who are deeply, passionately in love without knowing it. They do not have hectic chills and fevers at the thought of John or Mary. Their appetites are unaffected.

They still take an interest in their business and going to the movies. They wouldn't think of committing suicide if anything untoward happened to the man or woman who, somehow, just rounds out life for them and makes everything worth while.

And because they haven't the symptoms of the grand passion, as set down in novels and poems, they don't know whether this congeniality, this happiness in being together, this desire to protect and care for the other is love, or not. The poor dears don't know that they have a chronic case that will only end in death.

It is only the very young who believe that every passing fancy is a great love, and it is only boys and girls who never question how much love it takes to make a marriage a success.

I get hundreds of letters from middle-aged men and women who ask if a warm friendship can be a substitute for a romantic love. They admire and respect each other. They have mutual interests. They enjoy being together. They could save each other from lonely old ages.

Yet because they are so sold on the Hollywood interpretation of love as a long-drawn-out kissing contest, they hesitate to get married.

They forget that there are many kinds of love and that our tastes in love change with the years. When we are mature calf love no more appeals to us than do the gooey ice cream sodas we relished in our teens.

Our passions have cooled down and we do not crave the lovers' quarrels and makings-up out of which we got such a kick in our twenties. We want the calm and steadfast affection in which we can put our trust and that isn't marred by jealousy and suspicions and bickerings.

When Honeymoon Fades

They also forget that every happy marriage settles down into a glorified friendship after the honeymoon has set. The romance is bound to end. The glamor to fade. In the fierce light that beats upon domesticity a man and woman see each other as they are—sick, troubled, tired, unshaven, with curl papers, with tempers that fray at times, nobody's idea of a fairy prince or princess.

But they also see each other as working, sacrificing, loving, comforting, the one person of whom they never tire, the one person who would stand by them if all the world turned against them. No man and woman who have a friendship for each other need be afraid to trust it. It will not fail them.

Love is such a tricky thing and has so many faces it is no wonder that we do not always recognize it, but there is one infallible test we can apply when we are in doubt as to our feelings.

If it makes us want to roll up our sleeves and go to work to do something for John or Mary, we've got it.

NEWLYWEDS SEPARATED

There are 15 platoons of 50 men each at Exhibition Camp and a query to the members of one platoon this morning revealed that three of the trainees are married. These men must have plunged into the matrimonial sea after registration.

READY FOR EXECUTION

Art Eagleton and James Brooks, the buglers at Exhibition Camp got a lot of dirty looks this morning from the 750 trainees who were routed out of their beds at six o'clock. The buglers come close enough to each but to act as an alarm clock for the weary trainees.

ARRESTED AT BAILIEBORO

The action of a man with too big a load of firewater so alarmed Bailieboro residents Friday evening that they sent an SOS call to Peterborough for police assistance. Provincial Traffic Officer L. A. McClure and Constable Leo Murphy went to Bailieboro and arrested the man. He was brought into Peterborough and later taken to Cobourg by Provincial Constable Adair.

Winners of the six prizes at the Kiwanis Ladies' Night at the Empress Hotel last night were Mrs. M. G. Hardill, Mrs. S. J. Graham, Mrs. W. C. English, R. B. Harle, Jacob Low and Dr. C. B. Waite. The proprietor had neglected to secure a license for the place before opening up and the police action resulted. The license had been held up pending improvement in the fire exits.

INTERESTING PICTURES.

A social evening in the school room of Murray Street Baptist church on Friday was largely attended. Some of the old games such spin the plate, musical chairs, etc., provided entertainment and exercise for the first part of the program. Selections were given by the Sunday school orchestra. The feature of the evening was the presentation of motion pictures by Gordon K. Fraser, M.P. The beauties of fall as they are seen at Burleigh Falls were given, and the coloring of the trees was exquisite. Mr. Fraser had also secured pictures showing the invasion of France, the bombing of towns and of actual warfare in the field prior to the collapse of that nation. Other reels depicted a rodeo in Arizona and the beauties of the international park shared by Alberta and Montana. At the conclusion refreshments were served by the ladies.

Young Corporal Found Guilty Assault Charge

CAMPBELLFORD, No. — (ENS)—It cost Corporal J. Owens of the Midland Regiment here $19.25 for cleaning up on another member of the Regiment, Pte. Earl Brown, outside a Hastings hotel on November 4th. Owens pleaded not guilty to an assault charge laid by Provincial Constable Jack Rogers of Havelock to whom the fracas was reported for investigation. Cpl. G. C. Smith was booked on a similar charge and also entered a "not guilty" plea. It was the evidence of Dr. E. A. Stuart, which figured prominently in the light penalty awarded the pair. He testified that Brown on being examined by him had a bruised jaw, required a stitch over the eye, and had his dentures broken. According to the M.O., Brown had declared he had "got what he deserved".

The trouble started as the result of an argument over a glass of beer. Brown was alleged to have remarked that the officers and N.C.O.'s of the Regiment "were no good" and felt he would make a better one. Cpl. Owens, testified Brown had said he wouldn't salute a British officer and that he then gave the Nazi salute twice "and with that I hit him."

Crown Attorney Harry Deyman asked, "I thought you required passes to go to Hastings. You were out of bounds weren't you?" He also drew attention to the fact that Owens had hit Brown twice before calling Provincial Constable Rogers.

Lieut. H. R. S. Ryan, Port Hope who acted on behalf of the accused declared, "Since these men have enlisted to fight the Germans it is impossible for us to be ignorant of the propaganda of fifth columnists. By his continual nagging his statement about the N.C.O.'s and officers and his refusal to salute the British flag climaxed by the Nazi salute, I think Brown asked for it. If this were to occur in Britain in time of war he would probably be shot.

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. of Peterborough in summing up the case said, "The conduct (of these men) is sufficient to convince me that they had more to drink than they need and that Brown gave something in the nature of a Nazi salute and a statement that he would not salute the British flag. Had this occured earlier (in the evening) it would have been overlooked but their minds were inflamed. In law they had no right to take the matter into their own hands." Concluding he declared that it was a shame to mete out severe punishment to two young soldiers so imbued with their duties as to forget themselves, "but they cannot take the law into their own hands and I find them guilty of assault causing bodily harm."

Henry Melville, Percy Township pleaded guilty to driving a car while his permit was suspended. Provincial Constable J. Rogers of Havelock laid the charge after finding Melville's car in the ditch as a result of a blow out. He paid ten dollars and costs.

A second assault charge against Gordon and George McCubbin of Percy Township who allegedly got into a fistic encounter with Ernest Skinkie was laid over till November 29th.

Failing to produce a driving license cost Lloyd Montgomery, Campbellford five dollars. The charge was laid by Police Constable Percy Bartley, Elmer Yade, Campbellford contributed $10 and costs on being found guilty of being drunk in a public place. He was picked up by Chief Constable Hardy.

Seaman Who Actually Saw Destroyer Knifed Is Nephew Of Peterboro Man

Believed to be the only living man from the destroyer Margaree who actually saw the collision in which the prow of a freighter knifed into the side of the Canadian destroyer and cut her in two, Able Seaman Don Snelgrove of Regina, who recently was given a warm welcome home to that city, is a nephew of a Peterborough man, Robert Snelgrove.

Young Snelgrove was a member of a gun crew on the quarter deck of the Margaree and he was the only one outside the awning. Snelgrove, another Regina sailor, Ron Young, and other members of the crew saved themselves by climbing a rope on to the freighter. Previously they had started to launch rafts, but quit when they saw one of the ratings crushed to death between the destroyer and the merchant ship.

Being rescued was not a new experience for Snelgrove. He was one of the survivors when the destroyer Fraser was sunk last summer and was in the water for over an hour before being rescued.

Woman Prone To Only See Virtues In Man She Marries Kiwanis Told

Ladies' night of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club, held at the Empress Hotel Friday night, proved to be a brilliant affair. It was Charter Night as well, and the speaker of the evening was Mrs. Charles Willox, of Niagara Falls, Ontario. Her subject was, "Husbands, Aren't They Funny?"

Mrs. Willox said, that when deciding on her subject, she had realized that research would not be necessary, because there was a wealth of material in her own home. Husbands come, she said, in three varieties. There are prizes, surprises, and consolation prizes.

A woman falls in love with some or one of a man's features, his physique, his mind, manner, or perhaps his blue eyes, but she soon discovers that it is his disposition with which she has to live. Woman is prone to neglect a man's faults, and to see, when possible, only his virtues.

Men are often out of sorts in the morning, she said, and they leave the house in a huff. When returning in the evening, and they feel more at home in the world, they expect their mate to be bright and cheerful.

How is it, the speaker asked, that when a man is waiting for his dinner, he continualy asks if it is ready, and then by the time it is ready, he has vanished. He may have decided that the furnace room needs cleaning, or that the aerial on top of the house needs fixing, and though his wife may shout her head off, he will not appear until the food is cold. He usually appears with a fishing pole in his hand, one that he has re-discovered in the attic.

Women Great Waiters

The old saying that man waits all of his life for woman is out moded, the speaker said. Today a woman can slip out of whatever she has on, and into something else, and then be waiting for him. Three quarters of her time is spent in either waiting for him to show up, or waiting for a showdown.

Men accuse women of being slaves to convention, Mrs. Willox said, and yet they were the ones who pulled their shirts on over their heads for 2,000 years, before they realized that they could button them down the front. They are not dressed, she said, until they have 42 buttons, and 16 pockets. They seem to believe that their own fingers are heaven sent, and that they are attractive in spite of the ravages of time and nature. They complain if a woman shows her back, if the woman is friend wife, and yet at a party will admire the "vertabrae of all young friends, and remark on the becoming quality of the mole on Mrs. Jones' Back."..... "Inconsistentency, thy name is husband."

Husbands will invariably forget anniversaries, and will dismiss them as being things to be considered with indifference. Yet, she said, they will howl if their birthdays slip past unnoticed. They lead a dog's life, they say, and some of them do. They come in with muddy feet, growl until they are fed, and then curl up in front of the fireplace and go to sleep.

Always talking of the way that mother could meet an emergency in the form of the arrival of unexpected company. They forget, said Mrs. Willox, that mother lived on a farm, and could rush out, kill a calf, and have veal patties in less than half an hour.

Men are all alike before breakfast and after marriage. The ideal man exists only in the minds of fond women, and he is tall, about six feet. He is dark, and will make love at the drop of a hat. Here, the speaker said, the description varies with the personal tastes of the woman involved. Speaking from a personal angle, Mrs. Willox was hilarious in her demands. Her ideal man would consider woman a member of the weaker sex, and live up to the wishes of his wife. He would think of her as being too delicate to get up first in the morning to get his breakfast, and would see that she got hers in bed. He would take his bath quietly, while she was sipping tea.

When leaving in the morning for the office, the ideal man would kiss his wife tenderly, and not "peck" at her, as if "he were a robin investigating something he thought might be a worm." He would thank his wife, when she reminded him that he was driving a little fast, and say "Thank you dear for bringing it to my attention," instead of muttering about the happy habits of some savage tribes who drown their female babies at birth.

He would think of his wife's health when she sneezed on the golf course just when he was on the back swing on the tee of the 14th hole, and would offer to get a sweater for her. Most of them say, "What a —— —— time for a —— —— woman to sneeze," and then throw the club after the ball which has rolled about three feet. At the club after the game, and when his wife was partaking of a rather large steak, he would never be heard to mutter in the direction of the biological elasticity of the female form. He would be adaptable, and would love his wife when she weighed 109 pounds, and when she went 190, and he would never refer to her as "a limosine model with a heavy tread."

Mrs. Willox was most amusing perhaps in the array of questions she put to husbands, some of them follow.

DO YOU—

When you're wife is on the porch on a moonlight night rocking and thinking of other moonlit nights, on other porches, and sighs, say, "try a little bicarbonate of soda," (never dreaming that it is her heart that sighs, and not her stomach)?

Call you're wife "the ball and chain" as if she dragged you to the altar by main force?

Shed you're manners with you're coat?

Object when you're wife puts her cold feet in you're back, and when she wakes you to say that you are snoring?

Wind your watch at 10:30 each night, regardless of your guests?

Go to sleep in front of the radio, and then, upon awakening, ask "who the devil changed that station"

Mrs. Willox closed her brilliant and amusing talk with the question "are husbands necessary", and redeemed herself to every man in the room by answering that they certainly are if a woman desires "a marvelous journey down the highway of wedded bliss".

With L. J. Petit in the chair, the speaker was introduced by Rev. H. L. Roberts of George street United Church. Mr. Roberts said that he had been the minister of the church attended by Mr. and Mrs. Willox in Niagara Falls. He was overjoyed he said, when he had been told that Mrs. Willox was to be the speaker at the Ladies' night.

In thanking the speaker, Ralph Standish was particularly brilliant, and as a young husband, took a most demure stand. One of the highlights in his thank you speech was a short verse.

"A baby wants her bottle,
A schoolgirl wants her fling,
A young girl wants a husband,
And a wife wants everything.

Two solos of excellence were sung by Dr. J. S. Graham. The Northrop Trio were in attendance, and supplied music that was much appreciated.

In closing the meeting, L. J. Petit paid a high tribute to Bill English, President of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club for the past year, and pointed to his many accomplishments.

Details Given Expenditures On County Roads

Details of county and suburban road expenditure this year amounting to $25,994.56, were read to the County Council on Friday afternoon by Reeve A. E. Mann, chairman of the Roads Committee.

The total in Ennismore was $1,812.30, Smith $4,641.02, of which $1,108.65 on county roads and $3,532.37 on suburban.

Douro, total $10,256.56, including $1,268.88 on county roads nd $7,624.63 on suburban roads.

Dummer, total $3,237.22, of which $2,879.23 was on county roads.

North Monaghan, $4,205.63 total of which $947.66 was on county roads.

Otonabee, total $3,634.77, of which $744.20 was on county roads and $2,125.40 for suburban gravel.

Reeve Mann said the committee had bought a new truck for $8,900, and was allowed $2,400 on an old truck, leaving $6,500 cash cost. Of this amount $2,500 has been paid on account, leaving $4,000 still to be paid. He said that Department subsidies would pay for the truck in five years. It had dispensed with rental of another truck this year, and was well built for snow plowing.

Mr. Mann told a little story of repairing at the cost of one dollar a grader magneto that broke down. A new one would have cost $65 plus 8 per cent. He and Warden McColl carried it to a repair shop which they discovered in Toronto after inquiring at two places about a new one. The chairman told the committee that the new system of accounting ordered by the Department had involved details of cost that would not be readily set forth until the statement of the provincial subsidy for this year was received.

Keene Drain.

Reeve W. A. Anderson warned the roads committee that both the county and the township of Otonabee might find themselves joint defendants in an action by property owners at Keene in their demand for a surface drain along the east side of the street opposite the Community Hall. He said the township had already done certain work which entailed $152.55 expenditure for labor and superintendence, $315.70 for tile, and the cost of two bags of cement. He filed a copy of the expense sheet as a record against the time when there is a settlement with those who should take care of this drain problem. Mr. Anderson also quoted a paragraph from a letter by E. A. Chalmers, county engineer, referring to this matter, and in his opinion it placed the responsibility on the county.

The Suburban Area Commission was spending money on similar work elsewhere, several projects in North Monaghan involving thousands of dollars.

Reeve Anderson intimated that the county was going to be asked to assume the maintenance of the Keene surface drain on a fifty-fifty basis, and sooner or later this question would have to come to a head in a reference to Judge Smoke. With co-operation the expense of court costs could be saved, Mr. Anderson said, but he felt obliged to advise the Council of the feeling in the township and especially in Keene about the county's responsibility in this matter which he described as a choked outlet.

Rambling Reporters

TALKS ALL NIGHT

Dire threats are being voiced by sergeants at the Exhibition Camp, against a certain one of their members who talks in his sleep. It seems this sergeant has the idea that the sergeant-major has the Indian sign on him, and all through the night he alternates between saying nice things about the sergeant-major and other things that are not so nice. The novelty of entertainment has worn off, and the talkative one may feel the impact of a pillow barrage some night or perhaps a small pail of water applied suddenly to the sergeant's face might effect a cure.—McG.

750 Young Men Commence Camp Routine

Bugles blared in the cold gray dawn at six o'clock this morning routing 750 trainees from warm beds at Exhibition Park, Military Training Centre No. 32.

More than one young man receiving first taste of army camp life, muttered strongly against the buglers, but they all hit the floor and the tardy ones found themselves heaved from the blankets by their more energetic companions. Physical drill pepped the boys up, and they were all set for a steaming hot breakfast, then returned to the huts to make up the beds, before starting the day's training routine.

Company commanders and N.C.O.'s lost no time in getting the training underway, and in all huts the day started with a lecture on military education, the need and value of discipline and how to identify and salute an officer.

Lectures were conducted in the sleeping huts and the boys squatted in a semi-circle, many of them relaxing on the beds while the company commander explained military law, military terms and camp routine. The boys were allowed to smoke if they wished, and the general comment on the breakfast "It was just fine."

767 Men Reported

Up to ten o'clock Friday night, 767 men had reported in, and of this number 29 failed to get past the medical board, despite the fact that every one had a medical examination prior to entering the camp. Hernia, physical handicaps, and other diseases including heart ailments were among the reasons for rejection. The medical officers had instructions to be strict and not one trainee was given the benefit of a doubt as to his condition. Men unfit for military training were sent home.

Camp officers expect that at least twenty more trainees will report today. Several may have been delayed because of sickness in the home, poor transportation facilities or pressure of factory work. The nominal roll is expected to be complete at noon today.

Trainees will be given leave at noon today and have the afternoon and evening off. Sunday afternoon friends and relatives of the trainees may visit the camp between two and five, but will not be allowed in the buildings, except the Salvation Army canteen, and recreation building.

Quebec Farmers Can Get Title To Their Farms

By ARTHUR MERKEL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—(CP)—Some 60,000 French-Canadian farmers whose forefathers paid feudal dues to "seigneurs" for centuries, turned in their "rentes constituees" this month for the last time.

The historic payment marked the death knell of seigniorial tenure, a system of landholding that had its beginning in the mediaeval ages and was brought to the New World in the 17th century by the early settlers of "New France."

The end of the deeply-rooted landholding system in Quebec came almost a century after the beginning of a government drive to abolish it. It outlasted the French feudal system, killed by revolution, by more than 150 years.

Seigneurs received their great tracts of land in Quebec from the French king during the century and a half following the discovery of America. In return, they were obliged to perform military service and pay a relief or "quint" to the crown when the seigniory changed hands.

The seigneurs aided French colonization by handing our portions of their estates to "habitants" or settlers. In return for their land, the habitants were obliged to pay the seigneurs "cens et rentes" a rent payable either in money or in kind, or both; to work for the seigneur on certain specified days, usually three days a year; and to pay a sum when the holding changed hands, except by direct descent.

Although missuses of the system in Europe were in part responsible for the French Revolution, the Quebec habitants, on the whole, enjoyed the benevolence and protection of the seigneurs which the system afforded.

Agitation against seigniorial tenure arose, however, after Quebec passed into British hands and it conflicted with English landholding laws. Finally the joint legislature of Upper and Lower Canada passed the Seigniorial Tenures Abolition Act in 1854.

The Act freed the habitants from all their obligations to the seigneurs except a fixed rent, known as the "rente constituee." The habitants were given a chance by the Act to rid themselves of the fixed rent by paying a lump sum, representing the capital of the rent, to the seigneurs.

To Pay Municipality

Comparatively few took advantage of the option, however, and this year about a third of Quebec's rural population made the yearly payments, totalling $180,000, to 245 seigniories.

At its last session, the Quebec legislature decided to buy out the fixed rents en masse. A commission was sent up under Roads Minister T. D. Bouchard and funds were borrowed to buy out the seigneurs at an estimated $3,200,000.

Instead of paying their rents to the seigneurs, the farmers will make annual payments to their respective municipalities. The payments, six per cent of the capital represented by the rents, will be used to amortize the commission's loan. When the loan is paid off, the habitants will hold full title to the property for the first time since their forefathers settled in the New World.

Continuance Is Urged Home Mission Work

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 23 (ENS)—If home missions are let down during the war it will mean that future leaders will lack training according to Rev. M. Beach of Roseneath who was guest speaker at Monday's meeting of St. John's Young People's Union. Introduced to the gathering by Rev. G. N. Maxwell the speaker delivered an inspiring message on the subject "Christian Missions and Canada's Future" in which he issued a challenge to the young people to play their part by continuing to be Christians. He expressed the feeling that the neglect of home missions during the present time would result in a serious blow to Christianity.

Mr. Cecil Stephens was in charge of the program and on behalf of the members thanked the speaker and also Mrs. Nill of Roseneath who contributed a vocal solo to the program. He also conducted the call to worship giving the Scripture reading. Only other item on the program was a piano solo by Mr. George Lucy. During the business period it was announced arrangements were being made to entertain the Hastings Branch at a social evening next Monday.

OBITUARIES

MRS. JOHN HEARD

The death occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital of Ethel Beatrice Tully, the wife of John Heard, 540 Downie street on Friday. Mrs. Heard was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Tully and spent her entire life in this city. For the past two years she has been in poor health. She is survived by one brother, Victor Tully of Peterborough.

The funeral will be held on Monday at 3.30 p.m. from the funeral home of A. Comstock and Sons with interment in Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Canon Roberteon will officiate.

MRS. LOUIS ANTHONY, SR.

Mrs. Louis Anthony, Sr., the former Minnie Virginia LaFave, passed away at her home, 322 Water street, on Friday. She was 67 years of age, and death came unexpectedly.

Born in Peterborough she was the daughter of the late Frank LaFave and Annie LaPlante. This city had always been her home.

Mrs. Anthony was a devoute member of St. Peter's Cathedral, and the Catholic Woman's League.

Surviving is her sorrowing husband, Louis Anthony, Sr., three daughters, Mrs. Frank Fuller, Detroit, Michigan, Mrs. Earl Mahood, and Mrs. P. Holland, both of Peterborough. Six sons, Louis Jr., Vincent J., Leonard and Melville W. Anthony of Peterborough, Hubert Legrow, Peterborough, and Albert Legrow, Royal Canadian Engineers, England. Four brothers, Frank, Harry and Alfred LaFave, of Peterborough and Jack LaFave of Toronto. Two sisters, Mrs. Gilbert Smith, and Mrs. Frederick Head, of Toronto.

The remains are resting at the family residence, 322 Water street. The funeral will leave the home on Monday at 8.45 a.m. and will proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral for mass at 9.00 a.m. Interment will be in St. Peter's cemetery.

Scenery Sheds Burn

CULMER CITY, Calif., Nov. 23—(AP). — Four storage buildings at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio were destroyed by fire last night. One of the buildings contained scenery from the film production "Tugboat Annie." The other buildings were used to store old sets.

Proceeds Of Film To Aid War Victims

One of the most poignant glimpses of the war on London has been showing at each of the three theatres this week-end. It is a short, taking only about ten minutes to run, and is entitled "London Can Take It."

The narrator, Quinton Reynolds, speaks in hushed tones throughout the film, and speaks of the capital as "A city in battle dress."

The grim determination of the people of London provides the main theme, and, as the announcer said, the sound effects are not "Hollywood," they are the real thing. Bombers droning in the evening sky, and tremendous explosions do not in the least terrorize the Britons who are seen going from their regular day-time jo to duties in the forms of air raid wardens, others at night.

A feature of the production of interest to Canada is that Warner Brothers, producers of the film, are giving the entire proceeds, plus 25 per cent., to British War Victims' Fund. The amount subscribed should be considerable because the film has been given wide reception, and has been or will be shown in almost every theatre in the Dominion and in the United States.

No Exemption

OTTAWA, Nov. 23—(CP)—Thomas Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview) will introduce in the Commons a bill to amend the Militia Act to eliminate exemption of conscientious objectors from militia service.

The bill would strike from the Act the clause exempting "persons who, from the doctrines of their religion are averse to bearing arms or rendering personal military service under such conditions as are prescribed."

Two Reeves Given Acclamations

Two of Peterborough county's reeves were re-elected by acclamation at the advance nominations Friday. They were David Curtin of Galway-Cavendish and Abert Hall, Chandos, both on the northern boundary of the county.

The council of Galway-Cavendish was unopposed and given an acclamation as follows: William Dudman, Frank Flaherty, Elsworth Jackson, and Peter Pearson.

Six were nominated at the Chandos meeting, the members of this year's council and two others. Reeve Hall said today that he wasn't sure what they decided, but he believed the 1941 council would be elected by acclamation.

The nominees yesterday were: W. Winters, M. McAuley, J. Campbell, and A. Ayotte, last year's councillors, and John Reynolds and Owen Montgomery. Two of the members of the old council said they were willing to drop out if the proposed new men would accept nomination.

Anker Estate Is Valued At $8,975

Jacob Lowe informed the Examiner today that in the Anker will case, part of which was reported Friday, the allegation of undue influence and fraud as grounds for the order suspending probate had been dropped. The remaining reason for the action, he said, was that the deceased lacked testamentary capacity when the second will was made. He also stated that the value of the estate of Mrs. Anker according to the assets listed when the will was entered for probate were $8,975.32, comprising $538.82 in a local bank, $7,347 in the Munro County Savings Bank, Rochester, a $1,000 Dominion of Canada bond worth $1,063.70, and several minor items.

Are You Tired of Being a Nobody in Your Club?

Know How to Be a Success

While others receive bouquets for fine club work, do you sit modestly in a back row—wishing you dared hold office—but fearing you'd never make a go of it?

Informed on club procedure and activities, you could play a successful leading role.

A secretary's duties are simple when you understand the routine. After each meeting you write the minutes, which are presented at the next meeting to be approved and signed by the president.

For the roll call, list names alphabetically on the page and rule the rest of the page into columns, one for each meeting. Then all you do at roll call is to check the names and your page is a complete record of attendance.

Or you may be one of the social committee holding open house for a membership drive.

Send written invitations. Have members wear matching single flowers or corsages to distinguish them from the guests.

Or would you like to be the club reporer—or on the program committee?

The duties of all officers, committees and members are fully explained in our 32-page booklet. Tells how to organize a club, draw up a constitution. Includes a sample budget, valuable suggestions for raising money.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of CLUBWOMAN'S GUIDE to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BEWARE OF CROSS-RUFF

WHEN THE two defenders have bid different suits, there is grave danger of a cross-ruff if you play the hand in a suit contract, especially a slam. It is well to think about trying No Trumps instead of your best suit in such a situation, as nobody has yet been known to ruff a trick in that declaration.

	♠K Q 10 6 ♥A Q 8 5 ♦Q 9 7 5 ♣2
♠3 ♥K 10 9 6 4 3 2 ♦4 2 ♣10 9 6	N. W. E. S.	♠A 9 7 5 4 2 ♥None ♦10 6 ♣K 8 5 4 3
	♠J 8 ♥J 7 ♦A K J 8 3 ♣A Q J 7

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♣	Dbl	2 ♥
Dble	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♦	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dbl

If South had been warned by the bidding and the double, he might have taken it out into the safe refuge of 6-No Trumps, in which you couldn't stop him from getting twelve tricks.

West interpreted the double as meaning East wanted the unnatural lead of the dummy's first-bid suit, especially since everything indicated him to have something in it. North had not rebid it, South had not supported it, and West himself had only one card, so East must have something worthwhile in spades. He therefore led the singleton to East's A and the latter returned the spade 9, a high card to indicate he wanted a lead of the higher ranking of the two side suits.

When West ruffed that second trick, he followed instructions with a lead of the heart 6, East trumping and thus setting the contract two. It could have been set still one more trick if West had been clairvoyant enough to open a heart.

South called it hard luck when he was beaten by the cross-ruff, but the others called it bad bridge, because he should not have played the hand at his suit, following some very unskilled bidding on his own part.

Your Week-End Lesson

Do you understand the play which is universally called the "grand coup?" Do you know how to recognize the situations in which such a play is necessary to make your contract? Can you set up working examples of a single, double and triple "grand coup?"

Jones Was Lost

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22 (AP)—H. Lee Jones of Santa Fe, N.M., and police agreed in principle, but were apart on details. Jones reported his wife and two children, who had preceded him from Santa Fe, lost after he was unable to find the home of the friend at which they were to meet. Mrs. Jones had the address with her. Unable to be of any assistance, the officer filled out a lost person report—for Jones.

Millbrook Guild Retains 1940 Officers

MILLBROOK, Nov. 23—(ENS).—Mrs. L. H. Winslow was hostess for the November meeting of the Women's Guild of St. Thomas' church, held at her home, "Shenley," on Tuesday at 8 p.m., Mrs. William Simpson presiding, and a large number of members being in attendance.

Reports were encouraging, that of the treasurer, Miss Ada Attwooll, showing a nice balance on hand, and the election of officers followed. No new names being submitted, the slate for 1941 was left without change, Mrs. Simpson being president, Anna Fair secretary, and Ada Attwooli treasurer.

There will be no December meeting, and the invitation of Mrs. C. M. Westmacott to hold the January gathering at her home was gratefully accepted.

The hostess served lunch at the close, and during the social hour many items of Guild interest were discussed. From the tea and sale last Saturday, at which Mrs. R. A. Ford and Miss Anna Fair were conveners, over fifty dollars was realized, this figure including the proceeds of a congregational canvass made to add to the funds.

Golden Links Meet

Mrs. A. L. Sisco and her daughter, Dorothy, entertained the Golden Links Mission Circle for its November meeting at the parsonage on Wednesday at 8 p.m. with the president, Mrs. E. J. Powell, in the chair, and an encouraging interest and attendance.

"The Pilgrim Way" was the theme for the month, Lola Gardiner reading the lesson, and the opening prayer, Phyllis Kidd and Mary Dawson will write the monthly letter to Margaret Luxon, and during the business period, Mrs. Sisco offered her home for an afternoon tea, to help the Circle funds, detailed arrangements being made.

Izabelle Aiken read the lesson during the worship session, and the president offered prayer. Miss E. L. Hetherington read "A Courier of the Cross," and Mrs. Lunn gave an outline of the addresses heard in Peterborough on Monday, and given by Dr. Robert McClure of China, and Rev. Lester Burry, of Labrador.

Grace W.M.S.

Grace Presbyterian church W.M.S. met at the Manse on Wednesday at 3 p.m., with the president, Mrs. A. R. Gibson, in the chair, and an encouraging attendance.

Mrs. S. E. Eakins presided at the piano, and Mrs. J. R. Thompson read the lesson and offered prayer.

Miss Agnes Johnston, treasurer, reported $68.00 remitted to the Presbyterial treasurer by the end of October, and a small balance still on hand. Mrs. Alex Miller took up the last chapter of the study book on "Moving Millions," the manner of facing the future task being emphasized, and Mrs. M. Kinsman gave "Getting things from God," from Dr. and Mrs. Goforth's book of that title.

The roll was answered by a Bible question, and after the hymn, "Faith of our Fathers," Mrs. Gibson closed the meeting with prayer. The usual social hour was enjoyed at the close.

Board Cancels Coming Sale

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 23. — With diminishing supplies of milk going into cheese factories resulting in smaller amount of cheese for sale here members of the Campbellford Board decided to withdraw next week's meeting. A motion to this effect was put by Roy Walker and won the favour of the meeting over a counter proposal made by 1st Vice-President Earl McAdam who suggested the cheese be sold next week at Belleville prices. Secretary S. A. Maguire announced he had received no reply to a communication regarding the price of cheese which he had sent to Minister of Agriculture J. G. Gardiner and also to W. A. Fraser, M.P. According to the text of a resolution passed by the Board last week the cheese producers feel they are being forced to sell below the cost of production and that the government should take some action to overcome the rising cost of labour. They suggested a bonus of an extra cent or one cent a pound on 92 score cheese and 2 cents on 93; 3 cents on 94. This they claimed would help them to compete and meet rising labour costs and insure adequate production.

Laymen Enjoy Splendid Talk

MARMORA, Nov. 23 — (ENS). — The regular meeting of St. Paul's Laymen's Association was held in the Parish Hall on Wednesday, with the president, R. Guy Winters, in the chair. After the singing of the National Anthem, prayer was offered by W. J. Cottrell, lay reader, in the unavoidable absence of the honorary president, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell.

During the business period a committee was formed to consider the holding of a smoker.

The association was privileged to have as guest speaker J. Owen Herity, Industrial Commissioner of Belleville. In his opening remarks Mr. Herity said he liked the idea of the Laymen's Association, as he felt it served a real need in church activities. In his address whoch followed, Mr. Herity in fluent and attractive style, touched upon epic events in British naval history, referring in turn to the Jervis Bay exploit of recent date as well as the much earlier exploits of Sir Richard Grenville and Charles Fox, and added to these stories descriptions of the expedition into Abyssinia in 1867 and the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria in 1897 to illustrate the nobility of the British character.

He also dwelt upon Britain's greatness in her Christian civilization and her choice of a democratic form of government. Interspersed with his comments were poetic quotations and the recital of poems, such as Kipling's "Lest We Forget."

The speaker was tendered a hearty vote of thanks at the conclusion of his address. The serving of refreshments and social intercourse followed the pronouncing of the benediction.

Soviet Russia moved to reclaim Bessarabia. Unwilling to resist, Rumania acceded to Russia's demands June 27. She installed a pro-Nazi government and renounced her British guarantee.

Hungary pressed her demands for Transylvania. On July 28, Hitler met with Rumanian and Hungarian representatives and told them to negotiate their territorial differences.

When these negotiations stalled, Hitler, impatient with the delay, summoned representatives of both nations to Vienna and awarded a wedge of Transylvania to Hungary, and Germany guaranteed Rumania's shrunken frontiers.

King Carol II abdicated under Iron Guard pressure on September 6 and fled into exile, leaving the throne to his son Michael, and control of the state to Gen. Ion Antonescu, who later proclaimed himself chief of state.

Antonescu issued a decree on September 15, setting up a state patterned on Nazi lines. It designated the totalitarian, pro-Nazi Iron Guard as the sole Rumanian political party.

Under Antonescu's rule, Rumania moved still closed toward the Axis.

On October 12 the vanguard of German troops rolled into Rumania —to "tarin" the Rumanian army and portect Rumanian oil wells, the Germans said.

Some sources have estimated German's military strength in Rumania as high as 500,000 men.

cupation of the Morva mountain range from which Italians were shelled into retreat from Koritza, and of Mount Ivan and the ridge of Kaf-Karit northeast of Koritza toward Lakes Presba and Ochrida.

Completing its picture of the new front line, the high command said Greeks in the central — Pindus mountain—sector captured Leskoviki and pushed on beyond the Albanian frontier towns of Erseka and Borova.

Along the coast—in the Epirus sector—the Greeks were reported to have shoved the last of the Italians across the border from the Greek frontier town of Filiates.

The Greek announcement that six Fascists divisions (72,000 to 90,000 men) had failed to hold Koritza despite their strong concrete defence positions guarded by barbed wire indicated that the battle for the key town was of greater magnitude than hinted in any previous reports.

(Reuters News Agency, reported from Athens that captured Italian tanks manned by Greek crews helped batter the Fascist forces in their flight north of the city.)

The Greek high command said captured Italian equipment included 80 large and small guns, 5 anti-aircraft guns, 20 tanks, more than 250 automobiles, more than 1,500 motorcycles and bicycles, considerable quantities of munitions, and supplies of food and clothing.

Retreating Italians were reported bombed heavily by Greek and British planes swooping into mountain passes jammed with troops. Reports from Salonika said British planes alone were believed to have shot down 40 Italian planes within the past few days.

Greek accounts of the entry of their troops into Koritza, which the Greek press termed a "liberated Greek city," said the soldiers were greeted outside the city by the mayor, priest and a delegation of citizens. Cheering citizens were said to have lined flower-strewn streets, decked with Greek flags.

Dr. Bruce sharply criticized Agriculture Minister Gardiner for "boasting that he had made millions for Canadians" by his shrewd bargain in Britain. Mr. Gardiner retorted that the Canadian delegation had merely accepted the prices Britain offered; there had been no bargaining.

LINDSAY

Presbytery Will Widen Plea For Liquor Ban

LINDSAY, Nov. 23—(ENS).—At a meeting of the Lindsay Presbytery of the United Church held in the Queen Street Church, a recommendation of the Committee on Social Service that a resolution urging the Provincial Government to curtail the sale of liquor by limiting the hours of all places dispensing beverages of this type, was turned down.

"This resolution is not nearly strong enough," declared Rev. E. F. Pugsley, of Cannington. "It does not coincide with the resolution of the General Council of our church. You know how far you will get in sending resolutions to the Provincial Governments. They are out to get every cent of revenue they can. We must demand that beverage rooms, taverns and wine stores be closed by the Dominion Government as a war measure. This is the only way we will get any action," he added.

The Presbytery re-affirmed a recent resolution demanding the closing of all such places, limiting the hours in government stores, abolition of wet canteens and the abolition of liquor advertising.

Today (Friday) will be nomination day in five townships in Victoria county and also in the village of Fenelon Falls. Five will also be held in the county of Haliburton.

He sent in an alarm and it was discovered that a fire was raging in the Artistic Apartments overhead. These premises are being remodelled, and coke in oil drums was being used to dry the plaster. The floor became ignited and the fire had eaten its way to the store. The store stock was considerably damaged by water.

The second fire occurred at 10.00 in the store room in rear of J. Houzer's store. The flames worked their way to the ceiling. The firemen thought that they had quelled the blaze, and had just returned to the fire hall when a second alarm was sounded. Considerable stock was damaged.

Axis Plans to Restore Spain to a Position of Power in Mediterranean

SPAIN'S EARLY COLLABORATION WITH AXIS IN THE WAR PRELIMINARY TO AXIS ATTACK ON BRITISH STRONG HOLD OF GIBRALTAR IS BELIEVED RESULT OF HITLER'S MEETING WITH FRANCO.

ROME, Oct. 24—(AP).—Fascist quarters said today that important decisions designed to restore to Spain a position of power in the Mediterranean may result from Hitler's meeting yesterday with Spanish Dictator Franco.

In the absence of more specific information, foreign observers interpreted this as suggesting Spain's early collaboration with the Axis in the war preliminary to an Axis attack on the British stronghold of Gibraltar.

The newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma boasted that 'deeds will spring forth from the conversation' without indicating what they might be.

Il Messaggero said the conference was evidence that Spain had decided "to regain her autonomy, power and liberty in the Mediterranean."

"In this sea," the latter newspaper added, "Spain has the right to wield an influence conforming to her geographical position and glorious past."

(In the past it has been the Italian custom to refer to the Mediterranean as "mare nostrum" or "our sea.")

A British Embassy source in Rome said Sir Samuel Hoare, the British Ambassador, had received assurances Saturday that the recent changes in the Spanish Government entailed no variation in policy.

Spain, waiting anxiously for the full significance of the Franco-Hitler interview to develop, found only the official version in its newspapers.

Only the Falange organ, Arriba, ventured comment.

LONDON, Oct. 24 — (CP). — British bombers successfully torpedoed two German supply ships in the North Sea yesterday and heavily machine-gunned another vessel, the Air Ministry announced today.

Last night, the Ministry said, British planes raided various military targets in Berlin and elsewhere in Germany and German-held Holland, including railway wharves and warehouses at Emden, and oil plants, railway junctions, airdromes and docks.

The Ministry said the torpedoing of the supply ships was carried out by planes of the R.A.F. coastal command.

Propose Longer Driving Permit

QUEBEC, Oct. 24 (CP)—A suggestion that the Provinces consider issuing driving licenses valid for periods of more than a year was made today by J. P. Bickell of Toronto, Ontario Registrar of Motor Vehicles, before the Canadian Good Roads convention here.

The recommendation was included in the report of the committee on uniform motor vehicles regulations, traffic facilities and supervision, of which Mr. Bickell is chairman.

The recommendation to extend driving license periods was made in view of the amount of detail involved in the annual renewal of licenses, Mr. Bickell said. He noted that some of the United States issued licenses valid for varying periods of years.

Mr. Bickells report also recommended that as a safety measure highway plans should include provision for parking places where motorists could stop and relax after long periods behind the wheel.

When Adolf Failed?

Berlin, Oct. 24 (CP)

A HINT that Hitler's attempt to drag Spain into the war has failed was dropped tonight by informed circles in Berlin when they said Germany has a "complete understanding" of the economic position of Spain as the result of her civil war.

"It is too much to expect Spain to join the war—at least for the present," these sources added.

Minister Opens New Cooperative

Co-operative enterprises have both an economic and social value, Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, declared here today at the opening of a new Farmers' Co-operative.

By having their own business organizations, farmers not only provided themselves with a yardstick with which to determine whether they were being exploited but they had the satisfaction of "having a say" in the conduct of their own affairs, he said.

"For too long a time the great body of our common people have felt that a few men in the land were exploiting them, doing all their busines sand handling all their money for them," the minister declared.

It was "very common" for farmers to feel they were at the mercy of business men and large corporations. To allay that suspicion and improve, if possible, the lot of the farmer, there was probably only one course — commercial organization among the farmers themselves, Mr. Dewan said.

"But organization alone is not a solution. There must be intelligent co-operation on a vast scale. Volume is necessary if any given enterprise is to succeed. Big corporations often realize their profits not so much through wide margins as through large scale business and constant managerial efficiency."

From his own experience as manager of a co-operative at Woodstock before entering the provincial government, he said a co-operative required loyalty, "the type of loyalty which comes from the man who adheres to the principles of co-operation as he adheres to those principles of his religion which he imbibed as a child."

Hint Kai-Shek Talking Peace

Terms Believed Along Jap Lines Of 1938

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24—(AP).—The Chronicle today quoted Kensuke Horinouchi, retiring Japanese Ambassador, as saying a peace agreement which lacked "final official action" had been reached between Chiang Kai-Shek, Chinese Generalissimo, and Wang Ching-Wei, the Japanese-installed ruler at Nanking.

Horinouchi, the newspaper said, stated the agreement was reached "recently" but that he did not know when the terms would be disclosed.

"The terms, I should think, are along the lines stated by the Japanese Government two years ago," he was quoted.

(At that time, Japan demanded that China join the anti-Commitern pact and allow stationing of a Japanese army in North China.)

Efforts to reach the Ambassador directly at his hotel early today were unsuccessful. He arrived here last night en route to Japan, for which he will sail Friday.

Feelers Extended

TOKYO, Oct. 24 (AP)—Neutral representatives have extended feelers directed toward negotiating a peace in the three-year-old Japanese conflict with China, apparently well grounded reports said today.

Influential Chinese unconnected with either the Chungking (Chinese Nationalist) or the Nanking (Japanese sponsored) regime were understood to have contacted Japanese first in Hong Kong and later in Tokyo to sound the possibilities of ending the conflict.

There were indications Japan still is willing to employ Premier Prince Fumimara, Konoye's statement of Dec. 12, 1938, as a basis for possible negotiations.

In this statement, the Prince promised that Japan would respect Chinese Sovereignty, discuss abolition of extra-territoriality and would demand neither territory nor indemnity of China. In return, the statement said, Japan would ask Chinese economic and political cooperation.

DOROTHY THOMPSON, newspaper columnist, said Wednesday night "I am going to vote for Roosevelt because I don't believe in taking the quarterback out of the game at this minute."

In a question and answer program broadcast under auspices of the Independent Committee for Roosevelt and Wallace, Miss Thompson said "I not only have not got anything against Wendell Willkie but I would like to see him in the cabinet. I like him very much."

"But since we are speaking openly," she added, "there are lots of people behind Wendell Willkie that I don't like one little bit. And I have my doubts whether he could get them off his neck if he were elected."

German Raiders Miss London

LONDON, Oct. 24 (CP)—Heavy formations of German planes made short, repeated stabs at a London shrouded in thick, chill weather today but succeeded only in dropping bombs in rural areas.

Observers reported large groups of raiders crossed the southeast coast early in the afternoon, most of them obscured by clouds, and heading in the direction of London.

A few moments later a flight of nine fighter planes, acting as a rear guard, was glimpsed as it scooted through low clouds.

The approach of these planes caused a second air raid alert of the day in London, but it, like the first, was brief. No gunfire or bomb explosions were heard in London during the first alert.

German planes were reported also to have flown over the vicinity of Liverpool and a west coast town.

The air ministry announced that a German Dornier 17 bomber had been shot down by a Spitfire in a morning duel over the Channel.

A heavy Channel rain and the anti-aircraft defences on London's outskirts held the raiders at bay overnight, giving the city its quietest night in the last 17.

Five persons were killed by a bomb which wrecked a cottage in a small village near London last night. An 18-months-old baby was found alive on top of the debris.

Make Spanish Coast Pirates' Hideout

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 24 — (AP). — Hitler's talks with Vice-Premier Pierre Laval of France and Spanish Dictator Franco were bound together to-day by reports they had laid the groundwork for an Axis offensive in the Mediterranean and South Atlantic as well.

Informed French sources said Hitler and Laval had put the finishing touches to an agreement whereby the Vichy Government would give the Axis powers use of air and naval bases in Africa, Syria and unoccupied France in return for certain concessions.

At the same time reports reaching diplomatic quarters indicated that one of the subjects discussed by Hitler and Franco was the possible use of Spanish ports and airfields on the Spanish Atlantic coast and in the Canary Islands as springboards for Nazi attacks on Britain's South Atlantic shipping.

These sources envisioned a campaign in which Italy and Spain would attempt to seize Gibraltar and smash Britain's power in the Mediterranean while Germany and Spain struck at Britain's trade with South America as well as her sea link with India by way of the Cape of Good Hope.

Strategic Spots

The bases involved in the agreement reported now under consideration by the French government are strategically situated in the Mediterranean.

The agreement, which would supersede the existing armistice terms, would make the French fleet responsible for defence of the naval bases and would not otherwise involve its use by the axis powers for war against Britain, these sources declared.

Canuck Squad On Dusk Patrol

LONDON, Oct. 24—(CP Cable).—After seven weeks of helping to beat back the German air attacks on London, the Royal Canadian Air Force Fighter Squadron is enjoying a much-needed respite from action at a new station far from the capital.

Their main chore is to fly a dusk patrol in search of Nazi hit-and-run raiders, but in the fortnight they have been at the new base, not a single enemy plane has been spotted.

The breathing spell is providing an opportunity for completion of the training of six recruits the squadron has just received from the R.C.A.F. Army Co-operation units over here. The pilots who have come up to the Fighter unit from the presently inactive branch of the Air Force are Flying Officers F. H. Hillock, Toronto; I. D. Watson and N. R. Johnston, Winnipeg; J. D. Morrison and J. B. Reynolds, Regina, and B A. Hanbury, Vancouver.

Incidentally, it is reported that Sqdn.-Ldr Ernest McNab of Regina, Commander of the Squadron, will shortly be gazetted Wing Commander. Possibly the officer, who recently received the Distinguished Flying Cross for skill and daring in operations against the enemy, will soon return to Canada to fill a post in which he could pass on to Canada's young airmen the valuable experience he has gained in aerial combat.

Two Aides Accompany Premier To Paris

BERNE, Oct. 24—(AP).—Reports reaching diplomatic sources from Vichy, France, today said Premier Petain with two aides and the Minister of Justice had left Vichy for Paris. It was believed here he was going to join Vice-Premier Pierre Laval to sign a new French-German agreement.

The news was first received through diplomatic channels because correspondents and officials at Vichy were under strict orders to give no details of the Marshal's departure, his destination, or the purpose of his trip.

Laval Already Back.

VICHY, France, Oct. 24—(AP).—Vice-Premier Pierre Laval returned to Paris to-day from Vichy with Premier Philippe Petain's answer to Hitler's proposals for a French reply were not made known. (A paragraph was censored here.)

Although Laval was scheduled to return to Paris last night, he was delayed in his departure.

Unconfirmed reports in Vichy were that Hitler's proposals advanced in Paris in conferences with Laval contained nothing so definite as peace terms and entrance of Vichy France into the war.

These reports said, however, he asked for a general alignment of Vichy France in the "new European order" as envisaged by Germany and Italy.

It was reported the same general proposition was presented to the Spanish Chief of State, Francisco Franco, in border conferences yesterday.

Hitler is seeking, it was said, to form a general continental bloc

Turn Machine Gunners Bombers On Landing; No Training Date Set

OTTAWA, Oct. 24—(CP).—Looking toward the time of a British offensive, serious consideration is being given to establishment of a Canadian Parachute Corps, Air Minister Power said at a press conference today.

"The feeling is that training of parachute troops should begin as against some time when we may take the offensive," the Air Minister said.

"Our view is the Royal Canadian Air Force will have to come into the picture, although the troops will not belong to the R.C.A.F. their utility would be naturally as infantry rather than air force."

The minister did not state when training of any men selected for a parachute corps might start. He did say, however, that training would begin with small jumps with controlled parachutes and gradually the men would become skilled enough to attempt jumps of greater height. Major Power said parachutists probably would be arranged for in the same manner as were special corps in the First Great War.

A parachute corps would be a joint service as between the army and air force, and selections might possibly be made from the ranks of infantry battalions.

When a parachutist landed, added Major Power, he naturally became a machine gunner, a bomber or perhaps a sniper and thus this corps would not fall completely under air force jurisdiction.

About a dozen reporters heard the Air Minister answer questions in his downtown office.

Canada Fighting To Last Cent, Man

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (CP)—Democracy and the rights granted under democracy can only be maintained by "ever vigilant and vigorous effort," Hon. A. L. Macdonald, Canadian Navy Minister, said today in an address prepared for delivery before the New York Herald Tribune Forum.

"For more than a year, we in Canada have been in the lists in defence of democracy against its deadly enemies," Mr. Macdonald said.

"We have sent men and ships and guns and planes over the seas, and we shall send more and still more so long as there is a single Canadian dollar left to be spent or a solitary Canadian citizen to take his stand in defence of freedom."

Meantime, United States citizens were girding themselves to defend their rights and privileges as free Americans.

36 Spare U.S. Subs for Britain?

Overage Craft Being Refitted Said To Follow 50 Destroyers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—(CP).—Reconditioned submarines of the United States navy may soon join the 50 overage American destroyers now being transferred to the Canadian and British navies.

Some 36older underweater craft are reported to be going through a reconditioning process and an investigator for a Washington paper (News) suggests they may be destined for service with the British sea forces.

Persistent claims in Congress and elsewhere of new and unrevealed transactions involving transfer to the British of important air fighting units have met with silence or non-commital comments from administration officials.

State Secretary Hull told a questioner at a press conference that he had not heard the matter discussed when asked if the 110 war planes diverted from Swedish buyers would go to Canada or Great Britain.

Mr. Hull said he was not sure how many planes were involved in the order of the Swedish Government. All are being requisition by the Army Air Force and the number has been valously placed at from 100 to 300.

It is claimed by private investigators here that the United States Government, on order of President Roosevelt, has already sent to Britain or her allies, since the war began, 2,200 planes of various types, 500,000 rifles and 150,000,000 rounds of ammunition 70,000 machine guns and 600 field artillery pieces.

These are in addition to the 300 tanks built for the first Great War, sent to Canada, and the 50 destroyers shared between the Canadian and British Navies.

It is understood the United States Navy has 104 submarines fit for first line service, 81 under construction, and 36 being conditioned, possibly for the British Navy.

Lewis Perturbs Republicans

C.I.O. Chief To Move In With Industrial Foes, For Willkie

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.— (CP).—One of the most dramatic phases of the United States Presidential election campaign is looked for tomorrow night when John L. Lewis, shaggy-maned prophet of American coal miners and head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations makes his declaration of political faith.

Lewis will speak over a gigantic radio hook-up and it is considered almost a certainty he will come out for Wendell Willkie, Republican candidate for President and chief threat to a third term for President Roosevelt.

With no doubt in the minds of any observers as to the stand Lewis will take, chief interest centres about the effect it will have upon xthe fortunes of the Republican party.

Willkie numbers among his supporters some of the most powerful industrial leaders in the country, men to whom the name of Lewis has been anathema.

Now these men who have so often battled the forces led by Lewis are likely to find him their political bed-fellow. Since his stand might well influence hundreds of thousands of votes, they can do little else but move over and make room for his bulky form. Lewis will speak over a network estimated to cost $65,000 to a potential audience of 30,000,000.

There are many interesting sidelights to this campaign now entering its final phases with Roosevelt and Willkie carrying on a last-minute tour which has them playing hide and seek through eastern states adjacent to the capital.

For instance the recently-passed Hatch Act limits the parties to a total maximum expenditure of $3,000,000. In the campaign four years ago the Republicans collected $8,000,000 and the Democrats $6,000,000. The Act limits contributions to $5,000 from any one source

Hitler, Franco Cook Up More Trouble

Plans For Assault On De Gaulle Also Said Debated

MADRID, Oct. 24—(AP).—A secret conference between Hitler and Franco was studied today for possible developments in which Spain might play a role in Axis plans to establish a "new order" in Europe.

Madrid buzzed with rumors as diplomatic circles awaited the outcome of the meeting yesterday on the French-Spanish border where, most observers believed, the two dictators sealed in some concrete fashion a friendship which began when Hitler came to the aid of Franco during the Spanish civil war.

Official Spanish quarters were silent on the talks, but D.N.B., the German propaganda agency, reported the conference had ended last night and that Franco was on his way to Madrid. Hitler's destination remained uncertain.

It generally was believed here that Hitler's meeting with Franco was related to his talk Tuesday with Vice-Premier Pierre Laval of France—a view that was strengthened by the prominence the Spanish press gave to the latter conference.

Some neutral observers believed the two meetings presaged a possible shift of the main theatre of war to the Mediterranean with emphasis upon Gibraltar, the British stronghold over which Spain long has desired to gain control.

Also involved, these observers believed, were plans to combat activities of the Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle in Africa—notably in French Morocco, in which Spain also has a keen interest.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP).—The New York Post says that Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, now en route home by Clipper, has informed President Roosevelt that under no circumstances will he return to his post and that he intends to make public the reasons for his decision.

His action, the article continues, is due to what he considered persistent disregard for his views by the President—and to a conviction that President Roosevelt's promises of aid to Great Britain have not been fulfilled.

He was described as resentful of the tendency of the President to give less weight to his views on European matters than to those of William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France.

"Last night our bombers attacked objectives in the Berlin area, causing fires and explosions," it continued.

The widespread raids on Germany were made after R.A.F. planes had been grounded by rain and fog which made flying impractical on Tuesday night.

Oil plants attacked included those at Magdeburg and Hanover, targets in earlier British forays. One of the objectives in the Berlin area was a freight yard, the Ministry said.

Near Hanover and at Frankfurt various industrial targets were bombed, as well as railway junctions in Northern and Western Germany and docks at the Hook of Holland. Airdromes also were bombed, the Ministry said.

The communique claimed that British war vessels had been driven away from the Flanders coast by naval artillery.

(No comment on this claim was forthcoming immediately from the British Admiralty.)

Major Power referred to the graduation at Trenton, Ont., this morning of the first brood of air observers under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and said they were the beginning of a steady stream of reinforcements for the defenders of the United Kingdom.

Graduations, said Minister, will continue every four weeks and trained men will go forward to bolster forces steadily gaining against the German air power.

Acceleration in establishments of training plan schools was steady. Instead of a scheduled 25 schools in operation on September 15, there were 32 and at the end of next month the number would be 40 rather than 32 previously planned, and 48 at the end of the year rather than 36.

Planes the Big Outlay.

Expenditures naturally were accelerating rapidly and the expenditure on air during the year might run to $260,00,000 as suggested by Defence Minister Ralston. Part of this, Major Power said, would be accounted for by expenditure for aircraft which had been expected from the United Kingdom.

Airdrome expenditures currently run to $20,000,000 but the minister said this did not have to be paid immediately.

Major Power said the R.C.A.F. still suffered from lack of equipment though there now is plenty of personal equipment. He was not prepared to say how much training courses in service flying schools eventually will be reduced, but the intention is to reduce them somewhat further than as previously announced, from 16 to 14 weeks.

Replying to a question Major Power said it was not contemplated to ask reduction in Trans-Canada Air Lines services which were "rendering national service" in favor of obtaining instructors and personnel for the Air Force. He felt the "usefulness of T.C.A. as it is probably outweighed" any advantage which might accrue from its discontinuance.

Spain An Active Ally.

BERLIN, Oct. 24—(CP).—The German propaganda agency announced today that Hitler's conferences with Spanish Dictator Franco, presumed to have as their object enlistment of Spain as an active ally of the Axis, had ended and that Hitler had left the meeting place in Spain.

The agency did not indicate where Hitler had gone, although its announcement was datelined "in France." Nor did it offer any speculation regarding the nature of the conferences or the degree of success they attained from Germany's standpoint.

(In neutral sources at Berne, Switzerland, it was believed Hitler was seeking to gain a measure of collaboration from the Petain-Laval regime in France as well as from Franco with a view to trying a three-way offensive from French ports in the Mediterranean, Spanish ports on the Atlantic and in the Canary Islands and French African air bases which might be used as springboards for an assault on Egypt.

(Observers believed the Axis partners were anxious to get some action in progress quickly to mask the Royal Air Force's blighting of Nazi invasion plans against the British Isles and the bogging down at Sidi Birrana of the Italian land drive into Egypt).

For a long time the German press has been stressing the "impossibility" of Britain maintaining Gibraltar which, the papers say, "by indisputable natural right belongs to Spain."

Some Puzzling Parts

LONDON, Oct. 24—(CP).—None of the participants in conferences between Hitler and Laval and Hitler and Franco gave a hint of what had happened, but the Italian press loudly forecast that "great deeds" would come from the meeting with Franco which ended unexpectedly last night. It was noted that a member of the German delegation was Friedrich Gaus, Foreign Under-Secretary who attends meetings with his boss only when legal documents are to be drawn up.

Rumors arising from the conferences, possibly inspired by the Axis, puzzled non-Axis observers. One question which arose was: Why should Hitler want new naval bases when he has lost most of the small fleet he has lost mots of the small If he plans that the Italian navy should use them to harass British shipping, how is he going to prevent the Italians from being blockaded when they have shown so little inclination to leave port and fight the British navy in the Mediterranean?

Should he gain collaboration of the Spanish and Vichy regimes Hitler will have made "friends" of two countries at least as bankrupt as his own. France through the action of German troops, Spain as a result of a civil war which Hitler helped Franco win.

Hitler was said to have offered in return for France's passive help release of 2,000,000 French prisoners of war and return of some territory taken under terms of last June's armistice. He was believed to have offered Spain Gibraltar and a greater share in Mediterranean affairs.

London Gets Some Sleep

Heavy Channel Rain, Defences Cut Raids

LONDON, Oct. 24 (CP)—Bomb-weary Londoners thanked a heavy Channel rain and the anti-aircraft defences on the city's outskirts today for the quietest night Nazi raiders have given them in the last 17.

Frequent bomb blasts heralded the on-schedule arrival of the raiders shortly after dark but the attack quickly tapered off and a "raiders passed" signal sounded not long after midnight, as on the previous night.

The Germans renewed their assault shortly before dawn and Archies barked sporadically but the all clear sounded again a short time later.

The government, describing the night's aerial activity as "not on a heavy scale," said the only bombs dropped were in London, the counties around the capital, a town in northeastern England and a few points in southern Scotland.

Awakened by the noise of anti-aircraft fire and dropping bombs, a West London man leaned out his window. A moment later a bomb fell on the house, taking away the entire bedroom except a narrow ridge on which he stood. The fire brigade rescued him.

Being a private detective now in London is no picnic and many "flannelfeet" are closing shop. There's plenty of work but tracing people is impossible. If they ask too many questions they are suspected of being fifth columnists.

A solicitor in a Midlands town who found a bomb stick on his lawn, took it to a hotel and raffled it off to raise money for a Spitfire fund was fined five shillings (about $1.00) and costs on two charges—failing to report finding an article which had been used for armed force and removing the article without permission.

To meet the menace of the time bomb, the war office has decided to form civilian time-bomb squads form railway and A.R.P. workers and war police. The Royal Engineers will train them. These civilian squads won't take the place of the engineers in the hazardous removal job. They will be taught how to recognize the bombs and take preliminary steps to deal with them until the engineers arrive.

Mrs. Betty Ceaplen of Brighton gave birth to a baby in a Brighton back-garden shelter and asked a London newspaper (Daily Mirror) to ask its readers for a name. More than half of the 250 letters the paper received suggested "Faith" and the next choice was "Amy" after the midwife who attended the case. The baby will be called Faith Amy.

2 RCAF Bombers Lost, Land In NY

LOWVILLE, N.Y., Oct. 24.—(AP).—Two Royal Canadian Air Force bombers were grounded in Northern New York to-day after becoming separated from four companion ships on a flight between Montreal and Trenton, Ont.

One of the planes, piloted by C. W. Wright of Los Angeles, Calif., senior flying officer, landed late last night in a cow pasture south of this village. The other came down in a field between Ogdensburg and Canton.

State police refused to divulge the names of the seven occupants of the plane landing near Ogdensburg. Trooper C. W. Bentley of the Lowville patrol, however, said passengers in the plane here were students on their way to Montreal to receive their wings—James Flaherty, Toronto; Earl Mann, Galt, Ont., and George Jeffrey, Ottawa.

The Lowville plane landed with the aid of police, firemen and townspeople who lighted flares to illuminate the field. The other dropped flares before coming down.

Occupants of both bombers were held by immigration authorities pending receipt of word from Washington as to their official status.

Vast List Of Data Confronts Seaway Probe

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—(AP). —When President Roosevelt's advisory committee begins study of the proposed hydro-electric project in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River it will have before it a vast amount of engineering data on proposed development of power and navigation facilities.

Former President Herbert Hoover, joint boards of American and Canadian engineers and the international joint commission have conducted detailed studies of the project and recommended development of the river's power resources in connection with the larger proposal of a seaway connecting the Great Lakes with the Atlantic.

Hoover was chairman of the United States St. Lawrence commission which investigated the huge navigation-power project 15 years ago and submitted a report to President Coolidge urging the undertaking.

At that time Hoover said in his report that development of the river's vast power resources was "inevitable in the interest of the populations in that region."

In appointing the advisory committee and allocating $1,000,000 from a special defence fund for preliminary work in the International Rapids section, President Roosevelt said it involved no commitment to carry out the long-planned seaway development in co-operation with Canada. He declared it was urgent the power project be undertaken because it formed "an essential part of the program of continental defence."

Hoover Findings

In his report submitted to President Coolidge in 1926, Hoover declared development of the river for power would "in itself compass the major construction for the shipway, since the dams necessary for development of power create a series of pools in place of the present rapids which, with the supplement of locks and short canals, become the shipway."

Estimates on the cost of developing the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence have ranged from $159,000,000 to $274,742,000. The latter estimate was contained in a joint report on the project submitted by the Federal Power Commission and the New York State Power Authority at the time a treaty for undertaking the development with Canada was before the United States Senate in 1934. The Senate subsequently refused to ratify the treaty.

The treaty contemplated a two-stage development of navigation and power facilities in the international rapids section and the Federal and State Power Boards estimated the cost of work solely for power would be $132,542,000. This program envisaged production of 2,190,960 horsepower, of which the United States would get half.

A Joint Board of American and Canadian engineers which made a detailed study of the St. Lawrence project for the Hoover Commission estimated the cost of two-stage navigation and power development in the rapids section at $264,600,000. Cost of work intended primarily for power under this plan was estimated at $140,209,000. The engineers figured this would produce 2,150,000 installed horespower.

Full Report in 1921.

A comprehensive report on the entire St. Lawrence project was submitted to Congress in 1921 by the International Joint Commission, a group of Canadian and American members set up under a treaty of 1909 to have jurisdiction over boundary waters of the two countries.

The Commission recommended the two Governments undertake development of the river's navigation and power resources. While its report dealt mainly with the navigation features of the project, the Commission said its recommendation for undertaking both navigation and power development would "secure maximum efficiency from the waters of the St. Lawrence."

The Commission estimated the cost of development of the international rapids section at $159,000,000 which it figured would produce 1,500,00 horse-power.

The difference between this estimate and those made a few years later was explained by the Joint Board of Engineers which reported to the Hoover Commission.

The later estimates exceeded those of engineers who made the study for the International Joint Commission, the Joint Board said, "because they provide a fuller development and more elaborate measures to ensure satisfactory winter operation besides being based on the higher unit costs indicated by the detailed studies made by the present board."

Plowing Match 25 Years Ago

An item in the "How Time Flies" column the other day in regard to a plowing match in Ennismore twenty-five years ago has brought a request for further information in regard to the interesting event.

It was the first plowing match that had been held in the township for many years and was arranged by the Ennismore council under the leadership of Reeve W. H. Crough. The original arrangement had been to stage a match between representatives of Harvey and Ennismore townships but for some reason or another the Harvey plowers failed to put in an appearance and the matches were contested only by residents of Ennismore. The Examiner report of the event, however, states that it was a very successful affair, with keen competition and much interest on the part of the spectators.

The judges were John Telford, a former resident of Ennismore, County Clerk and Treasurer E. M. Elliott and Michael Sullivan of Otonabee.

A silver cup was donated by Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick and other prizegivers were J. H. Burnham, M.P. and George A. Gillespie, the latter offering a churn as a prize. The winners were as follows:

Plowing in sod—1, W. D. Cavanagh; 2, Joseph Holland; 3, Frank Young; 4, Ambrose Crough; 5, James Crough.

Council To See Tourist Picture

A preview of the technicolor film of the Kawarthas photographed by Alderman Fred L. Roy will be shown to the City Council on November 12, according to plans of the executive of the Peterborough Tourist Bureau.

Alderman Roy tok 2,500 feet of motion pictures, and is cutting the film to 1,200 feet, comprising three full reels which will require forty-five minutes in showing.

These pictures were ordered by the Council for Peterborough publicity, especially in New York, Detroit, and other American cities. They will be shown a second time at a proposed dinner meeting to which Douglas Oliver, Ontario director of tourist publicity, and Leo Dolan of Ottawa, Dominion tourist publicity director, and the Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary and Minister of Fish and Game, and his Deputy, J. D. Taylor, will be invited. It has been suggested that this showing be held on November 19.

At a recent tourist conference at Ottawa one of the major proposals was color pictures of Canada's attractions for holiday seekers. In this connection, Peterborugh is already armed with this desirable medium of propaganda for the immediate territory especially within the county.

4,000 Americans Seeking Way HomeFromChina

SHANGHAI, Oct. 24 (AP).—More than 4,000 applications of American citizens in the Orient for passage to the United States are on file, and steamship companies reported Tuesday that no cancellations had been received despite the protests against evacuation fares which some Americans term "almost prohibitive."

Many seem to hope for a last-minute development which might make departure unnecessary, but most of the Americans appear reconciled to leaving, taking the view that unless the United States forces a showdown with Japan, it will be only a matter of time until all American business, cultural and religious interests are squeezed out of the Far East.

Information received in Mission circles indicates a majority of the families of Protestant Missionaries in Japanese-occupied parts of China, as well as in Manchoukuo and Korea, will depart, while those in the rest of China will remain at their posts.

Serving In England

A trip to England with the Hastings-Prince Edward Regiment gave Pte. Arthur Renout of Rockcroft a chance to see his mother after an absence of 18 years. His mother has always lived in the Old Country and Renout came to Canada as a boy 18 years ago. He is married and has six children.

Uruguay's wheat crop was 36 per cent smaller than that of last year.

Midale Temple Hall Damaged

LONDON, Oct. 24—(CP).—Middle Temple Hall, in one of London's centuries-old inns of court, was damaged in a recent raid in which a heavy bomb ripped through a wall and smashed woodcarving on the interior, it was disclosed today.

Office suites in the hall also were damaged.

Other buildings in the temple, in the heart of legal London, have been damaged in previous raids.

Middle Temple Hall is in one of the four great London inns of court, Lincoln's Inn, Inner Temple, Middle Temple and Gray's Inn, which are voluntary legal societies originating in the 13th century.

Judges, barristers and students of law are members and may work and study there. The Middle Temple and the Inner Temple formed the original seat in England of the Knights Templar. Richly carved oak screens inside date from 1573.

France Join With Germany!

The suggestion that the people of France might be coaxed, forced or manoeuvred into fighting against the United Kingdom is a miserable thing to discuss. One might well prefer to leave is alone were it not for the fact that it has become something about which the world talks.

It may serve no good purpose whatever at the moment to refer to the manner in which France bungled her own safety. The world was as much lost in admiration of the Maginot Line as were the people of France. We can recall some months ago having written something which today appears stupid, and that was that the Maginot Line was so strong, and the German Westwall was of the same kind, and therefore there was a stalemate and it was likely to continue that way.

That is all washed out, and today France is a miserable country with millions of miserable people in it. Their lines are not cast in pleasant places. They are a conquered people and whatever pride they possess has been forced into cold storage because there is no open channel through which to give it visible expression.

The theory is that the Petain government at Vichy may consider more dickering with Germany. France can throw in its lot with the nation which conquered the land and thereby go into war against Britain. In that way the promise would be made to France that it would have a chance to emerge from the conflict intact, or nearly so. It would lose a few colonies and Alsace-Loraine.

We find it difficult, even to the point of it being impossible, to believe that France would join with Germany and fight against Britain. France has had reason to learn in recent months the methods and the manners of the Germans. France has seen its wealth, its produce, its rolling stock moving toward Germany. France has seen the material which it needs to eat taken away from it. Before that France saw her own defenceless women and children fall before the machine guns of the enemy.

So it is that France of today knows Germany as the France of yesteryear did not. All these things have taken place as the living French folk looked on. If France is now minded to become welded to the Axis powers then we are ready to admit that we know nothing whatever of the temper, the spirit and the heroism of the French heart.

There is only one chance for France, and that is in the British victory. When the aged Petain started toward Germany as the apostle of peace he put his feet on a bed of quicksand from which he has never been pulled free. If he is convinced that by throwing in the lot of France with that of Germany he can find smoother going in the future, then he is headed for a blunder more colossal than his first.

Being Educated At Queen's

We believe young people who are wise will get all the education possible. They will not knock off when they finish secondary schools unless they find it necessary to go to work. They will get along to university and acquire more knowledge there.

But we find it hard enough at times to understand the mentality of some of these young men who are receiving the decided advantage of education in its upper branches. That same difficulty of understanding came to the surface when we were reading a story in the Kingston Whig-Standard about a battle between the Arts and Science students. Several were bruised and scratched and extensive damage was done to the Arts Building at Queen's University.

Seeking to learn what it was that so disturbed the mind of the student body we read there was an election pending in the Alma Mater Society, the student governing body. Probably those who attend Queen's study now and then about the science of government, and possibly they might know more about that than the great majority of people who have had to go out in the world and get along as best they could without a university education.

The method adopted at the big school in Kingston appears strange. Hundreds of Science men approached the Arts building where students had barricaded themselves. They used tomatoes, rotten eggs and flour sack bombs. Windows were broken and students inside were showered with broken glass, and at one stage a large glass in the entrance door was smashed.

The Science men captured several of the Arts class and took them outside where they divested them of their trousers. And it is within the range of possibility that the trousers these chaps were wearing as well as everything they possessed is theirs by reason of the hard work and in many cases the positive sacrifice of their parents.

It may be as a rank outsider we fail to enter into the spirit of the thing. Perhaps we fail to look far enough ahead to the days when the boys of the old school will gather together and speak with devotion in the voice of the days when we smashed the windows and took the trousers off So-and-So. Ah! Those were the good old days.

The truth is we are living in days each one of which is pregnant with death. Living in an age when the old world as we know it seems to have cracked wide open beneath our feet. Going about in a period when thousands of our young men have put on the King's uniform to face a way of living and action which is new and uncertain to them, and in which they will find little use for old tomatoes and over-ripe eggs.

That's why there appears to be something so childish about the performance at Queen's. Perhaps one should somehow "enter into the spirit of the thing," and grow slightly hilarious about the smashing of windows and the strewing of rotten eggs, flour and tomatoes on the premises of higher education. At the moment that feeling stubbornly refuses to come.

We Make a Suggestion

E. A. Outram is the City Clerk of Peterborough, and fortunately he has been in training for six years. There was no question about Mr. Outram stepping up to the position made vacant by the death of S. R. Armstrong, and we have every reason to believe he will be found a competent official.

Mr. Outram's work does not include the position of Industrial Commissioner, an addition to Mr. Armstrong's position added many years ago. That means that there is now no Industrial Commissioner and we believe it is wise to separate the two positions.

What the City Council may have in mind on this point we do not know, but it is vitally important that Peterborough should have that office filled.

We do not know whether ex-Mayor Roland Denne would consider engaging in this work or not, nor have we consulted him regarding the suggestion that he is the proper individual to act in that capacity.

The Examiner makes the suggestion for two reasons:

1: Peterborough has not been getting new industries. Our industrial growth and expansion has been carried on by the enlarging of existing plants, and in that particular we have been extremely fortunate. There has been a movement of industry toward Canada and that movement will continue. Peterborough needs a representative to see to it that our advantages as an industrial centre are fully presented.

2: Mr. Denne is essentially a Peterborough man. We do not mean in a parochial sense, but he knows this city and he knows its possibilities as few men do. The people have confidence in him, otherwise they would not have kept on returning him as their Chief Magistrate for eight successive years.

Attempting Too Much

The Edmonton Journal is certain Hon. James G. Gardiner cannot be two places at once. Nor can he be Minister of Agriculture and Minister of War Services. The objection, as we understand it, is that during the fall there was a serious problem facing the West owing to so much grain with no place to store it, and also the serious business of getting something paid on the unstored grain. At that time Mr. Gardiner was so engrossed with the work of National Registration that he could give no personal attention to the problems of the Western Agricultural world.

From there the Journal proceeds to the condition of the training camps, now under way. There are weaknesses being revealed in the system, and there is the added problem of how to properly divide man-power between industry and the armed service. While these questions are much to the front Mr. Gardiner is in England in conference with officials dealing with business connected with the Department of Agriculture. It is not a question of challenging Mr. Gardiner's capacity, but merely a matter of objecting to a man being named to do two full-sized jobs and expecting him to give adequate attention to each.

Following through the results of Registration and making certain that the nation receives the full benefit is so colossal an undertaking that we doubt if there is a single man in the country capable of placing himself completely around that task and gathering together all the loose ends. We are inclined to agree with the Edmonton Journal that Mr. Gardiner is attempting to do what no man should be expected to undertake.

Awake At Last

There was a time when the work of the Dies Committee in United States received a fair amount of attention. It was investigating what were termed un-American practices. It seemed that every place the spade was put into the ground that it brought forth something new, particularly where the German-American Bund was concerned. It told plainly enough about the camps, and the military organizations, and it said plainly in its reports that the motive was the strengthening of the Nazi party in Germany through its operations in United States.

It took an indifferent public opinion long months to grasp the meaning of what the Dies Committee was doing. Took more months to actually sit up and realize that a foreign power had been for years working for the undoing of the government of United States.

In Canada we have become interested, more particularly because Dorothy Thompson has stated that the North German Lloyd steamship office in Montreal was an espionage centre and that an unnamed ticket salesman was key man in the Nazi and Fascist organization

Adrian Arcand of Montreal, now in an internment camp, was the Fascist leader in Canada and he was as closely allied with Fascists as with the Nazi organization. His was the National Union party, whatever that might mean, and from his headquarters in Montreal he distributed propaganda, aimed at getting an army of 70,000 blueshirts which would take over the government of Canada.

There were several German organizations with offices in one of Montreal's down-town business blocks, and there was strange work going on there before the war started. The one trouble was that those engaged in the work had gone ahead without taking into consideration that splendid organization known as the Royal Canadian Police. Our information is that they allowed these clever people to go ahead with their plotting and planning; they knew where they were and what they were doing, and at the right moment they pulled in the net.

In this country we might have been more alarmed if we had known more about it, but the chief point is here: Months before Italy went into the war the foreign forces in this continent were working under the guise of being divided as Fascists and Nazis, and all the time they were actually serving the same master in Germany. They were planning for the downfall of nations not then at war, and they had in a very real sense invaded United States without a formal declaration of war. A realization of all those facts is the reason why the work of the Dies Committee is today receiving the attention which was its due months ago.

NOTE AND COMMENT

We feel a little sorry for Wendell Willkie, now that Col. Lindbergh has come out as one of his supporters.

Sixteen wedding guests double parked in front of a photographer's studio in St. Thomas and all received tickets from the police. Complaint was that the street got so crowded a person couldn't come in and find a hitching post.

Geese have been observed going south flying in perfect wedge formation. When the airmen adopted that system they were not starting anything new, and the geese follow it without any training period.

COMPLAINS

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Old Stephen Dollar runs his store, he does a goodly business too, they say he has a little more when every working day is through.

¶ But Stephen always tells the folk how hard he works there every day, you'd think he wore a heavy yolk and fed on artichokes and hay.

¶ When you go into Stephen's store he greets you with a pleasant smile, he finds out what you're looking for and points you to the proper aisle.

¶ And there his sons and daughters wait and they will get the goods for you, they're there from early hour to late and know exactly what to do.

¶ If you desire to pay a bill why Stephen once more points the way, his wife presides around the till, she's there near all hours of the day.

¶ Yet Stephen talks and groans a lot, he fears he's breaking down his health, he's working harder than he ought, he's running of the store himself.

¶ I'm sure if Stephen went away and journeyed far upon a train, he might find out some pleasant day his business ran on just the same.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

ON TUESDAY we spoke of epitaphs, and the writer promised that today he would reprint some remarkable specimens in this line of literary composition. Of course not all funny epitaphs are unintentional; some are deliberately meant to be amusing. And why not? Many of us might like to think that our gravestones provoked a smile long after we had ceased to enjoy a joke; it is a pleasant thing to make people laugh even after death, if we do so on purpose. Here is an epitaph which any young man might be proud to have written about him; it contains a compliment and a joke:

Here lies, to parents, friends, and country dear,
A youth who scarce had seen his 17th year;
But in that time so much good sense had shown,
That death mistook 17 for 71.

C & B

That epitaph comes from Northumberland; here is one on the headstone of a butcher in Wimborne Minster, Dorset:

Weep, stranger, for a father spilled
From a stage-coach, and thereby killed:
His name was John Sykes, a maker of sassengers,
Slain with three other outside passengers.

Another epitaph which gives details of the death of its subjects is to be found at Droitwich; it is dated 1701 and it reads:

Here lies I and my three daughters,
Killed by drinking Cheltenham waters;
If we had stuck to Epsom salts,
We shouldn't have been lying in these here vaults.

But strangest of all is this classification of epitaph is that on the unfortunate Miss Lowder who is buried in Burlington Churchyard, Mass., and who perished during the last century:

She burst while drinking a seidlitz powder;
Called from this world to her heavenly rest,
She should have waited till it effervesced.

C & B

The fate of Miss Lowder brings to mind the similar case of Jesse Welch whose epitaph is familiar:

Here lies the body of Jesse Welch,
Who died of keeping back a belch,
Which same did in his pipes expand
And blew him to the promised land.

From what we know of the accident which brought about his death we may assume that Jesse Welch was a beer-drinker; there are many famous epitaphs of drunkards and others who were fond of drink but do not deserve so harsh a name. Here is one from Great Wolford in Warwickshire:

Here old John Randall lies
Who counting from his tale
Lived three score years and ten
Such virtue was in Ale.
Ale was his meat,
Ale was his drink,
Ale did his heart revive;
And if he could have drunk his Ale,
He still had been alive;
But he died Januar Five

C & B

IT IS CRUEL, perhaps, to laugh at a well-meant epitaph even when it is so oddly expressed as to be ridiculous. Still, if people who have no talent for literary composition will insist on having their work engraved on the uncompromising granite of a tombstone they must suffer the fate of all authors and be subjects of criticism. Here is one from the American West, which suffers from faulty punctuation: "Erected to the memory of John Phillips, accidentally shot as a mark of affection by his brother." And here is one from a graveyard in Maine which was probably meant as a fine flight of poetry: "Our little Jacob has been taken away from this earthly garden to bloom in a superior flower-pot above." And the ineptitude of this effort from Tennessee amounts almost to genius: "Here lies H—— A——, born May 10, 1830; died June 4, 1851. She lived a life of virtue and died of cholera morbus caused by eating green fruit in the full hope of a blessed immortality at the early age of 21 years 7 months. Reader, go thou and do likewise." But perhaps the most pregnant of all epitaphs is that in a cemetery in Jersey. It is a sad comment on fashion, for it reads: "Died of thin shoes Jan. 3, 1839."

C & B

There are a number of instances in which the trade of the deceased is mentioned on his tombstone, but it is rare for a notice of death to be so explicit, and indeed enterprising, as this which appeared in the obituary columns of an American paper late in the last century: "Died, on the 11th inst., at his shop, No. 20 Greenwich Street, Mr. Edward Jones, much respected by all who knew and dealt with him. As a man, he was amiable; as a master, upright and moderate. His virtues were beyond all price, and his beaver hats were only three dollars each. He left a widow to deplore his loss, and a large stock to be sold cheap for the benefit of his family. He was snatched to the other world in the prime of life, just as he had concluded an extensive purchase of felt, which he got so cheap that his widow can supply hats at more reasonable rates than any house in the city. His disconsolate family will carry on business with punctuality."

C & B

So far in these reflections on epitaphs there has been no mention of that most taxing of all forms of literary endeavor, the epitaph upon a deceased married partner. Next day we shall discuss a remarkable instance of epitaph writing by a gentleman who had three wives and who gave them all a fine send-off.

• Is Mexico Turning from Axis?

MEXICO'S reported refusal to sell either oil or scrap iron to Japan may be the first move in a rapprochement between that turbulent nation and the United States and Britain. Disputes over oil properties have kept Mexico estranged from both, but if her declaration of adherence to continual solidarity can be taken at its face value, it means that she will return to the comity of American nations as an active and willing partner, rather than remain outside as one who appears to fear that other countries, and particularly the United States, are trying to keep her in economic subjection.

Whether or not Mexico is now prepared to settle outstanding differences with the United States arising out of the expropriation of foreign-owned oil companies, she is moving away from Japanese influence, and to that extent away from Axis influence. Italy has never played much part in Mexican affairs, notes Montreal Star, but Germany has. Nazi agent are known to be operating in the republic, as they did during the Great War. Any turn away from Japan, an Axis partner, is a blow at Germany, and it would not be surprising shortly to see Mexico taking steps to curb the activities of those totalitarian agents.

There have been no indications that Mexico was contemplating a change of policy. Only a week ago she granted an oil concession to Japanese interests. It looked as if Japan, shut out of so many other markets, might find some of her essential supplies, of which oil is one, in Mexico. Now the republic has reversed its stand and, on the ground that the concession is unconstitutional, has cancelled it. Adherence to constitutional practice has not been a conspicuous Mexican Government trait, so her unexpected volte-face may be assumed to result from factors not yet disclosed.

Whatever the reason for it, this action will raise high hopes in the United States that Mexico at last may be brought into the comity of American nations as a willing co-operator. In that event something may be done, as has already been proposed, to assist the republic in its development period through the Import-Export Bank at Washington. Mexico has already taken steps to enlarge and modernize her army and to build a navy. To do both effectively and speedily will require the assistance of the United States This help will e the more readily forthcoming if Mexico is prepared to adhere to the continental solidarity plans laid down at the Havana Conference.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

I made me great works; I builded me houses; I planted me vineyards: I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kinds of fruits....I got me servants and maidens, and had servants born in my house; also I had great possessions of great and small cattle above all that were in Jerusalem before me ....And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them, I withheld not my heart from any joy; for my heart rejoiced in all my labour: and this was my portion of all my labour.

Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do: and, behold, all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun....—Eccl. ii, 4, 5, 7, 10, 11.

Suspects Hitler To Regret It If Vichy Joins

(By JOHN EVANS.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 — (AP). — Hitler may get the present Government of occupied France as his ally to fight Great Britain, but if he does there's a fair chance he will wish he hadn't.

It still is some one's secret exactly what Germany has in mind about conquered France, but Prime Minister Churchill showed Monday he thought the Petain-Laval Government might be tempted to join the Axis. He asked directly of all Frenchmen that "if you cannot help us, at least you will not hinder us."

Hitler can offer attractive terms to aged Marshal Petain if Petain believes Hitler can win the war. He can promise France that her old Empire shall remain almost as it was, Germany taking only the Alsace-Lorraine and the colonies which France took from Germany after the last war.

The Stake.

1. Vichy as an Axis ally could swing into action what is left of her fleet. The British Fleet damaged some of her warships and others are immobilized under British control.

2. French colonies throughout the world might follow Vichy. The psychological influence might be to give Germany, Italy and Japan friendly and useful access to air, land and sea bases around the world.

The Difficulties.

1. France is a beaten, disorganized nation that would need food for the body and inspiration for the soul. Germany wouldn't be eager to supply much food and it would be far from easy to make 40,000,000 Frenchmen gladly go to war after they broke their hearts in a surrender to get peace.

2. France might be pushed back into the war, but if so the famed Flanders Fields would sprout quickly as a great crop of hate for the German conqueror. Possibly many despairing people might think joining Germany better than resisting her pressure, but it is easy to imagine the silent, sullen revolt of millions of families born of soldiers who feared or hated the German enemy of two wars.

The Empty Arsenal.

France is cut in two. Marhal Petain rules the unoccupied area which grows too little food for itself, makes few of the things it needs and is shell-shocked from war and its bitter aftermath.

Occupied France governs herself as best she may but with Germans in command at the top. This is the rich part of France, rich in fine food, and wine, full of factories with abundant coal and skilled workers.

Germany already holds French ports that face England and she has all the northern section for airfields. She has whatever French war material survived the wreck. She controls the railroads. She rules the land.

U.S. Is Seeking New Bases

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 — (AP). — Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, said on Tuesday that the United States would obtain additional naval bases in the Pacific and asserted that "events now in the making" would determine "how far flung these bases must be."

He did not detail what negotiations or plans the Navy might be pursuing for the additional bases, saying: "We have Pacific bases—the greatest and most invulnerable of them all in Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian Islands; but we need more—and we will have them."

Knox, discussing "Progress of American Rearmament" in an address prepared for delivery to the annual New York Herald Tribune forum, preceded his statement with the declaration that "the acquisition of eight new bases (by leases from Great Britain in return for 50 destroyers) added tremendously to our naval strength in the Atlantic—the equivalent of many ships—and these, with those already held, make our Atlantic defence well-nigh impregnable."

Describing the United States Navy as "the most powerful fleet afloat," Knox said "on short notice the fleet can take its station and dominate the sea lanes." Then he added: "That grip, however, may not be strong enough. We waited far too long to begin reinforcing it. To the limit of our capacity we must drive steadfastly to overcome the handicap of wasted years."

Six-Hour Failure

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 24—(AP). —Two disgusted yeggs picked up their tools and went home after battering an obdurate bakery shop safe for six hours. The door never budged. Richard Everett, 23, shop employee, timed the job. He lay bound and gagged in a corner while his captors swore and sweated.

Think Japanese Now Courting Great Britain

SHANGHAI, Oct. 24.—Inforants with excellent British connections told the British United Press today that the Japanese have informed British Ambassador Sir Robert L. Craigie in Tokyo that the alliance among Japan, Germany and Italy has a secret escape clause permitting each signatory to decide the conditions under which it will come to the aid of the others in event they are attacked.

The informants said the Japanese were attempting to convince Sir Robert that further British efforts to come to an agreement with Japan are not useless, but they believed that so far the British are viewing the Japanese advances with considerable hesitation.

Under the secret escape clause, it was said, Japan would be free to decide what she would do in event the United States should enter the European war while Italy and Germany would have equal freedom in event Japan should become involved with Britain and the United States in the Pacific.

Several high diplomats in Tokyo, the informants said, have told their home Governments during the past week that Japan's reaction to growing British-American solidarity in the Far East indicates that the Japanese feel they have lost the initiative in the Pacific, at least for the time being, and will delay any plans they may have had for early action in the Netherlands East Indies and elsewhere in new areas of Southeast Asia.

The fact that the head of the Japanese economic mission in the Netherlands Indies, Minister of Commerce Ichizo Kobayashi, has been called back to Tokyo, was given as proof that the Japanese are at least delaying their efforts to force major concessions from the Dutch colony.

The informants said there was a growing impression among diplomats in Tokyo that the three powers agreement was "loosely designed" and that its main purpose was propaganda. They said Italy and Germany hoped that the published terms of the alliance would divert British and American attention to the Pacific Ocean while the Japanese honed they would prevent a joint British-American stand in the Pacific.

The informants professed to believe that, because of the increasing British-American co-operation, Japan has decided to delay her southward expansion program and concentrate, for the time, on an effort to end the Chinese-Japanese conflict. This effort, they thought, will fail because of increased British and American assistance to China.

BIG AMERICAN ENTRY EXPECTED FOR "LITTLE SARATOGA" MEET

Dufferin Track To Resume Harness Racing

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—George Hay and his superintendents at Little Saratoga have given the order for a speedy clearance of the runners to make way for the inflow of harness horses which will arrive from Batavia, N.Y., on Friday. Over at Batavia the pacers and trotters have enjoyed a 30-night harness meet under floodlights which closes tomorrow night. Canadian horses have competed at the border State meet and have more than won their share of the purses and are ready to return to the winter session at Dufferin Park, which opens a week from Saturday.

The opening program, headed by the free-for-all pace, will present such notable pacers as Tom Grattan (2:05), Lastic Grattan (2:04), Victor Lee (2:08), Bert Patch (2.07¼), Al Grattan (2:07¼), Bing Crosby (2:06), Chestnut Bars (2:08).

On Friday, November 1, at 1 p.m., a colossal sale of standard-breds, sponsored by the Manchester Farms of Galt, Ont., will be featured as a forerunner to the race meet, all colts offered being eligible for the rich Standard-Bred Futurity Stakes.

Racing will commence at 2 p.m., and, with Daylight Time in vogue, it is expected that twelve events daily can be completed. Tom Clark and his gang will immediately make the track available for the trotters, and by the end of the week the trotters will be able to turn it on, getting ready for the opening Saturday, November 2.

Four Horses Go Down In Rockingham Spill

SALEM, N.H., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Four jockeys escaped serious injury at Rockingham Park Wednesday in a spectacular spill and pile-up during the running of the sixth race.

Coming into the home stretch, with twelve horses bunched together in the closing drive of a three-quarter-mile sprint, Jadaan, with Eddie Connolly in the saddle, stumbled and fell. Charmed One stepped on the falling horse and went down also, throwing his jockey, Fred Farrell.

Story Time and The Jurist were tangled in the resulting pile-up, throwing their riders, Willie Emery and Harold Sconza, both of whom escaped injury.

Connolly and Farrell, suffering slight leg and shoulder injuries, were taken to General Hospital for observation.

Cavalcade Cremated

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 24 (AP) CAVALCADE, 1934 Kentucky Derby winner, which died Monday, was cremated today. Some horsemen thought he was the first thoroughbred to be cremated but others argued that Old Rosebud, 1914 Derby champion, was cremated.

Cavalcade's ashes are to be interred on the Virginia Farm of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, his owner.

By FRED D. CRAIG

Saturday afternoon's football at Riverside Park with Bowmanville High providing the opposition for Coach Bamforth's P.C.I. seniors will be the feature attraction of this somewhat lean rugby year. The Peterborough students must win Saturday or their chances to get anywhere in the interscholastic race will float away on the October breeze. They are fully aware of that fact and have been driving hard in practice this week. They should be in fine fettle by the week-end and ready to give Bowmanville a battle all along the line. The game means everything and P.C.I.'s young team who held Bowmanville for three periods of last week's game only to falter in the last period, claim that they will go the whole distance at top speed in this crucial fixture which should attract a real crowd of fans to Riverside Park.

* * * * * *

This Bowmanville squad in no way resembles a pushover aggregation. In fact they have some of the best material the Rubbertown high school has yet trotted out against Collegiate and if there is the slightest letdown in the P.C.I. defensive system against such a powerful outfit the result will be just too bad. Bowmanville feel that this is their year. They have been luckier than some of the other squads in the matter of losses through graduation and the greater percentage of seasoned players they have available gives them a distinct edge over their opposition. With Brown sparking their attack the B's will be all out to win Saturday's battle and give them the group championship. Both crews want the win badly so there is every reason to expect a wow of a ball game.

* * * * * *

Lou Hayman of the Argos has a habit of coming up with a play or with a new player just at a time when his club needs the impetus of reinforcements so that it will be no surprise to hear that the coach of the Oaramen has hopes of trotting out an American star with the Argos squad. He is a former All-American named Daley who is in training with the Royal Canadian Air Force and who might be tempted to turn out with Hayman's boys if he finds he can do so without interfering too much with his military duties. Daley was formerly a star end with the Crimson Tide of the University of Alabama. If Argos' tackling in Ottawa was as bad as Hayman says it was the Toronto mentor could probably find room for half a dozen All-American ends.

Cause And Effect

Niagara Falls ball clubs have captured the senior and junior Ontario championships this season and the Cataract town is recognized as one of the greatest strongholds of amateur ball in the province. The reason is not hard to find. The folk in the Falls have been made baseball conscious by a live association that knows the value of encouraging minor baseball and giving the youngsters not only the opportunity of playing organized ball but also the incentive to do so. Something of that sort is needed in every centre in the province if baseball is to survive. Take Peterborough for example. Few local youngsters have ever seen a professional ball player in action and probably none at all have had a chance to make the acquaintance of big league stars. The inspiration to copy the style of some of these celebrities is an unknown quantity here.

* * * * * *

Not so in Niagara Falls. The annual baseball dinner of the Niagara Falls Baseball Association will be held soon with possibly 1,000 guests, including scores of young amateur ball players. The guest speaker will be Bill Stewart, National League umpire and other baseball guests will include Chet Ross of the Boston Bees, Emmy Dickman, Boston Red Sox pitcher, Buddy Rosar, Yanks' catcher, Sibby Sista, third baseman of the Boston Bees, Joe Gallagher, Brooklyn Dodger outfielder, Greg Mulleavy, Buffalo Bison infielder, Carl Fischer, Toronto Maple Leaf pitcher, Vince Sherlock, second baseman of the Louisville Colonels, Roy Van Graflin, International League umpire, Ollie Carnegie and Smoky Joe Martin of the Buffalo Bisons, Goody Rosen, Syracuse outfielder, Joe Krakauskas, Washington Senator pitcher and Bill Schuster, third baseman of the Portland Pacific Coast League club. What an inspiration for young players will that gathering be!

* * * * * *

Ray P. Best, one of the veteran members of the Peterborough Curling Club was honored at the annual meeting of the Ontario Curling Association Tuesday by being elected to the executive.. Another feature of district interest was the fact that the Campbellford Curling Club was admitted into O.C.A. membership. Reports showed that 4,638 Ontario men were members last season and women members registered numbered 363. One of the features of curling this season will be the winter-long collection for the Red Cross. Special boxes will be placed in all curling rinks in the province and every curler who participates in the pastime will be expected to place at least five cents in the box for every game he plays. The total sum collected in this way all over Ontario will be turned over to the Red Cross and is expected to reach a sizeable amount before the spring thaw arrives.

Coughlin For Orioles

It looks as if Don Coughlin, of last year's Peterborough intermediate champs will spend this season along with Ned Vitarelli as a member of the Baltimore Orioles. Coughlin has been trying out with the Hershey Bears professional squad but he was not on the lineup last night when the Bears, the farm team of the Boston outfit played an exhibition game against the Bruins. Red Hamill who drilled with the Rangers here this fall lined up with the Bears but it is thought that he will eventually be with the Boston club. Coughlin, however, according to a story from Toronto is likely to be turned back by Herb Mitchell to the Orioles for seasoning.

* * * * * *

A winter with the Orioles who play a longer schedule than the N.H.L. clubs should do the Peterborough boy a world of good. It will be a real test of his ability and if he can make an impressive showing with Pick Hines' Baltimore speedsters he will be right in line for a pro debut later on. Players in the American "amateur" loop are constantly under the eye of the professional managers and those who show sufficient promise are soon marked down for promotion. Coughlin is big, fast and a good stickhandler, qualities that should be assets for him in faster company. It is up to the Peterborough youngster to demonstrate to the pro bosses this winter that he has what it takes to make good in the cash-and-carry loop.

* * * * * *

The playoff system which has now been adopted by all professional ball loops except the majors is producing some strange results. This season in 43 minor leagues, only 17 of the clubs who finished in first place in the regular schedule succeeded in winning the playoffs and taking the championship. In more than one case a club which had wound up the scheduled campaign in the fourth slot, was able in the short playoff series to grab off all the glory by winning the pennant. A club which finishes in front after a whole summer's ball playing should be the boss club of the loop but in this screwy playoff arrangement it has more than a 50-50 chance of being nosed out. However, the public stands for it and it brings a nice chunk of jack every fall so there's your answer.

* * * * * *

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Cavalcade, Kentucky Derby winner of 1931 has been cremated....Leafs may make a centre man out of Sweeney Schriner. If he can play back to his form of several years ago Schriner should be a big scoring threat for the Toronto outfit....Folwell, former Belleville player will not be able to play with Argos Saturday because of injuries....A number of local fans are planning to see the Argo-Ottawa clash this Saturday....Several Peterborough hockey players have had offers from Atlantic City....Columbus Grads of Toronto with many former senior players in the lineup were walloped 16 to 0 by Hensall yesterday and a third game is necessary to decide the intermediate 'B' baseball title.

Can't Wait Is Entered In Pimlico Special

The jockey club said Movie Magnate Selznick had accepted an invitation for the five-year-old Can't Wait to run in the Special Nov. 1, while Woodward advised that the recently injured Fenelon was out of the race and out of training.

Thus the field looms as Can't Wait, W. L. Brann's Challedon and possibly Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash and C. S. Howard's Mioland. Brann has indicated that Challedon—the 1939 winner—will run, but the club has not heard from Mrs. Whitney or Howard.

Although Can't Wait was not invited originally to the Special, the club said he "fully merits the honor bestowed upon him." His recent victories in the Butler and Continental Handicaps earned him his bid—sent before Fenelon's withdrawal became known.

It is a weight-for-age, mile and three-sixteenths race for a winner-take-all purse of $10,000. There will be straight wagering only.

CHAPTER 44

BLAIR'S THOUGHTS were full of Janet as he ran along. She loved him!

He forgot he was hungry, and that his head throbbed with a dull continuous ache....

Janet loved him! And he was coming back for her at daylight. He did not quite understand why she could not come with him now.... but she had insisted on staying, had told him she was safe, all right. That only he was in danger.

It seemed somewhat reasonable after her information that Miss Boisevain had died....

Now and then he looked back, thinking he would see Rajah bounding after him. The woods were very still, however, and only a little wind was stirring the firs, making a soft, sighing sound.

He had dropped his iron bar when he had taken Janet in his arms... and now if anything happened he would have no way of defending himself, for he had not stopped to retrieve the weapon.

He was winded before he had gone far, but dared not stop to rest. Slowing his pace, he took the road more leisurely, his thoughts still on Janet, and her pale face as she had looked up at him in the moonlight.

Before he knew it, he was at the gate and had to retrace his steps to the side road where Janet had told him the car was standing. He found it easily, well hidden among the trees, absolutely invisible from the road.

Still rather breathless from his run, he backed out the roadster, and started on his way to Boisevain. Only a few dim lights told him he was there.

Before doing anything else, he decided he should have a doctor look at his head. While the wound might only be a small one, still there was danger of it being serious. It was not long before he had located a doctor and had awakened him.

Blair gritted his teeth and bit his lips while the doctor washed the wound, and then took three stitches in it.

"You've lost a lot of blood, man!" he said as he worked quickly, rebandaging Blair's head.

"I know."

"You ought to stay in bed several days while this heals. Or if you can't do that, be quiet."

"Can't," Blair answered noncommittally. "I'd feel fine if I had something to eat. And there's not a restaurant open in Boisevain."

The doctor in his bathrobe and slippers led him to the kitchen where he told Blair to help himself.

"You are hungry!" he exclaimed when he saw how eagerly his strange patient devoured a leg of chicken and two pieces of pie he had found in the ice box.

"Rather! I've had only part of a loaf of bread today....and some broth and a sandwich last night." When he finished he sat thinking a moment. Then he asked, "Where does McClure live? The man who keeps the garage?"

The doctor told him, whereupon Blair left after paying him more than liberally.

McClure's house he found easily from the doctor's directions. It was on the main road, some few blocks from his garage.

The man came sleepily to the door, after Blair had rung the bell for 10 minutes.

"You!" He was wide awake when he recognized his guest.

"Yes. Why are you so astonished?"

"Thought you had left town with Miss Lord. Come in."

Blair walked into the front room and sat down. "What made you think I had left town?"

"Why, Smith who keeps the hotel where you stayed had a letter from you late this afternoon, saying you had left Boisevain with Miss Lord. He was to forward your things to Vancouver."

"I didn't write it."

"You didn't write it! I think he's already sent your things away! Thought it was kind of funny of you not to come to see me before you left, but then, I thought maybe it was all right, too, and that you had decided you had enough of this queer Boisevain business. What happened to your head?"

"Somebody split it open at the house....up there," Blair pointed up the road.

"Mmm. I told you not to go up there."

"I'm going back in a little while, and you're going with me!"

"Not on your life!"

"I got away alright. Miss Lord helped me. And I've got to go back for her. She wouldn't let me take her when I left. But she told me to come back at daylight. I might need help, so I want you."

"Who bashed you in the head?"

"I didn't see who it was."

"Then you expect me to go up there?"

"There's no danger, now. Miss Lord said. Miss Boisevain died during the day."

"Died! My God! And that girl's up there alone, with only dumb Nita!" McClure left the room, and came back in a few minutes fully dressed.

"She isn't up there alone, McClure," Blair said. "Nita and she aren't the only ones up there. There's someone else. A man, I think."

"A man!"

"Yes, no woman could have hit me like this...and besides when it happened Nita and Miss Boisevain and Janet, Miss Lord, were all in the living room. I had stepped into another room when I was struck."

"You must be mistaken."

"But I'm not. I'm positive a man is in that house!"

"Well, let's be on our way. We'll have to stop for an undertaker..."

"Miss Lord didn't say anything about an undertaker..."

"What do you think we ought to do then?"

"Go alone first."

"All right."

"And say, McClure, have you a gun? I've an empty revolver, nothing else."

Without a word, McClure left the room again and returned with two old shotguns.

Quebec Net List Ranks Duff First

MONTREAL, Oct. 24 (CP)—Lewis Duff of Mount Royal Tennis Club, Montreal, was ranked No. 1 in the Province of Quebec Lawn Tennis Association rankings announced tonight. Duff is now stationed in Toronto as a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Duff jumped from third to first on his showing during the season, replacing his club-mate, Laird Watt who was unranked because of insufficient data. Roger Durivage placed second, taking the postion held by Ellis Tarshis, who also was unranked because of lack of tournament play.

Medwick Headed For Mayo Clinic

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (AP)—Joe Medwick, Brooklyn Dodger outfield star, is going to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., next month for a general check-up, the Dodgers announced today.

"There is nothing in particular wrong with Joe that we know of," said John McDonald, club secretary, "Joe merely asked permission to go along with Manager Leo Durocher, who visits the clinic each year for a check-up on an ear trouble that has bothered him since childhood."

Before the National League season ended, the Dodgers ordered every player on the roster to undergo a thorough medical examination. It was reported that at the time several men might be ordered to Rochester during the winter to have minor disorders corrected.

REGINA, Oct. 24 (CP)—Mervyn Dutton, manager of New York Americans of the National Hockey League, announced today he had signed Norman Larson, 20-year-old rightwinger, to a professional contract. Larson played for two years with Moose Jaw Millers of the Saskatchewan Senior Hockey League.

764 High Mark Is Rolled By H. Corrigan

Bowling scores touched both the high and low marks at Duffus Alleys last night when six different groups took the slides in league rolling. A rousing 761 total by Johnnie O'Dette of J. K. Hughes' Automobile League team, and a 764 by H. Corrigan of York Trading, were the day's best efforts. Corrigan hit a 306 game, but it was beaten twice when Joe Frost, another York Trader, and "Steamboat" Gilmour of the Raybestos click, tumbled 355 and 311 each. Frost's game is the best so far this year.

The ladies' honors went to Doris Ackford with 585 for the Westclox Office, Miss Johnson hit 531, Miss Martin 546, and Miss Gregson 507. Mel Starr came through with 683. "Chuck" Evans paced the Westclox shop with 686, J. Brady 679, W. Sharpe 640, A. Rightmyer 637, and R. Mongraw 614.

Raybestos-Nashua Sealrights had N. Nichols 684, G. Simpson 629, D. Hunt 626, A. Vannest 620, and S. Gilmour 614.

York Trading — H. Corrigan 754 and K. Smyllie 616.

Bruins Sticking To Same 15 That Lost In '39

BOSTON, Oct. 24.—(AP).—Boston Bruins will rely this year on the same 15 players who carried the club to the National Hockey League championship last season, only to drop the Stanley Cup series to New York Rangers when the Boston team was crippled by injuries.

"This team should be as strong as last season's club," says General Manager Art Ross. "Of course, we expect much stiffer competition all through the league. But every club should contribute to the fastest breakaway in league history with the players reporting in such advanced physical condition due to military training."

Ross feels that the coming schedule is to the disadvantage of the Boston team with several double week-end contests on the road.

"If we are going to repeat, it will require greater hockey than the team played last season," he said. "The Rangers should be as strong or stronger than last year and the break in games on the schedule imposes a handicap on us."

Ross took 12 amateurs to the Hershey training camp and also worked the flashy Hershey Bear line of Terry Reardon, Pat McReavy and Gordon Bruce, but finally decided to stand pat on last season's lineup.

That will put Frank Brimsek in the nets with Captain Dit Clapper and Jack Shewchuk forming one defence tandem and Jack Crawford and Des Smith making up the other. Bill (Flash) Hollett will hold down the utility berth.

Forwards Unchanged.

He'll use the same three forward lines. The high-scoring line centred by Milt Schmidt with Woody Dumart and Bbby Bauer on the wings; the trio in which veteran Bill Cowley is flanked by Roy Conacher and Mel Hill, and last season's surprise third line made up of Art Jackson at centre and Herb Cain and Eddie Wiseman at the wings.

That places a question mark squarely after the name of Robert (Red) Hamill on the Bruin roster. The big red-head, used alternately at defence and a wing berth last season, has been flashing great form in pre-season drills. It may be that his spirited play will induce Ross to carry a 16-man squad, as was done in the closing weeks of last season when Hamill was recalled from the Hershey Bears.

Ross feels that this is the strongest team he can assemble.

Argos After Win For Chance To Upset Riders

TORONTO, Oct. 24 — (CP). — Return games always are full with the flavor of possible revenge and, even if the Ottawa-Toronto dispute wasn't there to add more zest, next Saturday's matches still would hold interest to-day as the focus in the East's regular football schedule.

For one thing, there are perhaps more "ifs" attached to these games in both the Provincial and Ontario Union than at any other time in the season. First place and possible playoff opponents all will be thrown into the scramble as both leagues start the second half of their schedules.

Besides the matter of first place in the Interprovincial Union, there's the friction arising from the Tony Golab injury to settle when Ottawa Rough Riders invade Toronto to meet the Argonauts. The starry Ottawa half-back was injured when the Rough Riders beat the Argonauts last Saturday and the Ottawans have been most insistent about an investigation by league officials.

In addition, Toronto needs to capture this one to hold any sort of a chance of wresting first place from the unbeaten Rough Riders. At the same time, an Ottawa victory coupled with a Montreal triumph would leave the Argonauts tied with Montreal for the second playoff spot.

Montreal will be trying to make it two in a row at home against Hamilton Tigers meanwhile. Coach Bill Hughes put the Montrealers through a two-hour drill last night after which he announced them ready for a second straight victory that would eliminate Tigers altogether from the playoff race.

The situation is no less critical for the Ontario Union's teams. The unbeaten Balmy Beach of Toronto take on Sarnia at the Soldiers' home field. Another victory by the Beaches following that last week over Sarnia would assure the Toronto club of first place in the league, while Sarnia can practically make sure of a playoff berth by winning.

Play Is Presented At Chicken Supper

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 24.—(ENS)—Ghosts, the supposedly spirit of a man many years dead, strange sounds, and the appearance of an owl were highlights in the exciting play, "Demon in the Dark" presented by the young people of Keene United Church, Dummer, following the chicken pie supper served by the ladies of the church, in the Sunday school room Tuesday evening.

The play took place in a cottage high on the cliffs of Owl Island where a group of bandits had their hideout. Miss Sondra Trevor (Mrs. Ross McIntyre) and her sister, Ethelind Trevor (Miss Phyllis Kempt) have been left the cottage by their father and Sondra in escaping from her suitor, Deryk Vorse (Arnold Nelson) comes to the cabin for the summer. Another follower of Sondra's, Bob Hildredth (Joe Barnard) who she feels is a coward, because of a robbery in the bank in which he worked and who in self defence did not attempt to save the money. Attempts to solve the mystery of the tall blond woman and her accomplice who had held the bank up and had been responsible for the killing of a policeman in a nearby town had failed. The plot thickens as several of the party are spirited away and the warnings of Janet McTavish (Miss Rosetta Frankish) and her husband, Duncan McTavish (Henry Sheppard) keepers of the cabin, are given. However all ends well as Bob finds clues and the money, along with the heroic capture of the blond woman who really is Deryk Vorse, and his aids. Duncan McTavish and his supposedly drowned son, Robin McTavish (Kenneth Murray). Lizzie Scruggs (Miss Helen Nelson) plays an important part in the capture after she is revived following an overdose of her stomach medicine. The part of the crippled McTavish daughter Mary (Mrs. Arthur Elmhirst) is taken in a most natural manner, especially in the scenes when so frightened, a faint results.

The actions of Dido Davis (Miss Betty Brown) and Juniper Jenks (Delbert Coward) the two darky servants, kept the audience going with their attempts to appear brave in the fact of ghosts and spirits.

Contest Winner

Ronald White, of Havelock, ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack White, winner of Peterborough County's first contest in oratory. He will represent the district at the county-wide contest to be held soon at the Normal School in Peterborough. He was awarded a handsome silver cup for his victory.

Leafs Switching Schriner To Centre Spot

TORONTO, Oct. 24 (CP)—The "Big Two" of the National Hockey League—New York Rangers and Boston Bruins—both will start the season with the same 15 men they finished one-two with last time.

Lester Patrick already announced that his only change will be the elevation of Frank Boucher from assistant to full-fledged Coach of the Rangers. Now Boston's Art Ross says the Bruins will be intact from last year for their opening game in Montreal, November 3.

Only one important lineup change has appeared in Toronto Maple Leafs' pre-season training at St. Catharines, Ont. The former Americans left winger, Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, was shifted to centre in yesterday's workout. Schriner twice led the league in scoring with the Americans before Leafs purchased him for last season. In the shift to centre, he was flanked by Red Heron and Lex Chisholm yesterday.

With other changes in Montreal Canadiens' policy, apparently has come a loosening up of purse strings. Two players have signed contracts at the St. Hyacinthe, Que., camp—Elmer Lach, an amateur from Moose Jaw, Sask., and the all-star left winger, Hector (Toe) Blake. Toe is reported to be getting one of the highest salaries in the N.H.L.

Tougher Games

Art Ross, who announces his Boston Bruins will start this season with the same 15 men that finished the last one, believes the competition will be stiffer all through the league this time. He lays it to the training that most of the players took during the summer with the Non-Permanent Active Militia.

When Buzz Boll scored a goal in Regina Tuesday night to help New York Americans beat their intracity rivals, the Rangers, his father, Frank Boll, and a supporting group from Boll's home of Fillmore, Sask., were in the rink to lead the cheering. Three former Regina players, Goalie Earl Robertson, Defenceman Pete Slobodzian and Centre Murray Armstrong, were given loud applause by their home fans.

Aldidge (Baz) Bastien, a French-Canadian rookie from Timmins, Ont., has blossomed as a rival to Turk Broda for the net-minding job on Toronto Maple Leafs. Bastien has been going particularly well in the Leafs' practices at St. Catharines, Ont. He was elevated to the position of full-fledged understudy for Broda with the sale of Goalie Phil Stein by the Leafs to New Haven of the American League.

Boston Trounces Bears By 7 to 2

HERSHEY, Pa., Oct. 24.—(AP).—The Boston Bruins went back to their workout routine to-day after taking a second successive exhibition tilt from their Hershey Bears farmhands, turning on the power this time for a 7-2 decision.

To-day and to-morrow they will have the regular double drill, one of the sessions being devoted to scrimmage. Saturday night they meet the Bears for a third time in an exhibition encounter.

The Bruins were slow to get under way last night and were held to a lone tally in the first 23 minutes of play. In the third period they turned on the heat and piled on the goals for the topheavy victory.

Bert Gardiner Happy At Trade

ST. HYACINTHE, Que., Oct. 24 (CP)—Product of the New York Rangers chain system, goalie Bert Gardiner figures he got "the biggest break in the world" when traded to Montreal Canadiens and is quietly determined to make good in his first crack at a National Hockey League berth.

Gardiner was traded to the Canadiens at the close of last season after five years with the Philadelphia Ramblers, where he was American League understudy to the Rangers' Dave Kerr. During that time, he was called up for only seven games when injuries forced Kerr from the Rangers' lineup.

"That Davie Kerr looks like he's going to play in the New York nets for ever—he's getting better all the time," said Gardiner. "A fellow doesn't want to play minor league hockey forever, so I figure I got the biggest break in the world when I was traded to Canadiens."

The seven games that Gardiner did play with Rangers would have been enough to gain him a regular berth on almost any other N.H.L. team. All of them were against Boston, and six of them were in the playoffs against Boston two years ago when Kerr was injured after the first game.

Favors Gallows But Has Aided 45 To Escape It

VICTORIA, B.C., Oct. 24. — Stuart Henderson, 77-year-old Victoria lawyer, probably has saved more men from the gallows than any other barrister in Canada, but he believes hanging is the most satisfactory deterrent to the taking of human life.

At the last Victoria Assizes Henderson obtained the acquittal of a Royal Canadian Navy seaman charged with strangling his wife. It was the fiftieth time he had appeared for the defence in a murder trial and his forty-fifth acquittal.

The Clarence Darrow of Canada seldom discusses the guilt or otherwise of the people he saves from the gallows. "It is not a lawyer's duty to try a case," he says. "He presents the case for his client the same way the client would present it if he had the legal knowledge or training to do so. Courts, not the lawyers, decide upon guilt."

Henderson, a Glasgow Scot who came to Canada when nine years old and was educated and admitted to the Bar in Ontario, is among the best-informed and best-known men in Canada.

He has a small, back office; cares little about dress; has no telephone. He takes snuff, and often indulges in a pinch while in the midst of an impassioned address to a jury. He is as unimpressed before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council as before a country magistrate.

Henderson's first murder trial was in 1891, at Ashcroft, B.C. This case established for him a reputation among the Chinese which has directed many of them his way. Evidence was given that the two Chinese had been seen committing the murder, but Henderson secured their acquittal.

Among Indians of British Columbia he has the title "The Lawyer of the Indians." Fond of play-acting, the Indians frequently stage mock trials. They have a judge, jury, prosecuting attorney and "a Henderson." The term Henderson to them is synonymous with the defence counsel.

Rev. A. E. Baker Preaches At Warkworth

WARKWORTH, Oct. 23.—(ENS)—At the eighty-eighth anniversary held in St. Paul's church on Sunday, Rev. A. E. Baker of Davenport Road United Church, Toronto, was the special preacher.

At the morning service he based his remarks on the text, "New wine must be put in new bottles" and he urged a new warm-hearted, every-day-of-the-week religion, which does something for somebody.

He recalled his boyhood days in Warkworth and urged that more should be done for the boys and girls in the way of clubs, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, organized sport, etc., than was the case in his own youth.

At the evening service Mr. Baker's text was "The Light Was For Men." He illustrated the various traits of Jesus' character: unselfishness, kindliness, generosity, hard work, a real purpose in life, cheerfulness, optimism and humility. Jesus went regularly to the synogogue on the Sabbath day. "Name a better example for us to follow" said Mr. Baker. "I don't know one."

The excellent music added greatly to the services. At the morning service besides two anthems by St. Paul's choir under the direction of Mrs. Douglas Knight, A.T.C.M., Mrs. (Rev.) A. E. Baker gave a fine contralto solo At the evening service the men's choir from Colborne, with Mrs Henry Knight of Colborne as director were greatly enjoyed. Beside anthems, Mrs. W. McGlennon of Colborne rendered two solos, and a quartette composed of Messrs. Haynes, McGlennon, MacDonald and Watts sang.

Unusually large congregations enjoyed both splendid services.

Farmer Breaks Foot On Tractor

Guy had descended from the tractor while it was still in motion to remove some corn stalks which were impeding the plough, and in ascending again his foot slipped off the draw bar and became entangled between the lugs of the wheel and the mud guard.

The victim, although badly hurt, later managed to get the tractor to the barn, where he was assisted to the house by his mother and a broom used as a crutch.

He was taken to the office of Dr. Parker in Lindsay, where X-rays revealed four broken bones in the foot near the base of the toes, one bone being badly splintered.

The injured member was placed in a cast, where it will remain for several weeks, despite the busy fall season and scarcity of help.

Car Rolls Over.

A car containing three Peterborough people came to grief on Sunday while travelling on Highway 7A between Port Perry and Peterborough at a point a few miles south of Janetville.

The car was going down a steep hill and on hitting a bump got out of control, turning over three or four times.

A passing motorist gave first aid to the injured and conveyed them to Peterborough for further treatment, while a tow truck was brought from Lindsay to take care of the badly wrecked car.

This is reported to be the second accident as a result of this bump in the road.

Felt Nervous, Rundown, Couldn't Sleep and Was Full of Aches and Pains

Tells How Syntona Brought Quick Relief. Had No Appetite and Was Losing Weight.

MR. B. THOMAS

"Because of the grand results I've had from taking only a few bottles of Syntona, I am only to glad of an opportunity to recommend it to others," said Mr. B. Thomas, 122 Maple Street, London, Ont., in a statement to the Syntona Company.

"I was having no end of trouble with my kidneys and stomach. I suffered from attacks of indigestion, gas and acid rising after every meal. I used to get dizzy spells and dark spots floated before my eyes and I was very nervous and could not sleep. Rheumatism set into my joints, and I could get no relief until I was told of Syntona. I have only been taking Syntona a short time, but already feel like a new man. I am now eating three hearty meals a day, and have no indigestion. I enjoy a good night's sleep, and the pains in my back and joints have left me."

Home Loans End On October 31

OTTAWA, Oct. 24—(CP).—Home Improvement Plan loans made after October 31 by approved lending institutions will not be accepted for guarantee by the Dominion Government under the Home Improvement Loans Guarantee Act. Finance Minister Ilsley announced last night.

Under the act, the Finance Minister was authorized to guarantee loans up to a total of $50,000,000. Mr. Ilsley's statement said: "It is believed that by the end of the present month the total of loans made will closely approach that amount.

"In view of the necessity of conserving the Dominion's financial resources and because of the ever-expanding demands of the war program upon the country's labor supply, the Minister has decided not to ask Parliament for an amendment to the act increasing the amount of loans subject to Dominion guarantee."

He said it is realized there may still be some demand for loans, but it is believed that the experience of private lending institutions with home improvement loans has been so satisfactory that they will continue to take care of any cases of real necessity that may arise without the aid of a Dominion guarantee.

The Home Improvement Plan was started in November, 1936, on recommendation of the National Employment Commission. It was designed as a measure to relieve unemployment, particularly in the depressed building industries.

"The Home Improvement Plan has had a striking success," Mr. Ilsley said. "It was one of the most constructive measures taken to solve the unemployment problem.

"Up to September 30, 1940, loans to a total amount of $48,181,525 had been made, and as at that date losses paid amount to less than ¼ of 1 per cent of the total loans made, while 62.14 per cent of the amount of money loaned had been repaid by borrowers.

"The plan, however, has served its purpose, and what the country is now about to face is not the need to create employment, but rather the necessity of mobilizing all available supplies of labor, and particularly skilled labor, to meet the imperative demands of the war program."

Devil's Island Convicts Freed

MONTREAL, Oct. 24—(CP).—The prisoners on Devil's Island, France's famous penal colony, have been released because of lack of food in the colony and lack of money to pay the guards, the Gazette says.

The newspaper quotes a letter received in Montreal from residents of the British West Indies island of St. Kitts saying: "We have had Frenchmen arrive here in dugouts from Devil's Island, the French penal servitude colony. There is no money to pay their wardens, and no food forthcoming for the prisoners, so they just opened up the prisons and allowed the prisoners to escape."

The letter goes on to say that the prisoners are scattering throughout the West Indies in large numbers, and adds: "Our chief of police has wired the Governor not to let any more arrive, as we cannot accommodate them."

Telephone Lines Being Rebuilt

To provide additional telephone facilities made necessary by building activities in Peterborough, telephone lines in certain sections north of George Street and in an area bounded by Lake, Sherbrooke, Aylmer and Park Streets are now being reconstructed and extended, according to M. H. Riddle, Bell Telephone manger here.

A considerable number of new homes have been erected here during the past year, Mr. Riddle said, and it is the company's policy to have telephone facilities ready in advance of the demand.

For this purpose, new underground conduit is being laid on Sherbroke Street from Aylmer to Reid Streets, and a large underground cable will be installed in the duct. From this point, th lines will be carried in overhead cable to Monaghan Road. Elsewhere in the district the present underground facilities will be extended and larger overhead cables erected.

This work will be completed about the end of April.

Claims Teaching Home-Making Keeps Girls Good

CINCINNATI, Oct. 24—(AP). — The National Prison Congress was given an "old-fashioned recipe today for keeping girls out of penal institutions.

"Teach them to scrub, cook, serve meals and mend clothing," advised Mrs. Marguerite Reilley, superintendent of the Ohio Women's Reformatory.

Mrs. Reilley, who is the keeper of Velma West, notorious hammer slayer, asserted in a prepared speech that "one of the most glaring lacks of our present-day society is that we have got away from the old-fashioned habits of home-making and home-keeping."

Deploring a "sad neglect" in the training of girls for "woman's work" she declared that her institution at Marysville, O., seldom received a woman "who knows the art of housekeeping."

The reformatory superintended emphasized the restoration of pride, self-confidence and personality in the rehabilitation of wayward women.

The reformatory, she related, has three beauty shops in which inmates are required to obtain a hair-do and a shampoo at least once a week. Girls of good conduct receive permanent waves as often as necessary. All these service are free. Then there are gifts of cold cream, powder and toilet water for good behavior.

"You all know," she said, "that when a woman looks well, she feels well, and when she is conscious of this it logically follows that she does her best."

Germany Hesitates To Risk Her Troops For Italy's Assistance

(Written for Canadian Press by MAJOR-GEN. SIR CHARLES GWYNN.)

LONDON, Oct. 24—(CP).—The Battle of Britain goes on. It becomes increasingly an air battle, conducted by night, against material and morale. The Navy continues to control sea communication. But we cannot expect to hear much of its many activities.

Any prospect of the main armies of Britain and Germany coming to grips in the near future has, in my view, almost disappeared. The air war may continue for a long period with only minor alterations in method.

We are afforded an opportunity of reviewing the situation in other theatres of war. Libya and Abyssinia are, of course, the only other active theatres, but potential theatres are numerous.

In Libya, Graziani is still attempting to develop his communications and his advance base. Subjected to bombardment by naval guns on one side, to harassing attacks by mobile land units on the other, and to air attack, his preparations are necessarily proceeding slowly. He is suffering losses in material and the communications of his advanced troops make considerable demands upon his resources.

Big Opposing Armies

While it would be a profound error to underestimate Italian strength, both in numbers and quality of material the Allied army is now formidable also. The opposing armies, however, are, and may remain for sometime, outside striking distance of each other for anything in the nature of offensive or counter-attack.

Before the offensive stage is reached, Graziani may receive reinforcements in aircraft and mechanized troops from Germany. But sea communications with Libya are by no means safe from disturbance and unless they can be made safe it is doubtful if Germany would risk sending many valuable troops across the Mediterranean.

Of other regions that demand attention Spain is perhaps the most important. Pressure is obviously being put on Gen. Franco to make a move on Gibraltar, presumably with Axis assistance. But no fact is more certain than that Spain is war-weary. She is extremely impoverished as a result of her own Civil War and interruption of trade.

She stands to lose much more than she can even be promised by the Axis by going to war. Perhaps her attitude, like that of others, is waiting upon the outcome of the Air Battle of Britain.

The Pact of Japan with the Axis Powers designed to place a brake on Anglo-American collaboration has had, if anything, the opposite result. What its effect will be on the attitude of Russia is still obscure, but so far it does not seem materially to have changed the general military situation.

In that situation, the outstanding point, to my mind, is that Germany, who up to now has won her victories mainly with her army, is unable to discover a theatre in which she can use her army to the detriment of Britain.

It may become purely an army of European occupation. She must rely almost solely on her air force for offensive power. And in the air she has met her match.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner Visits Canucks In "Front Lines"

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Oct. 24 — (CP Cable) — Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Canadian Minister of Agriculture, and his party of Dominion Government officials spent four hours with Canadian troops in the defence area on Tuesday.

The minister and his party, which included J. G. Taggart, chairman of the Dominion Bacon Board, Georges Bouchard, executive assistant to the minister, and Major R. J. Waterous, director of the Material Resources Branch and a former Brantford, Ont., mayor, were accompanied by Lt.-General A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian Corps Commander, and his senior officers.

Mr. Gardiner, in rubber boots, and his associates plodded across gumboed and stubbled fields to visit one unit commanded by Maj. Colin Campbell, former Minister of Works for Ontario, whom the visiting minister greeted warmly.

The party visited a Prairie infantry battalion drawn up in parade formation around a 10-acre field. Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Taggart reviewed the entire battalion, seeing many men they knew.

"I've got dozens of messages to deliver back in Canada," said Mr. Taggart.

They also saw a Regina unit and drove over a new highway built by a Royal Canadian Engineers road construction company.

"I'm very pleased to see the men looking in such excellent condition and will tell the people back home," said Mr. Gardiner.

He wound up the afternoon at 1st Division headquarters where he met the Divisional Commander, Maj.-General G. R. Pearkes.

Gen. McNaughton, who personally conducted the tour, gave Mr. Gardiner a candid account of the work of the unit, expressing criticism of some features and lauding others.

Stainless Steel New Plane Find

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—(AP). — A changeover in American airplane manufacture from the present aluminum alloy construction to stainless steel is predicted by steel makers.

They said that, under pressure of the national rearmament program, the steel industry is on the threshhold of quantity production of a thin, high-tensile stainless steel which will "revolutionize" airplane construction.

"This wartime development," says one authority, 'may prove to be as complete a change as was the shift from wood-and-cloth to all-metal planes."

The new steel is thinner than the paper upon which this is printed. A trip of it hangs limply from the fingers, resembling a piece of light tinfoil. But it has a tensile strength of 185,000 pounds to the square inch.

It is three times as strong, say the steel men, as the aluminum alloy now used in airplane making, but it also is three times as heavy.

It's outstanding virtues are three: It will not rust; it is unaffected by the degree of heat at which aluminum melts; it is twice as difficult to bend as duralumin.

NORWOOD

Young People's Officers Are Installed

NORWOOD, Oct. 24 (ENS)—The ceremony of installing the executive of the Anglican Young Peoples' Association was conducted Sunday evening in Christ church, by the Rev. R. E. Lemon, at a combined children's and young peoples' service. Rev. Lemon's sermon, directed especially to the younger generation, was enjoyed equally well by the older members of the congregation. A vocal solo, "My Task," was sung by Mr. Garnet Rose.

The newly installed officers of the A.Y.P.A. are as follows: president, Miss Kathleen Tincombe; vice-president, Garnet Rose; secretary, Miss Dorothy Peoples; treasurer, David Lemon. The organization assembled for a general meeting on Monday evening, followed by an executive meeting. A Hallowe'en party has been planned for Monday, October 28.

Institute Euchre

A "progressive euchre" party was successfully sponsored by the Norwood Branch Women's Institute last Friday evening at King's Hotel. Proceeds from the party will be used to provide some Christmas gifts for the boys of the Norwood community who have enlisted with the C.A.S.F.

Ten tables of cards were played, with prizes being won as follows: Ladies 1st, Mrs. Alec Innes; ladies 2nd, Mrs Harry Pearce; men's 1st, Mr. Golden Andrews; men's 2nd, Mr. Harry Baker.

A lunch was served later, and the evening concluded with the National Anthem.

On Thursday afternoon it was announced that the Institute would hold a quilting at the home of Mrs. Simpson. Last week, in addition to their Red Cross work, the ladies completed two quilts, and pieced a top for another.

The Institute plan to sponsor a play, which they hope to present in the Norwood town hall, some time before Christmas.

"I Return With Pride and Confidence In Our Country" Declares Prime Minister

"I return with pride and confidence in our country," declared Premier King upon completion of his inspection of east coast defences. He is shown, UPPER LEFT, addressing the crew of a Canadian destroyer that served three months overseas. "May God bless and protect each one of you," he told the crew, which is commanded by Lieut.-Commander Horatio Nelson Lay, nephew of the Prime Minister. UPPER RIGHT, the Prime Minister is shown inspecting the operations of a big anti-aircraft gun on the Atlantic coast. Great interest was displayed by Mr. King in the U.S. destroyers recently turned over to the Royal Canadian Navy. He inspected the vessels from stem to stern and is shown, LOWER LEFT, examining the silverware left aboard the destroyers by the U.S. crews. As well as inspecting various arms of the service already engaged in the duties of protecting Canada's Atlantic coast, Mr. King visited military training camps during his two-day visit. He is shown, LOWER RIGHT, chatting with a member of a Newfoundland regiment training on the east coast.

tacked "objectives in Berlin and elsewhere in Germany," the air ministry announced.

Dangerous landing weather in northern France and the soupy sky over the Channel were credited widely with forcing the German air force to pull its punches for the second night in succession. Londoners had time for a long, uninterrupted sleep between the night alarm and the one near dawn.

Casualties Are Light

"Houses and shops were damaged at several points," the government said in a communique describing the night's Nazi activity, "but up to 6:30 this morning no reports of extensive damage had been received and the casualties reported were not numerous though some persons are known to have been killed."

A second communique of the air ministry and the ministry of home security said late reports on the night's raids showed that in the London area damage was slight and the number of casualties small.

A number of houses were demolished in one area by high explosive bombs.

A doctor and a nurse, with shell splinters falling around them, worked for several hours with the aid of a flashlight to reach a woman trapped in the debris of her kitchen in order to administer an injection. Later a rescue squad extricated her and she was taken to a hospital in serious condition.

Eighty persons in a pub escaped injury when a bomb burst in front of the building. Another hit a garage across the street and a third wrecked a neighboring house, but no one was killed.

Bombs were dropped on 10 districts of Scotland early today. First reports indicated damage was slight and casualties were few.

French Bases

In return, it was said, Germany would release all French war prisoners and would move the frontier of the area of France unoccupied by German forces northward from Tours and the Swiss frontier to the Seine River.

Paris, which straddles the Seine, would be placed under a special regime, with part of the city ruled by the Petain-Laval government and part by German authorities, it was said.

The French naval bases which would fall to the axis under the projected agreement were described as Dakar, capital of French West Africa; Toulon, on France's Mediterranean coast; Casablanca, in French Morocco, and Bizerte, in Tunisia.

Air Bases In Syria

Air bases would be given the axis in North Africa and Syria—strategically situated for a possible assault on Egypt and the Near East, observers believed.

Diplomatic sources described the projected agreement with France as purely a "transitional arrangement," and said the Germans had made it clear that final peace terms would depend upon France's "loyal collaboration" in the axis-planned new European order until the end of the war.

Laval who saw Hitler Tuesday was represented as anxious for a definite peace settlement, but Petain and others, it was said, flatly refused to pay the price—an outright alliance with Germany against Britain.

Petain therefore was reported to have been persuaded to accept the projected new agreement as the lesser of two evils. His only alternative was said to have been German-Italian occupation of all France.

Laval, who returned to Vichy yesterday to confer with Petain and other government officials, was expected back in Paris today.

French sources said one argument used by the Germans in an attempt to obtain France's co-operation was that the conquered republic might starve this winter unless the British blockade were broken down.

These sources also suggested that Hitler might have used similar arguments to try to persuade Spain to accede to axis desires.

Before Hitler talked with Franco it was reported the Spanish leader was reluctant to drag his country into the war by making it a party to a drive against Gibraltar, despite Spain's long-cherished desires to regain this stronghold.

Not Involve French Forces.

(From Berne came reports that the Petain-Laval regime at Vichy had under consideration an agreement which would give the Axis powers air and naval bases in France, Africa and Syria but would not involve operations of the French fleet or air force against Britain.

(These reports said the naval bases which might fall to the Axis included Dakar, capital of French West Africa; Toulon, on the French Mediterranean coast; Casablanca, French Morocco, and Bizerte, in Tunisia).

Foreign correspondents were not permitted to send any information direct from Spain until the German radio announced in a broadcast heard here that the conference had taken place.

Hitler was accompanied by his Foreign Minister, Ribbentrop, who also sat in one of the talks with Laval. With Franco was his brother-in-law and righthand man, Foreign Minister Serrano Sunder, who only recently returned from a series of talks with Axis heads in Berlin and Rome.

Also with Franco were two representatives of Spanish press services and regular diplomatic attaches.

(A Berlin communique said merely that the conversations had been conducted "in the cordial spirit of comradeship uniting both nations.")

HALL'S—Always

A Safe Place To Buy

SAFE?

Of course we're safe. Several people have mentioned that they are afraid to come into the store. We can only say to these timid ones: Come in and see the sturdy steel columns and heavy steel beams, and you'll know you're safer in HALL'S than ever before in the history of the building.

WHO ARE WE?

Dame Rumour—always an enthusiastic spreader of "they say" information—remarks that "they say" Hall's have been taken over by a Hebraic organization from Montreal.

The present Manager of Hall's was engaged by the late Herbert Hall to help put the old Richard Hall business firmly on its feet again.

Sir James Woods of Gordon, Mackay and Co., Toronto, advanced the money for the financing of the store. After a few years, Mr. Herbert Hall, wishing to drop his association with the business, disposed of his stock to Gordon, Mackay and Co. Since that time the store has been owned and operated by Walker Stores Limited—a store group organized by Gordon, Mackay and Co. You'll find branches of Walker Stores in many cities of Ontario—all good stores in which to buy—but when "HALL'S" alternations are finished you'll find in Peterborough the best of them all.

We Must Apologize

To our many customers for the inconvenience we have caused them—but with the third floor out of action, the second floor almost so, and the main floor operating under a serious handicap, it has been difficult to maintain our usual good service and to keep stock assortments as complete as usual.

Anyhow, anything we do offer you throughout this inconvenient time, you can buy at HALL's usual dependable prices and often even less than that.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION

Rural school teachers will assemble at the Peterborough Normal School on Friday for the annual convention. The sessions start at nine in the morning and continue until four in the afternoon standard time.

ON STANDARD TIME

Delegates from this city who will visit Lindsay on Friday to attend the annual convention of the Home and School Association should remember that Lindsay is still operating on standard time. More than fifty delegates will motor up from the different Home and School Associations in the city, and as the agenda extends late into the evening, they will not be able to get home much before the small hours of Saturday morning.

A RURAL OBJECTION

Reeve M. H. Johnston of North Monaghan says quite bluntly that it is time Peterborough got back from fall and summer time to standard time. He attended the big plowing match at St. Thomas last week, and in five cities, including Hamilton, London and St. Thomas, the clocks were an hour behind Toronto and Peterborough. "Don't you think we've had enough of this D.S.T. for this year," Mr. Johnston said. "I can't see where there is going to be much saving of electric power from now on."

PATRIOTIC STAMPS

Both the Lions Club and the Canadian Legion have had patriotic stamps printed; they are the type put on the backs of letters. The Lions' stamp is red, white and black with a cartoon of Hitler and a swastika and the words "Help Lick 'im." The Legion stamp is in red, white and blue, with a poppy and a drawing of the Vimy Memorial. It bears the inscription, "The Price of Freedom, Their Sacrifice and Ours."

KILLED DURING RAID

A. O. Phillips of The Examiner staff received word on Wednesday of the death of his sister, Mrs. R. Smith, during a German air raid on Marylebone, London. Mr. Phillips is the official weather recorder in Peterborough and his comment appears every day in The Examiner. His sister had lived in Canada seven years, and had often visited Peterborough during that time. The information received indicated that three other persons were killed by the bomb which hit a store.

BEARS PLENTIFUL.

Fish and Game Overseer I. J. Lyons reports that bears are apparently plentiful in the northern part of the county, especially in the game preserve. One animal has been prowling around the buildings of the Nepheline mine and has been very bold. Another got into the cornfield of Earl Ivy, Clarina, and did considerable damage.

FISH AND GAME CASES.

Several fish and game cases will be heard in police court shortly. Overseer Windsor has laid several charges against persons for illegal fishing and Overseer Lyons is charging a Toronto man with carrying a gun without a license at Stoney Lake recently.

FIREMEN PASS TESTS.

It is understood that the Peterborough firemen who have been taking the special course conducted by the Ontario acting deputy fire marshal have been successful in passing their examinations and will now be assigned to duty with the Royal Canadian Air Force. Chief George Gimblett had no comment to make when asked about the matter.

REMANDED FOR SENTENCE.

Thomas Cleary, long a problem for police court authorities, appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., today, charged with begging and pleaded guilty to the charge. Cleary, who has lost a foot lately, was in obvious bad health this morning and Magistrate Langley announced that he would remand the unfortunate man for a week. In the interval an effort would be made to have him sent to the County House of Refuge at Lakefield. "Would you stay there if we can get you in?" asked Magistrate Langley, and Cleary replied in the affirmative. He admitted that he had been in the institution once before and had not remained there.

PacificCommand Busy On Patrol

A WEST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Oct. 24.—(CP).—Coastal patrol work and training of seamen in the creation of a greater and stronger navy—these are the big jobs for the Pacific command of the Royal Canadian Navy.

Wartime patrol work on 700 miles of deeply-indented and island-dotted coastline is no easy task. But it is being done and the navy is carrying on with its other wartime jobs of fitting out ships of war and manning coastal batteries.

Most of the job of patrol falls to the fishermen's reserve, now the eyes and ears of the navy. Its members are trained in navigation, mine-sweeping, signalling and gunnery.

Sturdy armed fish packers patrol the coast, augmented by more heavily-armed converted yachts and cruisers. The crew know every part of the coast from Wales Island at Alaska's southern tip to Race Rocks at the southern end of Vancouver Island.

A big job too is training of men for war at sea. The training base is known as a ship—H.M.C.S. Naden—and classes are held under conditions prevailing aboard any naval vessel. They "keep watch" and sleep in hammocks. They are trained in wireless, gunnery and seamanship.

With 15,000 young Canadians on the navy's waiting list, the base is filled to overflowing and some of the men are sleeping in tents. Naval Minister Angus Macdonald has promised increased accommodation.

Canada needs ships of war for the men she is training. She is getting them. Almost every shipyard along the coast is buzzing with wartime activity and turning out Corvette-type vessels for mine-sweeping and other duties.

Rambling Reporter

NOT REGISTERED

The Examiner reporters in their quest for opinions on the removal of the German guns from Confederation Square, this morning, ran into several discussions on guns in general.

One man began talking about the registration of guns, and the conversation developed until it was asked if the guns on display in the Peterborough Public Library had been registered.

The reporters took the question up with Sergeant Gordon Puffer at the Police Station, and discovered that the guns had not been registered. They are considered to be useless, the Examiner was told, and registration would be an unnecessary formality.—H.

Simcoe Provides McArthur An Acclamation

BARRIE, Ont., Oct. 24.—(CP). — Hon. Duncan McArthur, appointed Minister of Education in the Ontario Liberal Government four days after the death last August 18 of Hon. J. L. Simpson, succeeds the late Dr. Simpson as member of the Legislature for Simcoe Centre. He was elected by acclamation at a nomination meeting yesterday.

The nomination meeting was held without speeches, an election rally was held later in Barrie Collegiate auditorium where Dr. McArthur, Premier Mitchell Hepburn and D. C. McCuaig, Liberal Member of Parliament for North Simcoe, addressed the meeting.

Dr. McArthur told the gathering that pupils in the school of Ontario should be given a thorough grounding in the principles of democracy. Children should become familiar with the extent of obligations which the people of Canada and the other dominions owe to Great Britain "for the enjoyment of the democratic way of life," he said.

Mr. Hepburn lashed out at the apathy of the people of Canada in the war and urged Canadians to give whole-hearted support to Great Britain in the "present dangerous situation."

"She has defended us," he declared, and added that "I wish we had 10,000 Churchills in Canada."

The Premier said his complaint of Canada's war effort was not against the Dominion government which is "doing better" now.

Vagrant Is Given Two-Month Term

"I don't believe the army would want you with a record like that," Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., told Hawley Lasher in police court this morning after the accused, charged with vagrancy, had told him that he had come here to join the Canadian forces.

Lasher had pleaded guilty to the charge and was up this morning for sentence.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., produced the man's record and it was after reading the document that showed previous convictions both here and in the United States that Magistrate Langley made his remark.

"The last time I got into trouble was five years ago," said Lasher.

"Oh they didn't get you for six months afterward that time," commented Magistrate Langley.

"Not until a year afterward," explained the accused.

Lasher declared that he had been with the Royal Canadian Air Force for some time this summer as a civilian cook.

Magistrate Langley imposed a sentence of two months in the county jail.

Suspended Sentence Is Given Girl By Cadi

A young girl who pleaded guilty of stealing a sum of money from a Smith township resident was allowed to go on suspended sentence for eighteen months when she appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

A second charge was dismissed when the Crown announced that no evidence would be submitted.

Conditions of the suspended sentence are that the girl shall make restitution within six months of the stolen money, and that she shall obey the directions and orders of Adjutant Norman Buckley of the Salvation Army as to her mode of life.

Adjutant Buckley and the girl's mother signed the bond.

Citizens Would Turn Into Scrap Souvenirs Of Great War Now Reposing In Peterboro' Park

A suggestion that the German artillery pieces now reposing in Confederation Square as war souvenirs, be converted into scrap metal met with almost unanimous approval when Examiner reporters sought opinions on the plan today.

An organization in Ottawa has made an appeal to the Government that this step be taken, and as the guns are the property of the Federal Government, and on loan to the different communities the legal procedure in releasing them is now being looked into. So far nothing definite has been done, but many municipalities are giving some thought to the suggestion.

Stan Longhurst, manager of H. R. Scott Limited who served with the 55th Battery in the last war was one of the first questioned about the proposal.

He said: "They are certainly not a thing of beauty—scrap them, they have served their purpose.

Max Sloan, 2nd vice president of the Ontario Command, Canadian Legion: "If it will help win this war, I don't think the war veterans would have any objection. They would delight in helping finish the job they started last time."

Ford Strickland, K.C., local lawyer—"They apparently have some scrap value and the sooner use is made of them for this purpose the better. In my opinion the war veterans who were glad to have them as souvenirs of the last great conflict would be even more happy to see them used against their old enemies today in any form."

Scotty Gracie, caretaker Custom's House and former member of the Scots Guards—"Turn them into scrap before some youngster is injured playing on them. I've seen kids scrambling all over these relics and I think it would be far better to break Hitler's neck with them than to have some local youngster break a leg by falling off them."

Harold Freeman, who enlisted with the 93rd Battalion: "Break them up and give Fritz some of his metal back in hot form. We can replace them with a Messerschmitt airplane at any time. As far as I'm concerned they can't throw too much on Berlin even material supplied by the Germans."

Rocky Martin, Veteran's Home Guard, who served with the 4th C.M.R.'s in the last war: "They are no decoration to the park now. If they can be put to a more useful purpose, let's do it at once."

Eddie O'Toole, McFarlane Ave., formerly with the 2nd Division Trench Mortars—"This is no time for sentiment, we have a job to do and any means at our disposal should be used. I helped tow the guns back out of the city dump in 1925 along with several hundred other war veterans, but its another story now."

Lt.-Col. D. J. Lawrie, officer commanding the 4th Field Battery, R. C.A., exploded a theory that one of the guns might be suitable for training purposes. Col. Lawrie said it was true a battery in Cobourg was using a German war relic for training but the gun was much smaller than those at Peterborough, and in much better condition. "The guns here have no value as a training weapon," he said.

Fire Chief George Gimblett said, "All the old artillery pieces in the country should be melted down and used for scrap iron." The Chief went on to say that since the guns were the property of the Dominion Government this could be done quite easily, and the metal would be certainly welcomed in industry.

The one objection to the proposal encountered by the Examiner was registered by George Wesley of Roger street. Mr. Wesley said that since the guns were undeniably symbols of a British victory, they should be left standing, and he thought they were "A less gruesome memorial than tombstones."

John T. Thompson, cashier at Grafton and Company, advanced a practical suggestion to the effect that since the steel had been once processed, it could be used in the manufacturing of British guns, and that the steel would require much less working with. If field pieces were required in a hurry, Mr. Thompson felt the old guns would be of incalculable worth.

"We might as well get rid of them, they'll be of some use this way, and we'll have new models after this war anyway." These were the words of Herbert Maw, George street druggist.

One citizen having an opinion, but not wishing to register it as an objection, said that since we had guns from the Crimean war, in front of the Court House, it would be interesting to keep the relics of the Great War, and add to them after the present war is over. He felt however, that all sentimental attachments to the guns should be ignored if the need for them was felt.

Jack Smith, barber, said, "We need the iron for purposes other than relics, and they would do more good in the melting pot than in Confederation Square, I'd say take them."

Even men who had almost fought to have the guns restored to the park when they were removed in 1925, were unanimous in their opinions. All canvassed thought they should be used as scrap. Most said they didn't know just how badly they were needed, but the Department of National Defence would be the best judge of that, and if they are needed it would be splendid if they were used.

Youth Fined $5 For Assault

Jack Cockerill, 17, of North Monaghan township, who told the court that his father was a member of the Veterans' Guard at Kingston, was fined $5 and $4.25 costs in police court this morning after he had pleaded guilty to assaulting Marshall Dunstan.

Crown Attorney McElderry explained that some windows had been broken in the Confederation School and that Cockerill had assaulted another boy for accusing him of doing the damage.

"The boy who was assaulted was much younger than this boy and has a broken arm," Mr. McElderry stated.

Magistrate Langley warned Cockerill that he would not get off so lightly if he came before the court again.

"I am lenient in the first round," explained the Magistrate, "but I get tougher after that."

The warrant was endorsed not to be executed for five days, giving the boy that long to obtain the money to pay his fine.

The alternative is ten days' imprisonment.

Synod Accepts $95,000 Demand

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—(CP).—Montreal and Ottawa Synod of the Presbyterian church in Canada, in session here last night accepted a 1941 allocation of $95,000 from the Board of General Assembly.

Delegates, however, approved a resolution suggesting that an appreciably lower allocation might result in readier response from congregations.

The money to be collected is used for carrying out projects of the church like mission work and operation of schools and colleges. Total amount to be raised in Canada is $500,000.

During the session Dr. A. Cameron, Toronto, secretary of the General Board of Missions, told how the church has taken steps to protect the lives of its far eastern missionaries.

"The Board of Missions has arranged that if missionaries in the Far East need transportation in a hurry, they need not cable home for tickets," he said.

Sentenced To Die

Sgt.-Major Chate Puts End To Blitzkreig When He Swings Broom At Bat In Normal

The blitzkrieg is over and peace has finally been restored in the basement of the Normal School. Last week when members of the Women's Auxiliary War Services were training there and a bat swooped down on them from the furnace causing causing panic in the ranks, like a Heinkel bomber zooming out of the clouds to machine gun a column of soldiers.

The women grabbed brooms, clubs and anything handy in an attempt to smite the flying bat but it escaped. Last night it was another story, when the bat came out for his night spin, Sgt.-Major Chate, who is training the unit, picked up a broom, and flattened the bat.

The presence of the bat is believed to have had an effect on the attendance, for one resident of the district said there was not as many cars outside the Normal School as there had been a week ago. However, the routine can now continue without interruption, thanks to the deadly broom swinging ability of the sergeant-major.

Obituary

CHARLES FARR

There passed away at his home near Lewvan, Saskatchewan, on Saturday evening Charles Farr, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Farr of Harwood. Mr. Farr had been ill for several months and his death was not unexpected.

Besides his wife, Eva, he leaves two sons, Glenn, aged 12 and Harold, aged two, also three brothers, Tom of Vancouver and Mart and Bert of Hamilton and one sister, Mrs. T. F. Summerhayes of Toronto. Mr. Farr's first wife Miss Amy Drummond of Keene died about 20 years ago. Interment was at Regina on Tuesday.

CHARLES C. BROWN.

NORWOOD, Oct. 24.—(ENS).— A gentleman well known and highly esteemed throughout the district, Charles Crawford Brown passed away at his home on Spring street, Norwood, recently, succumbing to an illness of almost a year. He was the son of the late David Brown and Margaret Ann Crawford, the yonugest of a family of six.

Born in Dummer township March 17th, 1886, the late Mr. Brown had spent the greater share of his life in the vicinity of South Dummer, farming up until he entered business at South Dummer store in 1919. Ten years later he sold out and during the following year he enjoyed a motor trip to Western Canada. On his return he purchased the hardware business of W. H. Buck and since that time has resided in Norwood. Since disposing of his business here to W. B. Cole in 1938 he has been agent for farm machinery.

He was a member of the former Methodist church. During his residence in South Dummer he took a very active part in the church and was superintendent of the Sunday school for over ten years. He was an elder for a number of years. Since coming to Norwood he has kept up his church work, being envelope steward for a number of years and a member of the session. Prominent also in affairs of the municipality he was elected a member of the village council in 1931, holding the office until he retired six years later.

Fraternally he was a member of Loyal Orange Lodge at South Dummer and the Royal Black Preceptory at Norwood.

On May 29th, 1912, he married Elizabeth Ferguson McMaster, who mourns his passing, together with two sisters, Mrs. James E. Brown and Mrs. Adam Gardner, and one brother, John H. Brown of Dummer.

The funeral from his late residence was attended by a large cortege of friends from all over the district. Rev. M. I. Robinson was the officiating clergyman and conducted services at the home and the graveside in Norwood cemetery. His text, from the tenth chapter of St. John, the tenth verse, was, "I am come that ye might have life." Hymns used were "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me" and during the service at the house L. C. Gunstone sang "Eternal Peace" by Newman Wolsey, a composition written to commemorate the passing of King Edward VII.

A profusion of beautiful floral tributes bore mute testimony to the esteem of many friends. Flower bearers were Roy H. Scott, M. W. Bailey, John Weir, Wm. Mildermail, W. H. McMillan, W. H. Montgomery, Wm. R. Parker and Geo. McNaughton. Pallbearers weer John H. Brown, Roy Brown, Max Brown, Harry Patterson, W. P. Wendt and Lewis Freeburn.

Work Is Rushed In Preparing For Buildings

The temporarily wide open spaces at the west side of the Canadian General Electric Company, enlarged of late by the levelling of all the houses on the north side of Albert street, are scenes of animated industry these days as projected factory expansions take root in reinforced concrete.

Immediately west of the present walls of the plant are the outlines of the new munitions building, the beginning of which involved a big soil changing job, removal of black muck from a forgotten cedar swamp to corner spot on the property and replacing it with earth from the Kawartha Country Club. That job is now being extended further westerly evidently on the site of the C.G.E. company's new wire building which was planned before the government's rush order for a special factory came along.

All the motorized and steam equipment has moved over to the new location, scooping up soil that has to be trucked away, and one machine noses into it with the direct and head-on approach of a snow plow, and simply rolls back the loosely textured black muck. Trucks are drawing soil to fill the hollows the machines are making in the surface layer, and will build up a complete new earth foundation for this building. Its outlines are being indicated by engineers' levels, and from the present bustling activity on the big lot the extent of the new expansion can be visualized.

During the last ten days or so, another group of workmen have been cutting a railway projection through the south end of the most westerly building on the property. A new interior wall is being bricked in as the new southerly limit of that building, and track foundations are being laid on ground that was part of the shop. In fact one corner of the building used to be a foreman's office.

Evidently new tracks will be laid all along the south side of the property, close to Monaghan Road where they will loop to Wolfe street, turning easterly, and from the track paralleling that street switches will provide spur lines leading into each shop, a convenience and economy in freight traffic handling.

Another incidental job is the laying of a new drain along Albert street, and into the property.

Militia Officers Worry About Trainee Future

TORONTO, Oct. 24. — What to do with 25,000 recruits every six weeks or so, as they are turned out of military training camps, may or may not be a subject of serious study at Ottawa, but, unofficially, the question is being debated in lively fashion among military men in Toronto.

According to announced plans, the 21-year-old youths, the first batch of which will "graduate" on November 8, are to be attached to non-permanent militia units.

Just how this will work out in the immediate Toronto area is not clear, one senior officer observed yesterday, as practically every second battalion of infantry regiments here is at ful strength right now.

If the "attachment" is to be paper strength merely, it would be a pity to see this partially trained man-power get rusty for lack of occasional drill, this officer said.

A better plan, he urged, would be to organize immediately new "militia reserve" battalions, or alternatively third and fourth battalions of the militia units. Then the youths from the camps could be absorbed and kept in some organized plan of part-time training, and thus good material would not be wasted.

The new units could be officered and provided with n.c.o.'s from among scores of veterans in Toronto at present unable to get into the C.A.S.F., or even into militia units, because of the great surplus in this military district.

This surplus is due to the fact that many officers who left the militia in years past now have little opportunity to serve because the Ottawa authorities, anxious to avoid the mad scramble for appointments of the last war, have unfortunately gone to the other extreme and made the militia units the one and only channel to the C.A.S.F.

Young subalterns in the militia naturally oppose, within their rights the appointment of new officers above them in seniority. Consequently, the ex-officers are left out in the "cold."

Organization of new units, or formation of third and fourth battalions is the logical answer, the officer pointed out. But there should be this difference—every officer and other rank should be required to serve overseas, or he would not be taken on strength.

No. 1 Manning Depot, largest station of its kind in Canada, is a busy hive of industry these days. The number of the "awkward squads" in Air Force blue, drilling in front of the Coliseum and marching up and down the C.N.E. roadways helps to make up for the lack of men in khaki, compared to last year at this time, billeted at Exhibition Camp.

A Manning Depot in the Air Force has somewhat the same function as a district depot in the army. New recruits from the district it serves usually enter the depot when they first enlist. It outfits them with uniform and equipment, gives them elementary drill, regardless of what branch of the force they intend to enter, and holds them in readiness until vacancies occur at training schools or reinforcements are required at air stations of the area.

Calls to report to a physician for medical examination, preparatory to entering military training centres for thirty days ,are expected to go out to the second lot of young men in Toronto Division B on November 1, according to the National War Services Board here.

The second lot of recruits is due to report at camp on November 22. This is a Friday and the youths will not be expected to get down to the camp routine until the following Monday, the week-end being used to allow the new arrivals to become familiar with their temporary home and regulations.

BAILIEBORO

Mrs. J. Johnston Guest Of Honor

BAILIEBORO, Oct. 24—(ENS).—About twenty ladies of the village gathered at the home of Mrs.. Dawson Rutherford recently, to do honor to one of their members, Mrs. James Johnston, who is moving with her family to Peterborough, to reside in future.

Mrs. T. Skitch read an appropriate address, with Mrs. Rutherford and Mrs. Fletcher presenting Mrs. Johnston with a walnut end table, electric lamp and iron.

Mrs. Johnston completely taken by surprise, received the lovely gifts and very feelingly replied; thanking all for their kindness to her, and extending a sincere wish that all would visit her. Community singing followed in charge of Mrs. Meredith Perrin. The committee served a delightful lunch of ice cream and cake, after which all formed a circle singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Well wishes and good byes were then extended to Mrs. Johnston before leaving for home. She will be greatly missed in the community for her many deeds of kindness.

Among those from a distance were Mrs. Stanley, and Mrs. Rolly Johnston of Peterborough.

The Misses Ella Graham of Toronto and Edith Preston of Peterborough were week-end guests of Mrs. Dawson Rutherford.

Find Histamine Nips Dizziness

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—(AP).—A new treatment and cure for Meniere's disease, a form of dizziness which affected many historical persons, was reported to the American College of Surgeons.

The dizziness is peculiar and not uncommon. Objects appear to whirl in huge jerks. One or both ears have a roaring, pounding noise. An ear may hurt.

Dr. Walter E. Dandy of Johns Hopkins University said it was the ear pain which Martin Luther, the famous theologian, in one such attack, attributed to the devil, at whom he hurled an ink well.

The new treatment is injection of histamine, a depressor drug extracted from ergot. Its effect was discovered by accident about a year ago at the Mayo Clinic, when a woman was given histamine for a headache.

This patient also had Meniere's disease. After the histamine it was noticed that the dizzy spells had stopped. Since then 49 persons have been treated with histamine at the clinic.

Although not all have fully recovered, the immediate effects were amazing. Persons so dizzy they were unable to stand, got up in a few minutes, apparently cured.

Boston To Honor Walter Channing

BOSTON, Oct. 24—(AP).—Alumni of one of the oldest maternity hospitals in the United States plan the first memorial to a 19th century doctor who pioneered in the operative use of anesthesia to relieve the pain of childbirth.

On October 24, the 108th Anniversary of the Boston Lying In Hospital, obstetricians from many parts of the country will meet there to inaugurate "Walter Channing Day" as a tribute to the hospital's founder, who is described in the institutions records as "the earliest American advocate of anesthesia in labor."

These records declare that Channing performed the first operative delivery with the use of anesthesia in the United States on May 5, 1847, and that the same year the technique was used at Boston Lying In Hospital for the first time in an American Maternity Hospital.

Dr. Frederick C. Irving, present-day chief obstetrician at the hospital, said the Memorial Day would note these contributions of the institution to the advance of obstetrical science:

Channing's description of the pernicious-like anemia of pregnancy and his suggestion of the possibility of the transfusion of blood for its relief—a procedure now in common practice.

First description of hemorrhagic disease of the newborn.

First use in a maternity hospital of a nursery for premature infants.

The development of the first water-heated bassinet in America by Dr. Rufus Kingman, of Providence, a house officer in 1880; and contributions to the prevention of childbed fever, ranging from early use of antiseptics to a recently-developed technique of two staff members employing Sulfanilamide in combination with the transfused blood of persons immune to the streptococcus germ which causes the fever.

Horn Saves Home

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 24—(AP). Allan Robinson's automobile horn started a fire, but saved his house from burning. Wires to the horn short-circuited, started the fire and set the horn to blowing. The noise wakened Robinson's maid, who found the basement garage ablaze. The fire department put it out.

Ralston Watches Cornwall Recruits Train

CORNWALL, Ont., Oct. 24 (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston inspected the military training centre here Tuesday and saw 750 young recruits go through their training routine. He also watched the progress through Cornwall of troops returning to Petawawa Camp after week-end military manoeuvres in the Montreal district.

Although only on their second week of their 30-day training period, the young recruits impressed the minister with their smartness in drill. On his arrival the square in front of the newly erected training centre buildings was filled with men in battle dress.

The three companies into which the centre is organized were busy at their morning drill and physical training. One company was doing physical training, another bayonet drill and the third rifle drill.

There was no pause for formal salutes or march past. Col. Ralston wanted to see the men at their work and walked about the field watching them but not interrupting. He dropped in on a lecture on gas-protection and listened to a youthful sergeant telling 50 men about gas alarms and what to do when they heard them.

The minister was accompanied by Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, chief of the general staff; Brig. Logie Armstrong, officer commanding military district No. 3 (Kingston) and Col. A. A. Magee, executive assistant to the minister.

Lt.-Col. Rodolph Larose, officer commanding the training centre, explained the various stages of training and afterwards led the personnel of the centre on a march into downtown Cornwall.

Beck Arrested

Bucharest, Oct. 24 (AP)

GERMAN official circles here charged today that Josef Beck, former Polish foreign minister, had been arrested by Iron Guardist police while attempting to flee Rumania with a British diplomatic passport issued by the British legation here.

Rumanian circles, while admitting Beck's imprisonment, categorically denied the rest of the story.

The British legation was silent. It was learned in British official circles, however, that Sir Reginald Hoare, British minister to Rumania, had a long interview last night with Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumanian chief of state.

Roads Of Future To Have Flowing Lines

QUEBEC, Oct. 24 — (CP). — paper envisaging the "highways of to-morrow" was read Tuesday by R. M. Smith, Ontario Deputy Minister of Highways, at the 25th annual convention of the Canadian Good Roads convention.

"The highways of to-morrow will be fitted into the landscape and will be constructed to flowing lines under proper engineering supervision," said Mr. Smith, addressing delegates at the first sessions of the three day meeting.

"Widths of right-of-way will not be meager but sufficient to allow for flat shallow ditches, and a space for roadside improvement. Subgrade waters will be taken care of by storm sewers and tiling. Roadside embellishment will be encouraged rather than criticized as needless expenditure."

Noting that more than 80 per cent of traffic accommodates itself on 20 per cent of road mileage, Mr. Smith discussed the problem of how the 20 per cent of mileage should be divided.

In Ontario, he said, two per cent would be super-highways crossing the province from east to west and from north to south. These would be of the divided type, suitable for four lanes of traffic, and would bypass community centres, although having access to them.

Another two per cent would be express highways of two or three lanes which would act as tributaries to the super-highways. They would be built to a considerably higher standard than local and service roads, permitting rapid movement over great distances and missing densely-settled areas. They would, however, have convenient exits and entrances to populated centres.

The remaining 16 per cent of highway, said Mr. Smith, would be local and service roads, joining towns and cities, providing market roads and developing suburban areas.

C.N.E. WINNER GIVES HER RECIPE FOR Rolls
MRS. W. NORRIS, BOLTON, ONT.

The first prize for the best plate of rolls (8 in assorted shapes) at the 1940 Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, went to Mrs. Wardlaw Norris, R.R. 3, Bolton, Ontario. And every woman will want to know how she made her rolls. Here's her advice and recipe:

"One secret of making good rolls or bread is to keep the temperature right while the dough is rising. Then to regulate the oven so they bake to an even golden colour. Another important point is to use Robin Hood Flour. I have used Robin Hood for four years and I find it is always of the same high quality. Robin Hood Flour makes the dough very elastic and easy to shape into fancy designs. It also makes the rolls very white and fine of texture. Tempting to look at and delicious to eat. Another great advantage of using Robin Hood Flour is that you are always delighted with all the baking you turn out."

PRIZEWINNING RECIPE USED BY MRS. NORRIS

1½ cups milk, scalded and cooled to 90° F.
1 tbsp. sugar
1 yeast cake broken into milk (Compressed or Quick yeast)
Make into sponge, and set away until risen to double its bulk.
Add ¼ cup granulated sugar
1 tbsp. salt
4 tbsps. shortening
1 egg white and ¼ cup luke warm water
Mix thoroughly and add to sponge
Work in enough Robin Hood Flour to handle easily; knead well
Let rise to double in bulk
Shape into buns and let rise until light
Bake in a moderate oven 350°

If you haven't been using Robin Hood Flour here's your chance to try it with this prize-winning recipe. You will realize right from the start that Robin Hood is away ahead of ordinary flours. Everything you bake will look nicer, taste better and your Robin Hood Flour will go farther too!

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Apples Are Basic Fruit For Long Winter Months

As I tucked the change into my purse after paying for a barrel of apples to be delivered by a farmer on the market a Boy Scout came up to me holding out an apple: "Buy an apple for Apple Day, lady?". I said: "Well I've just bought a barrel of them for a whole apple winter but I guess one more won't be noticed.

My selection of apples had been influenced by a story of a stingy man. His wife said she could endure his other economies but rebelled at always having to be picking over and using up the bad apples in their fruit cellar. They had eight trees on their property and she vows she never gets to use a sound apple all winter, because the rotting ones have to be used first, and those that aren't used up fast enough start the good ones going and her task is endless.

The stingy man's wife says Heaven for her will be the chance to pick out all the bruised and poor apples from a barrel, throw them in a big basket and chuck them in the garbage—and what's more forget 'em.

Well this year there are apples for everybody—for I know one apple grower who said needy families could have his windfalls if they would come and pick them up—and I know of other growers who have made this kind offer too.

Buy sound apples and if you can wrap each one separately in newspaper to avoid possibility of bruising for the bruised spots spoil first. They are best stored in bushel boxes and these in turn stacked one on top of the other, for if kept in barrels the great weight on the apples in the bottom of it tends to dint them and start a source of decay.

Our nation's great love of apple pie is one of the best breaks the apple growers ever had, but when apple are cooked you are not getting all their goodness, for cooking destroys many of their precious vitamins.

While recipes for cooking apples are to be included here, I would like to urge you to use some of our suggestions for making raw apples an integral part of your meals.

Suggestions For Using Raw Apples In Your Meals

1. Wash and core but do not pare red dessert apples and chop into ¼ or ½-inch cubes, put in dessert dishes and cover with rich milk or cream immediately. Serve as dessert with toasted buttered crackers and cheese.

2. Waldorf Salad: 2 parts chopped celery, 2 parts chopped dessert apple, 1 part walnuts or blanched almonds. Moisten with dressing made of 1 part boiled dressing, 1 part mayonnaise.

3. Apple Salad Cups and Jellied Salad—recipes for which follow.

Apple Salad Cups

Six medium-sized dessert apples, 1 cup cottage cheese, salad dressing, English walnut meats, 6 lettuce cups. Remove the cores of the apples being careful not to break through the bottom, dig out much of the meat of the apples, leaving a wall about ¼ to ¾-inch thick. Combine the apple removed with cottage cheese moistened with salad dressing — preferably mayonnaise. Stuff the apple with the filling. Serve on crisp lettuce cups; top with a dot of your favorite dressing and a whole walnut half or chopped walnuts.

Jellied Grape and Apple Salad

Two and one-half tablespoons gelatine, ½ cup cold water, 1 cup grape juice or apple juice, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 pint dry ginger ale, ¾ cup halved and seeded grapes, ¾ cup diced tart apples. Soak the gelatine in the cold water for 5 minutes and dissolve in the heated grape or apple juice. Add the sugar, stir until dissolved and allow to cool. Add the ginger ale, allow to partially thicken by standing until cool, and pour over the fruit which has been arranged in cold wet moulds. Chill and serve with whipped cream. It may be moulded in a ring mould.

Since I have so much apple material before me this apple lecture will have to extend over into next week, so instead of giving you "different" recipes I will make sure that the brides and struggling cooks know how to make the good old standbys: apple pie, apple sauce, etc.

High Standard Apple Pie

Pastry: Two cups pastry flour, 2-3 cup shortening best quality or 1-3 cup butter and 1-3 cup vegetable shortening, 1 teaspoon salt, about 4 tablespoons ice water. Sift the flour once, measure it, sift it again with the salt. Measure the shortening and work it into the flour either with two knives, your fingers or a pastry blender, until it resembles coarse meal. Then add the water a little at a time to one portion of the fat-and-flour mixture, toss that portion just enough to make it hold together, and then leave it alone. Add water to another portion and continue until the whole mixture has been watered and can just be lifted hanging together. Roll out a little more than half the dough on a lightly floured board and leave the remainder in the refrigerator until time to use it. Roll out the crust to fit a medium sized pie plate, and fit the crust to the pie plate. Put in refrigerator to chill. Now prepare the apples—Wealthies and Jonathans and Maiden's Blush being excellent; McIntosh, Grimes Golden and Wagener being good. Winter apples that are excellent are Northern Spy, Rome Beauty, Rhode Island Greening, Baldwin and Spitzenberg.

Pare, core and slice the apples at the last minute to prevent browning. Cut thinly and prepare about 1 quart to fill an 8-inch pie plate 1-inch deep. Tart apples require 1 cup sugar, many others require only ½ to ¾ cup—you must use your own judgment for this. When apples are new spicing seems superfluous; later on sprinkling of either cinnamon or nutmeg or mace are advisable.

Very lightly moisten edge of chilled lower crust which has been filled with apples and sugared, and roll out and fit on upper crust which should be rolled to fit as nearly as possible and slashed to allow steam to escape at centre. Press edges with fork tines or thumb and finger. Bake at 500 degrees Fahr. for 10 minutes, reducing heat to 350 to finish baking—test apples through slash in crust to see if they are done—requires 35 to 40 minutes to bake.

Marie's Apple Sauce

Peel, quarter and core enough apples to fill a flat casserole. Make a syrup by boiling 1 cup sugar and ¾ cup water together for 5 minutes. Pour over the apples and bake 45 minutes in an oven of 350 deg. Fahr. or until apples are tender. Sprinkle with ¼ cup extra sugar when done and the grated rind of 1 lemon while still hot, and put under broiler until sugar and edges of apples are faintly scorched. Good served hot or cold with cream.

Audrey's Apple Cottage Pudding

Two cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, ¼ cup butter, 2-3 to ¾ cup milk, ½ to 1 teaspoon vanilla, Northern Spy apples—about 5. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, mix in the butter which should be soft with the back of a wooden spoon into the sugar, then add the egg which should be beaten slightly and the milk, and sift in the flour mixture. Add vanilla. Pour half this mixture into buttered pudding dish which has a layer of half the apples on the bottom. Add remaining apples, cover with another layer of batter and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for about 30 minutes. We like this pudding because there is a high proportion of apples to the batter. So many cottage puddings have a very thick layer of batter and the apples seem to disappear at the bottom. Best served hot with cream or lemon syrup.

That's all for now—if you want various "different" apples ventures see this space again next week.

FASHIONS

The two favorite styles of the year, the jumper and the pinafore, combine to make the top favorite of all—this "jumpafore." It has a very new and different look about it that all you school and college girls who want to look individual ought to appreciate. The skirt is cut along fashionably slim lines, but front pleats give you plenty of room for action. The tailored blouse with its becoming little Peter Pan collar will pep up absolutely any skirt in your wardrobe, and may be made with either short or bishop sleeves. The pattern also includes an adorable version of the jumper with a flattering heart-shaped neckline.

Style No. 3486 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 2¼ yards of 39-inch material for long sleeved blouse; 3¼ yards for "jumpafore."

College Education Only For Those Who Are Serious. Unless Your Boy or Girl Plans to Use Advanced Knowledge, Parents Should Not Impoverish Themselves.

Dear Dorothy Dix—My daughter, 17 years of age, finished high school last session. She has recently decided to go to college and I suspect that it is not so much that she is anxious for the higher education as for the good times that she thinks she would have. If we send her to college, it will be a great hardship for her father and me to meet her expenses, and it will probably mean that we would lose our house by doing so. Our son finished college last year and we drained our purse to help him through. Daughter doesn't seem to have any ambitions about working after we make the big sacrifice for her. She is madly in love with a boy who is now 19. She is the only girl and we could give her a fairly good time, and it would make me very happy if she would stay at home and let me have a little of her companionship. What shall we do about it?

PUZZLED MOTHER

ANSWER—One of the most pitiful things in the world is the sacrifices that so many parents make to put boys and girls through college who are not college material.

All of us know dozens of fathers and mothers who deprive themselves of every comfort in life; who do without the food they require, the vacation they need, the medical attention that would prolong their lives in order to send John and Mary off to College, though John and Mary have gotten poor grades all through public school and have never shown the slightest intellectual yearnings.

Why do they do it? Goodness knows. Sometimes it is because the parents make a fetish of a college education and believe, in spite of all the evidence to the contrary, that a college degree is a magic talisman that never fails to make its possessor rich and famous.

Oftenest it is because Mary and John are determined to go to college and bedevil their parents into sending them, whether they can afford it or not. It isn't because they expect, or desire, to take up any particular branch of study at college. It is because the other boys and girls they run with are going, and because they have heard wild and giddy tales of campus life and the fun and frolic to be had there.

So they put the pressure on their poor old parents. They argue and plead and sulk and cry until finally father and mother give in, and they put a mortgage on the house and draw out the last cent that they have saved for their old age from the bank, and father takes on an extra job and mother doesn't even have a woman in to help with the laundry.

For Mary and John are going to college, and Mary has to have sport clothes and evening dresses and John has to belong to the fraternities and take out his sweetie.

And when the terrible price has been paid for Mary's and John's college course; when the mortgage on the house has been foreclosed, and work and worry and anxiety have broken father and mother and made them 10 years older, all of the money has been spent in vain, and worse than in vain, because neither one has learned anything that will help them to help themselves. And both have come home with exaggerated ideas of their own importance and with tastes that they have not the money to gratify.

I am not deprecating the value of a college education for a boy or girl who has a thirst for knowledge and the scholar's temperament. Nor is there any reason why the rich should not send their children to college in their adolescent period, when they are nuisances at home and something has to be done with them.

But poor people who must make terrific sacrifices to send their children to college should make sure that Mary and John are in the near-genius class before they impoverish themselves to do so. Otherwise they do more harm than good. And in this opinion I am backed up by the great majority of college presidents.

So, Puzzled Mother, I think you and your husband will be doing a very foolish thing if you invest the last cent you have in a college education for this daughter who obviously has no serious idea of study and only wants to have a good time.

If you send her to any school, it should be to a business college, where she can fit herself to earn her own living while she is waiting for the boy friend to make enough money to marry her.

Parents make the mistake of their lives when they spend everything they have on their children and are left dependent in their old age. Don't do it.

DON'T QUIT COLLEGE TO GET MARRIED.

Dear Dorothy Dix,—I am a young man of 20, about to enter my junior year in college, where I am studying law. During vacation I met and fell in love with a girl, and I am torn between continuing my education and her. Although she wishes me to continue my education, she wants to marry right away, which is impossible if I attend college. And, although she says she will wait for me, I realize that such an attractive girl will be won by another in three years' time; but if I leave school and marry her I will face unemployment. It seems as though I can't have both. Which would you advise? UNDECIDED.

ANSWER. — It depends upon how much your profession means to you. If you feel that the law is your vocation; if everything connected with the study of law interests and intrigues you; if all your thoughts and ambitions have been centered upon becoming a lawyer, then don't give it up for any girl, no matter how much you may think you are in love with her.

If you do, when the romance is faded and you settle down to married life and realize that you have thrown away your career for a pretty face, you will be miserable and you will blame her for your own weakness.

But if your profession really means nothing to you in particular, and if you are only studying law because your father wanted you to go into it, or because you had to choose something and you thought it might as well be law as the grocery business, why, then, it won't make any difference whether you give it up or not.

But at 20 you are too young to marry. And you couldn't marry anyhow; you have no way of supporting a wife unless you are one of the men who think they have as good a right to starve a woman as anybody else.

And don't worry for fear the girl won't wait for you. She will, if she loves you enough; and if she does not care for you sufficiently to wait for you for three years, she would be a poor bet as a wife.

Furthermore, you have this consolation — that the chances are that in three years you won't want her. You will have changed and, in all probability, fallen in love with some other girl, and be glad enough that some other man has gotten her.

For Friday, October 25

AN EXCITING and lively day, both in private and business affairs, is the augury based on the lunar and mutual transits. New and important projects are under high stimulus ofr initiative and constructive developments, but these may not be without setbacks, delays or disappointments as well as some financial problems.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the brink of a very lively and challenging year, with much in business as well as private life to test the capacity for control, prudence, calm judgment and restrained tactics.

A child born on this day should have much ability and force of character.

Stephens—Jeffs

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 24 (ENS).—The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Jeffs, George Street, was the scene of a pretty wedding at noon Wednesday, when their daughter, Annie Irene Jeffs, became the bride of Alexander Borden Stephens, youngest son of Mrs. Peter Stephens and the late Peter Stephens of Seymour East. Rev. G. N. Maxwell, pastor of St. John's United Church, officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of air force blue alpaca crepe and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Mrs. Frank Potts, matron of honor, was frocked in wine crepe and carried a colonial bouquet. Mr. Frank Potts attended the groom. For travelling the bride donned a black pin-stripe tailored suit. Following a motor trip to Montreal and Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Stephens will reside in Seymour East.

Guests from out-of-town included Mr. and Mrs. George Stephens, Bowmanville; Miss Anita Williams of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. H. Lockhart of Montreal.

Autumn Tea Held By Scout Group

Mrs. Percy Hooper of 562 Gilmour Street loaned her home Wednesday afternoon for a successful Autumn tea, held under the auspices of St. John's Scout Group Auxiliary. Mrs. Harry Kelsey, Auxiliary president, received with the hostess.

A glowing grate fire enhanced the charm of the tea room. The tea table was charmingly arranged with a cloth of cut-work and Cluny lace, bronze chrysanthemums, and lighted harmonizing tapers. Assisting in the tea room were Mrs. N. Patterson, Mrs. Wm. Brown, Mrs. Gynane, Mrs. Crocker, Mrs. M. Swanston, Mrs. G. Green, Mrs. J. Cridland, Mrs. McLeod. The table of novelties and home cooking was in charge of Mrs. G. Groombridge. Mrs. F. Ford was treasurer for the afternoon.

H. and S. Council Sponsors Training Classes For Leaders

A splendid representation of officers and executive members from all affiliated city and rural schools turned out Wednesday night for the special meeting of the Home and School Council, which took the form of Leadership Training Classes that commenced at 7.15 in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A.

Mrs. R. Parnell, president, opened the meeting with the Home and School Prayer, which was followed by the Creed in unison. The Aims and Objects of the Home and School Association were read by the immediate past president of the Council, Mrs. G. A. Spicer.

Officers were divided into various groups for instruction, as follows: president and vice-president groups, conducted by Mrs. G. A. Spicer, with Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mrs. R. Parnell assisting; the secretary and treasurer groups were in charge of Mrs. Max Swanston, assisted by Mrs. L. B. Cunningham and Mrs. J. H. Quirt; the health convener group was taken by Mrs. L. M. Richardson; religious and home education was under the leadership of Mrs. J. H. Penhall, and program and music conveners were in charge of Mrs. C. H. Crowe.

After a session of over an hour, the president called the meeting to order, and findings of the various groups were brought forward. A Model Home and School meeting, the highlight of the evening, was listened to with keen interest by both old and new officers. Mrs. V. R. Henry acted as president for the meetings, Mrs. R. A. Vass as secretary, Mrs. D. Miller as treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Craig as corresponding secretary. Parts of the different conveners were taken by Mrs. L. M. Richardson, Mrs. C. H. Crowe, Mrs. J. H. Penhall, Mrs. E. Wellwood. Others taking part in the making of a motion, the amendment, etc., were Mrs. A. W. Nelson, Mrs. E. Chambers, Mrs. L. B. Cunningham, Mrs. J. H. Quirt, Mrs. G. Lemming, Mrs. S. Harrison. The imaginary speaker was introduced by Mrs. T. L. Ashton. A vote of thanks by Mrs. L. H. Ingram was seconded by Mrs. W. Robertson.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, whose name has been for years associated with Home and School work, and who is at present on the sub-executive committee of the Ontario Federation, spoke briefly and commended the president on the clever method used to emphasize the different phases of a proper meeting.

Mrs. E. Wand, a past president of the Home and School Council, brought greetings to the meeting, and expressed the pleasure with which she attended any meeting concerned with Home and School work. The meeting closed with the National Anthem played by Mrs. G. A. Spicer.

Remembrance Tea Planned By 57th Chapter

Preparations are in progress for the annual remembrance tea to be held in the Armouries on Friday, November 8, by the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E. Mrs. L. Loomis has been appointed general convener, assisted by Mrs. C. H. Stuart, Mrs. Fred Brook, Mrs. D. Eldred, Mrs. V. Tully, Mrs. G. M. Stenton, and the home-made cooking tagle will be in charge of Mrs. U. E. Waterman, assisted by Mrs. P. Wallace, Mrs. C. M. Scott.

Mrs. R. E. Clarke presided for the October meeting, held Wednesday afternoon in the Officers' Mess of the Armouries, with a large attendance. Mrs. H. Devey, Mrs. C. M. Scott, Mrs. Roy Thompson were welcomed into the Chapter as new members.

A letter was read from Mrs. W. B. Horkins, national president, congratulating the Chapter on its achievements and untiring efforts in raising money toward the purchase of a Bolingbroke bomber valued at $100,000, which was presented to the Royal Canadian Air Force at Rockcliff Airport, Ottawa, on July 13 of this year.

The war convener reported that almost $300 had been spent for wool since November last. The wool convener's report was satisfying, and showed that members had been knitting continuously for soldiers, sailors and airmen. It was suggested that members gather up scrap metal of all descriptions in readiness for the Salvage Campaign, which opens next week.

Grateful acknowledgment was made of the work done by a group of ladies from Buckhorn, known as the Buckhorn War Workers, who never appear to tire in their efforts to help a worthy cause by knitting, sewing and raising money in many different ways.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, played by Mrs. C. B. Hughes. Light refreshments were served afterwards by Mrs. W. Hughes and her committee.

Large Bridge To Aid Air Raid Victims

A successful bridge was held in the Recreation Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Wednesday evening by the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E. Proceeds of the fifty tables played are to be used for the purchase of clothing to aid bombing victims in England. A number of tables were played in private homes. Guests were received by the Regent, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, the Vice-Regent, Mrs. B. Jackson, and Mrs. G. A. Borland.

Prizes for each table, daintily wrapped in patriotic colors, donated by Mr. Stanley Warne, matched attractive bridge tallies donated by Mrs. B. W. Harvey. Mrs. Arnold McWilliams was convener of tables. Two door prizes were donated by Mr. Harold Coleman and Mrs. G. Borland. The former was drawn for by Mrs. E. Clarke, and the winner was Mrs. H. C. Sherwood, and the latter prize, drawn by Mrs. E. V. Morphet, was won by Mrs. R. Lawless.

Mrs. W. Burrell and her committee were in charge of refreshments delightfully served. Mrs. W. A. Davern was treasurer for the affair.

Mrs. Robinson, Regent, thanked the ladies or their co-operation, and stated that, as tickets were not all in on the afghan, the draw would not be made until the November meeting.

Engagement Of Wide Interest

Widespread interest is attached to the announcement this week of the engagement of Margaret Isobel, youngest daughter of Venerable Archdeacon William Simpson, B.A., rector of the historic parish of Cavan, Ontario, and formerly of Calgary, Alberta, to Reverend John R. B. Vance, assistant at Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver, B.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. C. B. Vance, and chaplain of the D.C.O.R., located at present at Naniamo, British Columbia.

Miss Simpson was a student at St. Hilda's College, Calgary, and Rev. Mr. Vance attended the University of Columbia, and later graduated from Wycliffe College, Toronto. While attending the western university, Mr. Vance was affiliated with the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity. The wedding will take place at Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver, B.C., on Wednesday, November 6, and will probably be of a military character, as the regiment of which the groom-to-be is chaplain has signified its intention of coming from Naniamo, probably in full strength, for the occasion.

The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Mr. French, of Victoria, B.C., an intimate and life-long friend of the Simpson family.

Lose 10 Pounds in 5 Weeks

How unwieldy and awkward Mrs. Stout feels as she climbs into the bus. She can't understand why she's so heavy when she's such a "small eater."

Mrs. Stout would be amazed to learn that on a low-calory diet she could eat more—and still lose two pounds a week!

For, though Mrs. Stout doesn't eat much, she gains because she chooses only high-calory foods. Chicken pie (400 calories) is one of her pets. Devil's food (400) is a favorite dessert.

Her bulges wouldn't have piled up if she'd favored instead a chicken sandwich (200 calories), angel cake (100 calories).

Only one thing to do—take fewer calories for a while! And, with a guiding calory chart, a satisfying reducing diet may easily be adapted to family meals. At dinner, take only half a cup of escalloped potatoes (160 calories a cup), but eat freely of spinach (40 a cup), canned tomatoes (50 a cup).

Get your slim, young figure back again! Our 32-page booklet has 42 low-calory menus, recipes for delicious low-calory desserts. Includes calory chart, 3-day liquid diet to start reducing, also menus for gaining.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of THE NEW WAY TO A YOUTHFUL FIGURE to The Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T SEEK THE BREAK

AN EVEN three-three division of the six outstanding cards of a suit occurs less than half of the time under ordinary circumstances. It is still less likely when one of the opponents has been bidding some other suit or suits. Then that player probably is short in the unbid suit, his partner having length in it. That is true even when it is clear that a not-vulnerable player has been bidding his suit lengths merely to becloud the issue or to find a sacrific fit against your powerful cards.

(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	2 ♥	3 ♣	3 NT
Pass	4 ♦	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dbl	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♦	Pass	6 NT

South failed to make his contract because of his playing for an even break in diamonds. After West led the spade 10, he counted up his tricks. Three in spades, two in hearts and seven in the minors would give him enough, as he figured. He was prepared to stand the loss of a trick in clubs if he could bring in four tricks in diamonds.

So South took the opening spade in dummy, then played the clubs cleverly. He read West's failure to lead the suit first bid by his psychic partner, clubs, as indicating West might have the K and would not wish to underlead it. So the declarer led the club 9 and played the 8 on it. Sure enough, West took this with the K and then led a second spade, the 6, to the K.

South thereupon took three club tricks and started on diamonds. The K was cashed, then the 8 led to the A. When East failed to follow suit, there was nothing more the declarer could do but rake in one more spade, two hearts and one more diamond. He had to give up a diamond at the end. Better figuring would have counted West for the diamond J and therefore would have dictated use of the A first, then the K. This would have marked the finesse of the 10, with the lead in the right hand to lead for it. By doing that, South would have made his contract.

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

What is the best bidding of this hand, to get North and South into the most profitable contract?

Argirocastro Key City To Sea, Totters

Italians Abandoning Central Mountains In General Retreat

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 25—(AP). Despatches from the front said today that Greek advance units had entered the outskirts of Argirocastro, main Italian military base in Southern Albania, and that the town was expected to fall before evening.

Heavy fighting also was reported south-west of Argirocastro where the Greeks were threatening to push to the Adriatic coast, isolating a large number of Italians.

These thrusts were part of a counter-drive against the thwarted Italian invasion which was described by military sources as a "full-fledged offensive" intended to wrest Albania from Italian control and possibly keyed to a plan for Greek-British seizure of Italy's strategic Dodecanese Islands.

In the central sector, the Italians were reported to have abandoned their fortified positions on Mount Ostrovitza. Another Italian retreat continued in the Pogradetz area, north of the surrendered town of Koritza, where even Greek cavalry was unable to engage the main body of the fleeing Italians.

Greek sources said that casualties of both armies have been comparatively small and attributed this to failure of the Italians to offer stubborn resistance to Greek attacks.

A neutral military source estimated that the Greeks have taken 6,000 prisoners. About 1,000 arrived in Athens to-day.

Accompanying the land drive, the Greek air force bombed the Albanian towns of Berati, Elbasani, and Tepelini, while Italian planes also were reported in action after several days of quiet.

A Hun Scramble

Berlin, Nov. 25 (AP)

ABOUT 100 Germans beat the food rationing system today when a truck spilled 200 apples on Berlin's main street. Hundreds of pedestrians ran into the street and scrambled for the fruit.

Some got three or four apples. Some got one or two. An Associated Press correspondent was among 50 who "also ran" and got none.

Not This Session?

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)

SENATOR Alben W. Barkley (Dem - Kentucky) expressed the opinion after a conference with President Roosevelt today that the question of British credits would not be taken up at the current session of the United States Congress.

Other sources said that possible repeal of the Johnson Act, prohibiting further credits to defaulting nations, was discussed at the hour and one-half conference also attended by Speaker Sam Rayburn (Dem-Texas).

Barkley said that the conference was concerned chiefly with "projecting on the future" and that "the whole program" for the new congress convening Jan. 3 was gone over in a general way.

3 U.S. Warships Scare 12 Axis Freighters

TAMPICO, MEXICO, Nov. 25. — (AP).— Three United States' destroyers of the neutrality patrol were seen before dawn to-day two miles offshore from Tampico harbor, and 12 German and Italian merchantmen which earlier made preparations as if to depart remained at anchor.

The ships — three German and nine Italian vessels which have been in Tampico harbor since early in the war — took aboard fuel loads and got up steam shortly after midnight.

Before dawn, however, tugs which had been standing by steamed away, and heavy smoke ceased to pour from the stacks of the ships.

The ships still had all lights burning and despite poor visibility across the harbor the running lights of the neutrality patrol destroyers could be seen offshore in the gulf.

No warships of other powers had been seen in the vicinity.

At the office of the port captain it was said the German and Italian merchantmen had clearance papers but no information could be given on when they might depart.

At the German and Italian consulates in Mexico city staff members were at work at 2 a.m., apparently in touch with Tampico.

Both consulates said they knew preparations had been made aboard the ships but had no information when they might leave port.

The 12 In Port

The German ships are the Orinoco, the Idarwald and the Rhein. The Italian boats are the Lucifero, Stelvio, Genovano, Fede, Atlas, Americano, Vigor, Toscani and Manonne.

Canucks Hot For Trip Over Berlin

Will Be Posted Shortly For Active Service With R.A.F.

LONDON, Nov. 25—(CP Cable)—Eager to be posted to bomber stations so they "can take a business trip to Berlin," the first contingent of Canadian graduates of the Empire Training Scheme arrived in London today.

The smartly-uniformed air observers with the Canada tab on their blue coats were not adverse to accepting a week's leave, which they hope to get shortly, but made it known that they have come to England to fight.

"It's great to be here at last," said Sergt. Herb Easton of Winnipeg. "We're here on business and the sooner they let us visit Berlin the better we'll like it."

The small group of Canada-trained fliers—all have the rank of sergeant or pilot officer—may have their wish fulfilled soon. The Air Ministry announced they would be posted shortly for active service in the Royal Air Force.

The Canadians, who arrived at a west coast port over the week-end, are the vanguard of the Empire Scheme graduates. From now on pilots, observers and air gunners will be arriving in the United Kingdom at frequent intervals in ever-increasing numbers.

Rough Crossing

Sgt. Jack Smith of Toronto said he understood the Germans claimed they had sunk them en route, and that they had been taken prisoners.

"Well, you can say we're safe and you can say the same thing after the first flight to Berlin," Smith added.

The party was in charge of Pilot Officer John Gellner, a Czechoslovakian who went to Canada after the outbreak of war and received an air training commission there.

Pilot Officer R. W. Alexander of London, Ont., was anxious to see England and London, and other boys wanted to know where they could find Canadian Air Force and Army units so they can deliver messages from home.

As members of the R.A.F. the Canadians will receive R.A.F. pay while in England but the Canadian Government makes up the difference between it and R.C.A.F. pay and credits it to their accounts in Canada.

De Gaulle Returns

London, Nov. 25 (CP)

GEN. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French forces was disclosed today to have returned to London after a journey to equatorial Africa to rally France's African possessions to his standard.

On his return he conferred with Prime Minister Churchill for 45 minutes. Presumably he reported on conditions in the French African colonies.

New Cargo Boat Torpedoed Off Irish Coast

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—(AP). — Mackay Radio picked up a message today reporting a submarine attack upon the British steamship Temple Inn off the northern coast of Ireland.

Another message, from the Swedish steamship Anten, which reported Saturday that she was being torpedoed, advised that she was still afloat but was breaking up amidships.

The Anten was reported about 200 miles off the northwest coast of Ireland. Thirteen men still were aboard with only one life raft remaining. The message said the ship was listing badly.

Slovaks Sign As Last Axis Ally Now

Swerve From Bulgaria Comes As Surprise; Greeks Get Warning

BERLIN, Nov. 25 (AP)—Informed sources made the surprising assertion today that the Hungarian, Rumanian and Slovak signatures to the three-power pact ended the present series of acquisitions to the Axis.

They said nothing was known as yet about Bulgarian leaders coming to Berlin. Bulgaria previously had been viewed as most likely to become the seventh member of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance.

This backing down came a short time after Germany sounded her first warning to Greece since the Italian invasion in a statement in the semi-official Deutsche Diplomatisch - Politische Korrespondenz, calling Greek Premier John Metaxas "a tool of the British policy of spreading war."

This statement, the nearest yet to any German suggestion that Greece is fighting not only against Italy but against German interest in the Balkans, followed by only a few Getting Careless?

London, Nov. 25 (CP)

TRANSPORT MINISTER J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon said today that British motorists are doing some "very bad driving" when the first nightly air raid alert sounds and warned them to be more careful.

"Something is very wrong," he said in a message to drivers, since accidents increased while the number of vehicles on the road decreased.

The number of motor vehicle fatalities in Britain in October was 1,012, compared to 920 in October, 1939, but the number resulting from the blackout fell from 565 to 501.

Duce Smuggles His Fleet To Safer Hole

LONDON, Nov. 25—(CP).—British naval sources said today the Royal Navy's bombing of the Italian fleet in the harbor of Taranto had forced the Italian Navy to withdraw the major portion of its fleet from the badly damaged port to an undisclosed place of greater safety.

The Italian fleet movement was disclosed by photographs released for publication today. They were taken by British scouting planes making daylight flights as low as 6,000 feet above the fortified port.

Naval sources said the total strength in the whole of Taranto harbor, at the inside of the heel of the Italian boot, at the time of the first attack November 11 was six battleships, 10 cruisers, 27 destroyers and a large number of submarines.

After the attack the Italians withdrew all ships except three battleships, all damaged, eight cruisers and nine destroyers.

The four photographs made public today were taken on a second scouting flight, Nov. 14, three days after the attack, and after a preliminary reconnaissance flight.

What The Cameras Show.

One photograph, according to British naval experts, shows a battleship of the Littorio class — probably the 35,000-ton Littorio Veneto, badly down by the bows in the middle of outer Taranto harbor. Salvage ships and tugs are shown alongside and evidences of oil appear on the water, they said.

The second photograph shows a 23,622-ton battleship of the Cavour class beached on the east shore of the outer harbor. The picture shows the ship with heavy list to starboard and the whole length of its starboard side submerged as well as its stern, aft of the rear gun turrets.

There were no signs of activity about her.

RAF Bombers Thunder Ruin On All Hun Channel Ports As Axis Rallies Transports

West England Town Reported Bristol Is Bombed For Hours

LONDON, Nov. 25 (CP)—A western town bore the brunt of last night's German air attack, with bombers flying singly arriving one after another "almost continuously" for several hours, it was announced today.

(The Germans claim that this town was Bristol.)

The first of the invaders dropped "scores of incendiaries," causing fires which served as guides for succeeding planes with high explosives.

"Large numbers" of parachute flares also were dropped. Fires illuminated the entire town and two of its largest stores were set ablaze.

An intensive anti-aircraft barrage throughout the concentrated attack caused shell fragments to rain down upon houses in many parts of the town as the bombs were falling.

German Move Near

LONDON, Nov. 25 (CP)—Greece appeared today to be well-launched on a campaign to liberate Albania from Italian tyrannical rule, but a suggestion came from Berlin that Greek and British forces might soon have to meet German assistance to the inept Italians.

There appeared little reason to doubt any longer the ability of the Greek ground forces and the Greek and British Royal Air Forces to kick the Italians out of Albania, but a stiffer battle presumably would arise if Germany came to Italy's assistance.

Germany pulled little Slovakia, remnant of Czechoslovakia, into the so-called Axis over the week-end but Bulgaria apparently was balking. Nazi officials admitted there would be no more signings for the present.

Bulgaria's forced entry into the alliance for the "new order" had been expected ever since Greece started giving Italy a thrashing, for Bulgaria is the best highway German troops could use to help their hard-pressed Italian friends.

Other developments among the still remaining Balkans were less clear. Yugoslavia unofficially warned Bulgarian revisionists that they would be well-advised not to seek any Yugoslav territory, while Turkey appeared to be virtually on a war footing, though without any indication that she would fight unless provoked.

Troopships Blasted Heavy Blows Hit Berlin, Turin

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 25 (CP Cable)—The Royal Air Force pounded Hitler's French invasion ports over the week-end in the bitterest bombardment of the war while the conviction grew in official circles that the Germans may make another attempt to land an expeditionary force in this country.

Tons of bombs were rained on Boulogne, Calais, Brest and Lorient last night where it was known the Germans had recently gathered naval vessels and troop-carrying ships. It was group-bombing—the most devastating form of aerial attack—and lasted for hours. The rumble of the bomb explosions could be heard on the Kent coast across the 22-mile width of the English Channel.

A report circulating this morning that the Germans are planning to invade Eire and seize naval bases there is dismissed in official circles as "mere conjecture."

Ever since mid-September, when Hitler's invasion plans were shattered by R.A.F. fighters, a constant watch has been kept by coastal command planes on German-occupied French ports.

It is understood that these reconnaissance flights disclosed a steady trickle of German shipping concentration in French channel ports. Apparently the high command held off the bombers until enough shipping was grouped together to guarantee success of the raids.

Berlin, Hamburg, Turin Hit

The most important German port, Hamburg, also was attacked by the R.A.F. during the night, with docks and oil refineries the chief objectives.

The raids topped off widespread week-end bombing forays which included blows at the heart of Berlin and at Italian arsenals and motor plants at Turin.

London had one of its quietest week-ends since the air siege began

States Only 1 Plant Balked On Trainees

OTTAWA, Nov. 25—(CP)—War Services Minister Gardiner told a press conference today that Fleet Aircraft, Limited, of Fort Erie, Ont., was the only industry which complained about its employees being called for compulsory military training.

He revealed that the president of that company, W. J. Sanderson, was the man referred to in the House of Commons last week when Mr. Gardiner said that one factory manager had objected to employees being called for training.

(Speaking in the House of Commons last Friday, Mr. Gardiner said the refusal of one factory to release men for training and correspondence on the same topic with others, provided the basis for agers in his broadcast address of criticism of certain plant man-November 17.

(He told the House he was "prepared to back that up."

(Mr. Gardiner's explanation to the House came after Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con., Toronto - Parkdale) accused the minister of threatening industry, saying in effect "do what I tell you or else," as he addressed "patriotic industrialists."

(In his address in the broadcast series of talks, "Let's face the facts," Mr. Gardiner said at one point: "Factory managers who contend they cannot produce to capacity without interfering with the training of men may have to be told by someone, just as they are being told in Britain, that they as factory managers are not good enough for wartime.")

The minister told newspapermen today that in common with other industries Fleet Aircraft was asked to submit a plan by which those of its employees eligible for training could be called without interfering with production.

The company did not submit a plan but sent a letter stating that the danger of retarding production of aircraft by calling up men was great.

Mr. Gardiner said the company informed the Toronto district war services board under the chairmanship of Mr. Justice J. G. Gilliander it would follow a policy given it by Ottawa authorities.

The board then referred the matter to the Department of National War Services which asked for a report. The report indicated 23 men from the plant had been called for the training period starting Oct. 9. On Oct. 6 the company asked for postponement for all these men and it was granted Oct. 8.

For the second training period, starting Nov. 22, 26 Fleet employees

St. Leonard's Ruined

London, Nov. 25 (CP)

ST. LEONARD'S CHURCH, one of London's oldest and a favorite place of worship of Dr. Samuel Johnson, has been virtually destroyed in recent air raids.

The government permitted publication today of the fact that a bomb fell in the churchyard and demolished the 17th century part of the structure, although some parts of the 14th century building still stand.

Canada Producing the Goods

War Material Output Now Tops 3rd of Total Asked by July '41

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—(CP)—Production of high explosives and "propellants" in Canada now exceeds by one-third of the full output scheduled to be available by the middle of 1941, the department of munitions and supply announced today.

"The manufacture of explosives and chemicals for war purposes has entailed the construction in Canada of 15 plants, several of which are comparable in magnitude to anything of a similar nature in the Empire today," a department statement said.

"Rapid progress has been made on this program, and more than 10,000 men are employed in construction.

"Two new plants are in production. One devoted to the manufacture of trinitrotoluol (TNT), already is attaining its capacity output of this important high explosive. Sufficient rifle cordite is being made to meet present needs, and production of canon cordite, the propellant explosive for shells, will be started in January. The second plant, 'somewhere in Quebec,' began full operation last week. It will manufacture hexchlorethane, a chemical for making smoke screens.

"The present chemical and explosives program will provide all the necessary materials to fill all shells, bombs and mines while will be made in Canada, and it will also permit the export or large quantites of explosives and chemicals overseas, or to the United States, for shell filling purposes there. All projects should be complete and in production by next July."

Administration and supervision of 14 explosive, chemical and other similar projects are handled by Allied War Supplies Corporation, a government-owned and controlled company. Total investment in the projects is about $80,000,000; major part of which has been financed by Great Britain.

In another statement, Munitions Minister Howe said deliveries of single-engine training planes for

936 Extra Trainees Answer

Rejections Leave 28,250 – Fighters Return From UK To Teach

OTTAWA, Nov. 25 (CP) — The turnout for the second military training period under the National Resources Mobilization Act exceeded the objective by 936 men, War Services Minister Gardiner announced today.

He told a press conference attended by 11 newspaper reporters that 30,536 men aged 21, 22 and 23, reported at training centres on Nov. 22 against an objective of 29,600.

The capacity of the 39 training centres was 29,750. Rejections on medical grounds likely would reduce the number who would remain for training to something like 28,250, well within the capacity of the centres, Mr. Gardiner said.

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Nov. 25 (CP)—Brought from Britain to play new parts in the war, hundreds of men of the Canadian and British fighting services dispersed through the Dominion today to take up their new jobs.

Some of those returning were C.A.S.F. officers who will help reshape Canada's army at home in modern warfare, their teachings based on close to a year's experience in the theatre of war.

Hundreds of British tars who will man overage destroyers obtained from the United States arrived on the ship. The destroyers were waiting for them in this port.

A number of R.C.A.F. pilots were aboard including FO. Lawrence Jones of Saskatoon and FO. John Kerwin of Toronto.

Jones was decorated for saving a big Sunderland boat during a Nazi air raid at Andalsnes by starting it up and zig-zagging it about a Fjord. Then he took it up and shot down a Messerschmitt.

Kerwin shot down three German planes before he was wounded September 1.

American pilots who have been ferrying bombers to Britain made up another group on the vessel. With them, too, was group commander Charles Sweeney, veteran U.S. soldier who organized the all-American squadron of the R.A.F.

Inferior Italian Planes Pure Loss Says Wood

GLASGOW, Nov. 25—(CP).—Describing this as the most costly war the world ever has known, Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said today that Britain's average daily war expenditures had risen from £5,300,000 ($23,585,000) for the first year to £9,100,000 ($40,495,000) for the first 77 days of the second year.

Sir Kingsley, speaking at the opening of war weapons week in Glasgow, said the rise in expenditures was a cause for gratifications "provided always that the increase means output and not merely senseless increases in prices or wages or wasteful use of resources."

Raider Shells Britisher Off W. Indies

Freighter Silent Following Call On Sunday

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP).— A phantom sea raider shelled the British steamship Port Hobart off the West Indies Sunday, invading a cross-road of Great Britain's extended sea lanes.

The attack accompanied an intensification of the submarine siege of Britain by the Axis powers off Ireland.

The assault on the Port Hobart, a vessell usually in the England-Australian trade via the Panama Canal, again brought the sea war to the outskirts of the so-called neutrality zone set up by the Pan-American republics.

Plowing through waters where Britain's sea-borne commerce from South America converges with vessels from the Canal, the 9,430-ton freighter was 500 miles northeast of Puerto Rico—approximately 75 miles outside the neutrality belt—when it flashed word it had sighted a "suspicious vessel."

That was at 11:17 a.m. E.D.T. Twenty-five minutes later Mackay Radio picked up a second terse signal from the Port Hobart:

"Being shelled by raider."

Silence then hid the fate of the freighter and the identity of its attacker, which shipping circles said might be one of Germany's two pocket battleships, or one of a dozen fast new Nazi freighters thought by martime men to have been armed and sent forth to prey on shipping.

The attack marked the first appearance of a surface raider since Nov. 5, when a German warship of the Admiral Graf Spee class attacked a thirty-eight ship convoy midway between Newfoundland and Ireland.

were called and the Department received a letter Nov. 7 requesting postponement for them.

Mr. Sanderson appeared before the Board on Nov. 11, the minister said, and was told to select 20 men who could be spared for the November training period and to advise the Board of their names by Nov. 13.

On Nov. 14 a letter was received from the industrialist stating none could be spared, the minister said.

Call 7 of 20 in 1,000.

Mr. Gardiner said he had instructed the board to call the men they required from the fleet staff, and the board had called seven out of the 20 it was first proposed to call. The company, Mr. Gardiner said he was informed, employed about 240 men on the outbreak of war, had increased its staff to 1,000 and proposed to employ 4,000 more.

"So far as I know," said the minister, "this is the only firm which did not submit a plan and which has complained."

The minister reviewed reports on the postponement of training for men engaged in war industries by administrative divisions across the country.

In Division A, London, he said, eight industries had requested and received 56 postponements on the October call and on the November call 14 industries had requested and received 146 postponements. Plans had already been submitted and mutually agreed upon for postponements on calls between January and May, involving 364 men.

In Division B, Toronto, 60 industries requested 62 postponements for the October call and received 130. Reports for the November call were not complete. The Fleet Aircraft Company is in this division.

In Division C, Kingston, for the October call four companies submitted plans involving 55 men which were accepted.

In Division D, Port Arthur, for both the October and November calls two companies asked for and obtained seven postponements.

Few Complaints.

"The position I take," said Mr. Gardiner, "is that when we set up this plan of training there was considerable discussion of what provision should be made for industry. We finally entered into an agreement with industry, whereby each industry would submit a plan under which they considered their men could be called without interfering unduly with production.

'Satisfactory arrangements have been made in all districts and there are very few individuals compaining so far as we know," he said.

Mr. Gardiner said there was no conflict of view between himself and Defence Minister Ralston on the question of military training. Both he and Col. Ralston felt it would be necessary to give more intensive training to a greater number of men in the future if the war was to be won.

"Col. Ralston has indicated certain methods of obtaining men may be helpful to industry," said Mr. Gardiner. "So far as this Department is concerned when the Defence Department has determined on any training program and how many men they desire to train under the plan for a certain period of time it is our duty to provide the men."

The total cost of national registration last August would be under $1,000,000, the minister said. This was less than was expected and due to the large number of persons who gave their services voluntarily.

The third photograph shows another battleship of the Cavour class down by the bows and beached on the northeast shore of the outer harbor, with auxiliary craft alongside.

Naval sources saw in the picture evidence of "obvious attempts to make her seaworthy so she could be towed out for repairs."

The fourth photograph shows two cruisers, one of the Trento class and the other of the Bolzano class. The experts said there was evidence of a considerable quantity of oil on the water and "it is fair enough to say this probably indicates some damage to two ships, although no damage can be seen."

She is of 5,218 gross tons and registered in the port of London.

Meanwhile, a belligerent raider cruised in West Indian waters after bringing the 9,430-ton British freighter Port Hobart under shellfire.

The attack was made about 75 miles outside the Pan-American neutrality belt at a point where British ships from South America converge with those from the Panama Canal. Two brief messages from the victim yesterday, picked up here by Mackay Radio 25 minutes apart, said first that the Port Hobart had sighted 'a suspicious vessel' and then that she was 'being shelled by raider.'

The fate of the freighter and the identity of it attacker was then blanketed in silence.

the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will be completed about 15 months ahead of schedule. Production which was originally expected to take 25 months will be completed in 10 months, he said.

The department ordered 808 trainers from Fleet Aircraft Ltd. and DeHavilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. Contracts provided for delivery of 16 of these planes per month by each company, commencing April 10. So far 575 training machines had been turned over to the Air Services and, with production rates "tripling the output called for in original contracts," the manufacturers are expected to complete deliveries by the end of January.

"Both companies will then devote their entire facilities to the manufacture of other types of aircraft," Mr. Howe said.

A third statement said orders will be placed shortly for 40 more craft in the department's small boat construction program. The orders include refuelling scows, aircraft tenders, bomb-loading dinghies, flat scows, and derrick scows.

To date orders have been placed on behalf of the three fighting services for more than 350 small craft, and half of them have been completed and delivered, the statement said.

Train Kills Eight

Herve le Page, Joe Huard, George Huard, Willie Proulx, Rene Tremblay, Armand Tremblay, and Rolland Labbe.

All were residents of the neighboring parish of St. Odile.

A 14th occupant of the truck, Gerard le Page, escaped with only a few scratches when he was able to grab a hold on the locomotive and hang on until the train came to a stop.

Le Page said he heard a bell and saw the train about 25 or 30 feet away. In the next instant there was the crash as the heavy train bowled over the truck. Although the Halifax-bound train was slowing for the stop, it carried the wreckage right up to the station platform. Most of the dead and injured were spilled along the right-of-way.

Most of the survivors were on the rear of the truck, covered by a tarpaulin, and had little idea of what happened.

About 100 residents of this town, 400 miles northeast of Montreal, were waiting on the platform to greet the train, a nightly custom of citizens in most French-Canadian towns. They heard the crash and screams of the victims but, because of the storm, were unable to see the accident.

Another Way Out?

Turkey has indicated previously that she would get into the war if Bulgaria made a move against Greece It has not been made clear, however, whether Bulgarian permission for German troops to march against Greece would be considered a military act by Bulgaria, provided her own troops did not march with the Germans.

In the Italian fiasco itself there appeared increasing grounds for belief that the hand that held the dagger struck revenge in Albania. It is less than two years since Italy's troops bombarded Durazzo and went ashore to force King Zog, Queen Geraldine and their newly-born son to flee their country and there is not much doubt that the fierce Albanians have been biding their time.

The opportunity to demoralize the Italians by pestering them as much as possible while Greek ground forces and British planes have struck their blows almost certainly has been seized. When the whole story is known it probably will be disclosed that Albanian sabotage was a sizable factor in the Italian rout.

Disclosure that British non-combatant troops had been landed in Greece to help the Royal Air Force once again placed British ground troops on European soil, presumably for the first time since they were forced to withdraw in the heroic retreat to Dunkirk and the evacuation through that port.

The numbers and type of the troops were not mentioned, but it was said they were 'specialists,' presumably meaning they were technical men such as aircraft riggers, instrument repairmen, engine mechanics, engineers and the like.

There was no indication when British land combat troops would be landed in Greece but there was an indication that it could be just about when the British high command chose to send them.

The convoy which took the non-combatants to Greece reported it encountered neither Italian aircraft nor ships.

Out To Wrest Albania From Italy

Now 30 Miles Inland Reach Road To Capital Tirana

ATHENS, Nov. 25 (AP)—Greece's counter-drive against the thwarted Italian invasion was described by military sources today as a "full fledged offensive" intended to wrest Albania from Italian control and possibly keyed to a plan for joint Greek-British seizure of Italy's Dodecanese Islands.

Greek spokesmen said that without even reaching the Italians' second line of Albanian defences Greek troops over the week-end:—

1. Seized heights commanding strategic Argirocastro, the Italians' principal south Albanian base, 19 miles from the Greek frontier. (A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Belgrade said the Greeks had fought their way into the outskirts of Argirocastro.)

2. Captured Konispolis, in extreme southern Albania, in a supporting drive to push the Italians back toward Porto Edda (Santi Quaranta) on the Strait of Otranto opposite Italy.

3. Reached Frasheri, more than 15 miles inside Albania in the central, Pindus Mountain, sector.

4. Occupied Machopolis, 11 miles west of captured Koritza, and reached Pogradetz, guardian of the highway to the Albanian capital, Tirana, in the northern sector.

30 Miles Into Albania

The push to Pogradetz, 25 miles north of Koritza and slightly more than 30 miles inside Albania, was the Greeks' deepest penetration of the Italian defence to be reported.

A Greek spokesman said stiffening Italian resistance along some of the Fascist routes of retreat indicated a "tendency" to establish a second defence line but added the Greek pursuit had not been stopped.

The high command reported "our Air Force bombed three enemy columns in retreat with great success" and despatches from Ochrid, on the Tribute Is Paid Rev. J. J. O'Brien

"A gentlemanly priest and a priestly gentleman" was a phrase used by Rev. Father Mangan of the Redemptorist Order, Toronto, in a cordial tribute to Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart at the celebration of the thirty-first anniversary of its dedication on Sunday.

As a special preacher here ten years ago Father Mangan said he had been closely associated with Father O'Brien, whom he had known since his own boyhood, and had seen and felt the spirituality of his life and influence.

Bishop O'Connor and a number of the priests of the Diocese, including Rev. J. V. McAuley of Campbellford the first curate during the pastorate of Archbishop M. J. O'Brien before his elevation to the office of Bishop of Peterborough. Father Mangan recalled the work of the founders of the church, who, thirty-one years ago, had built a House of God and raised above it and its community the cross of Christ, symbol of the infinite love of Jesus for mankind. It was a reminder of His sacrifice on Calvary, and that sign in the sky, the cross which was identified with the death of Jesus, was a beacon that was needed more than ever to-day as a support and stay in a world through which stalk sin and so many "isms" that would drive God out of men's lives.

Ulster Premier Craigavon Dies

BELFAST Nov. 25.—(CP)—John Miller Andrews today was elevated from the post of deputy prime minister of Northern Ireland to be prime minister, succeeding Viscount Craigacon who died unexpectedly last night.

Mr. Andrews was summoned to an audience with the Duke of Abercorn, governor general of Northern Ireland, after the cabinet session broke up.

Mr. Andrews is 69 years old. He has been finance minister since 1937 and was Labor minister from 1921 to 1937. He has been a member of the Northern Ireland parliament since its conception in 1921.

Lord Craigavon, first and only prime minister since the Northern Ireland government was formed in 1921, was a bitter foe of proposals for union of Eire and Northern Ireland Ulster and his death occurred as various rumors circulated of a proposal for a United Ireland in return for leasing Irish naval bases to Britain.

Mr. Andrews also has opposed union proposals and although no suggestion has yet been made that Lord Craigavon's death would alter the situation some observers thought there might be a remote responsibility of a stronge move for unification.

Lord Craigavon, 69, worked to the end although he had not been in good health. His death was believed due to a heart attack.

Fowl Supper Is Held By Lakefield Church

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 25—(ENS). — Over three hundred and fifty attended the fowl supper provided by St. John's Anglican Church, Lakefield, on Friday evening in the Memorial Hall, marking the anniversary occasion of the church.

A special feature of the program was the showing of two films of the West Indies and the Scottish Hebrides by Mrs. MacTaggart.

Other items included a saxophone solo by Miss Mickey Foster, vocal numbers by Hubert Eadell, Lancashire readings by James Sharpe, tap dance and solo, Miss Lenore Gordon; cornet solo, Don Forde; vocal solo, Mrs. J. Spencely; violin solo, Mrs. E. Foster; and piano solo, Miss Frances Wells.

A vote of thanks was extended to all those who helped with the supper, to all friends and supporters, and Mrs. MacTaggart and all artists from Lakefield and Peterborough, by the rector, Rev. H. R. Howden.

Edinburgh, Scotland, now has 10 horse trucks collecting waste paper, at the 700 tons gathered each month more than pays the cost.

The Y.W.C.A. is still intact in Germany and its headquarters remain at Geneva.

Tea room hostesses were Miss Eileen Jefferies, Miss Grace Lundy, Miss Dorothy Gibbs, Miss Marjorie Benson. Treasurers were Miss Margaret Hooper and Miss Betsy English. Approximately one hundred guests attended.

Nine Women Are Members U. S. Congress

By SIGRID ARNE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Nine women will be members this winter of a Congress whose prime business will be to consider bills for armaments and bills to pay for the armaments.

But it looks like there will be no "women's bloc." And no tears. Eight of the women were in Congress last summer when the draft bill was passed. They voted five for the bill, three against, in business-like fashion.

The newcomer elected Nov. 5 in a dramatic coincidence is Jeanette Rankin, Montana Republican, who was in Congress on that fateful night in 1917 when the United States voted to enter the First Great War. Now Miss Rankin returns when war again afflicts the world.

She is recorded, on that night in 1917, as sobbing out her "No" vote. She protests she didn't sob, but she has spent the intervening 22 years working for peace.

Mothers Of Sons

There are three mothers of sons among the Congressional women. Two voted for the draft, and the third against it. Said Mrs. Clara McMillan, Democrat from South Carolina:

"I have five sons. If and when my sons are needed to defend the country I don't want them to go 'completely untrained' against experienced soldiers."

Said little dark-eyed Senator Hattie Caraway of Arkansas: "My two sons are in the army. This bill is conscription for training and men should be trained for their own good."

Said Mrs. Chester Bolton, wealthy Republican social leader from Cleveland, O.: "Two of my sons are conscripted under the National Guard mobilization. I see the draft bill more as dictatorship than democracy."

The other votes on the draft bill cut across party lines. The "yes" voters included Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Republican of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Margaret Smith, Republican of Maine.

The other "no" votes were Miss Jessie Sumner, Republican of Illinois, and Mrs. Caroline O'Day, Democrat of New York.

Only once before were there as many women in Congress. That was in the session of 1929-31.

EMILY BRANCH

BOATE'S CORNER, Nov. 25.—(ENS)—Rev. G. H. Johnson, devotional convener, was in charge of the regular meeting of the A.Y.P.A. on Friday evening, and gave one of the most interesting addresses of the year, choosing to speak on the progress of the war. There was a good attendance of members present and these thoroughly enjoyed to speaker's remarks.

During the business period, it was decided to hold the Christmas entertainment on December 20 and a committee to prepare a program was appointed.

Anna Olson Weds Lieut. S. McLeod

A naval ceremony of interest took place quietly at three o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Presbyterian church manse, Rev. Dr. A. T. M. Wilson witnessed the signing of the register. There were no attendants.

After a buffet luncheon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. M. Wilson, 164 Dalhousie street, Lieut. and Mrs. McLeod left on a wedding trip, and on their return will live for a short time in Kingston.

DOROTHY DIX

SCOLDING MOTHER CANNOT EXPECT FAMILY TO LOVE HER
It's Better to Have a Little Disorder and Friendly Word for All Than to Harp Constantly About Housework.

Dear Miss Dix—I have a friend who is a woman of many good qualities and who slaves to make her immediate family comfortable, but she makes their lives miserable by the cutting and sarcastic things that she continually says to them. I try to convince those about her that they should overlook her bitter tongue because she does so much for them, but they can only think of how unbearable she is to live with. It certainly makes one wonder if a slovenly, good-natured woman isn't preferable to a clean scold.

A FRIEND.

No doubt about that. If a woman had every virtue in the world if wouldn't offset her being a virago. Look about you and you will see the best-loved wives and the most-adored mothers are not always the most thrifty, or the most industrious, or the most economical ones. They are the ones who are sweet and amiable and tender and kind and easy to get along with.

Maybe Mrs. J. isn't a good manager and lets the bills get too big, but she never fails to show her husband appreciation of all he does for her, and she tells him how much she admires him and how wonderful she thinks he is, and she laughs off his faults instead of nagging him about them. And Mr. J. thinks that he has the grandest wife in the world.

Maybe little Johnny sometimes has holes in his stockings and his shirt is held together by a safety pin, but Mother always has time to play with him and listen to his stories about the big boy at school and to comfort him when he gets into trouble. And Johnny will go to his grave remembering how sweet Mother always was.

Pleasant Smile Is Best

And aren't the homes we like to go to best the houses where the mistress is jolly and easy-going and who always says to us things that make us purr inside with deight?

She tells us how pretty our new dress is, and she has heard that our little Mary is the smartest girl in school, and that our paper at the club was simply brilliant, and so on and on. And what do we care that there are cigarette ashes on the floor and the sofa needs re-covering and the china doesn't match on the dinner table?

Many a woman who works herself into nervous prostration keeping her house immaculate and is so irritable that she stabs continually at her family with her serpent's tongue, complains bitterly that she is not loved by her husband and children although she sacrifices herself for them, while some other woman is adored by her family, although she lies on the sofa and reads novels half the day and lets them get up and get their own breakfasts.

And nobody has the nerve to tell her that there isn't a family in the world who wouldn't exchange a lot of cleanliness and good meals for a little pleasantness at home. All the angels food isn't baked in the stove.

OFFICE ROMANCES SHEER TRAGEDIES

Dear Miss Dix—We know that every wife has to stand comparison with the Woman Down Town with whom her husband works every day, and that very often this is disastrous if the wife is slovenly and nagging and fault-finding, and the Woman Down Town is neat and tidy and understanding and appreciative.

But what about the married woman who works downtown for a boss who is kind and considerate; who praises her sincerely when praise is due and keeps silent rather than blame her for an unavoidable error, and who goes home at night to a husband who never speaks to her except to criticize her; who never appreciates anything she does or praises her for bearing a double burden, and who never does anything to make her happy? Does such a husband never think of how he rates when his wife compares him with the Man Down Town?

ANSWER—The entrance of women into the business world has precipitated one problem, that nobody foresaw, for it made so many dissatisfied husbands and wives still more dissatisfied with their mates when they contrasted them with the superior men and women with whom they were thrown in daily contact.

The man married to a hen-brained, peevish, fretful, demanding wife, who asked everything and gave nothing, compared her with the intelligent, courageous, helpful woman who made his interests her own and who worked side by side with him to help him realize his dreams of success.

Many a woman compared invidiously the petty slave driver to whom she was married to the broad-minded, wise, generous man for whom she worked. And it was only human that these men and women, starving for affection that they did not find at home, snatched at it as the starving snatch at a loaf of bread.

It is the custom to think of these office romances as sordid, but often than not they are sheer tragedy and not infrequently rise to the heights of heroism. For the man and woman know that they cannot take their happiness without breaking up their homes and orphaning their children and they go their lonely ways. Having glimpsed Paradise they shut the gate upon it.

Many wives have intelligence enough to realize that the circumstances of modern life bring them in competition with the Woman Down Town and meet it. It is a pity that more men don't realize that their working wives face the same temptation, and that they did not try to make marriage as attractive as their jobs to their wives.

I once heard a much loved and much admired woman say to her husband: "You are the only person who ever says an unkind thing to me." And I wondered that the husband did not know that he was writing his own ticket.

HOW NOT TO TREAT A DIAMOND RING

Dear Dorothy Dix—I gave my fiancee a very pretty diamond for her engagement ring, but she insists on having it reset with another diamond she has because she thinks it makes a bigger show. What about it? Is my ring just another stone collected, or what? Why should she want to desecrate my beautiful, holy diamond like that? Hell, I might want to use it again! If she broke our engagement, would she keep it if it was set with another stone? Is it proper to do an engagement ring that way?

P. S. M.

ANSWER—I am sure it is not good taste and it certainly isn't sentiment to treat an engagement ring that way. I would be a little leary of the Jane myself.

We Know It Is Hideous

Admittedly there is something repulsive in the business of bombing as it is done today, particularly because there must be so many non-combatants made to suffer. It could not well be otherwise because a bomb is dropped from a great height and it is dropped for the purpose of doing as much damage as possible.

There grows in Britain the feeling that there must be more bombing of Germany and of Italy, and the argument is one which is difficult to combat. This way:

Germany went into the bombing business in an indiscriminate way. It used that means to break Britain, to smash cities and people, and homes and hospitals and churches and everything else.

Germany for years has glorified war; it has taught its young men that it is the straight path to a greater existence; it has stewed them in the belief that the destiny of the German people depends on warfare. They have exalted the hideous thing until it has become a national fetish.

It is no use trying to argue with people obsessed with such an idea; it is a waste of time and a waste of good words. They would look upon it as a sign of weakness.

It is useless trying to convince the Germans that they are wrong, because they are certain they are right, and just as certain they have devised the machine which will prove their point to the world. They have seen smaller and greater nations crumple up under their bombing, and to that policy they are wedded, glued and welded, and from it they will not depart.

The only thing left is to show them that they are wrong, and the one way to do that is to bomb their belief out of them; smash them and their cities until they come to realize that bombing is plain hell which one nation should never visit upon another. Bomb them until their people cry out against the very thing to which they gave birth. Admittedly it is a hideous cure, but the plain question is — does the cure lie in any other direction?

The Importance Of Koritza

The Greeks took Koritza. How great a victory that may be we do not pretend to state, but it may have an importance far beyond its military value, and it may drive home to the Italian people what a stupid thing Mussolini has done in bringing them into a war for which they have no heart and from which they stand to gain nothing at all.

There can be no doubt as to the extent to which the Italian army has been defeated. It was a plain rout. Greeks were finally riding in tanks belonging to the Italians, and using them to pursue the former owners.

Mussolini's contribution had been to stand in Rome, well removed from the scene of action and possible danger, and bellow about breaking the back of Greece. He breathed out threats while his troops were taking the worst pounding yet administered to them.

He was a brigand when he first ordered his troops to cross the Adriatic and occupy the little kingdom of Albania whose people were not warlike, who had given no offence and who were not at all able to defend themselves. When the Italians moved in there they were undoubtedly working on a definite plan having in view the downfall of Britain's power in the Mediterranean. That, of course, has been since revealed by the attempted invasion of Greece.

Italy possesses many times the numbers of soldiers wearing the Greek uniform; has far greater equipment. Whether Greece can withstand a new and greater attack we do not know. It is almost unbelievable to think that Greek could ultimately handle Italy because the military odds are against it.

For the moment though, Greece has done well. It has accomplished something which the world did not anticipate and it has again placed before the world the weakness and inefficiency of the Italian forces. Meantime the R.A.F. has been busy along with the Greeks. The airmen have hit the Italians hard, and in one contest they knocked forty Italian planes out of the sky.

The Rome end of the Axis is weak. It can impress no power with a might which measures up to the mouth strength of Benito Mussolini. If it is possible for the Greeks to smash Italy so thoroughly in Albania then the prospects are bright enough for knocking that weak link out of the chain.

That is why the Greek victory at Koritza is significant and important. It has shown to the world the inherent weakness of the Italian machine and it will put fresh stamina in the remaining small nations. Once a bully has been thoroughly trounced the supposedly lesser people fear him no more.

Here Was The Proof

There were several contests at a social gathering held in this city recently, and one of them had to do with the naming of articles advertised in clippings from newspapers and magazines. The names of course had been deleted, but the trade marks were there or some of the familiar illustrations frequently used in advertising.

There was active enough participation in this event, and contestants passed from one to the other of the twenty tests pasted on the wall. In the list were soaps, toilet articles, automobile bodies, breakfast foods and so on. The surprising thing was the rapidity with which the sheets were filled in with answers, and most of the answers were correct. The people, young and old, could identify the name of the article by looking at part of an advertisement.

The reason is simple. The makers of the articles in question are persistent advertisers; they keep at it; they are constantly presenting their message aimed at a point which they consider of greatest value in fixing their message in the public mind.

It was rather a striking instance of what intelligent and much-repeated advertising will do. It creates that feeling in the mind of the people which is about the same as what we call acquaintance.

She Just Sits There

Miss Lillie Stoate, 69, and from Mississippi, is a rain maker. She says so. There was need of rain in Winter Haven and Plant City, Florida, situated between St. Petersburg and Tampa. Right now the strawberry crop is the concern of a good many growers. The berries will be coming along about the middle of January, but they need rain.

So down comes Miss Stoate and takes a seat beside Lake Walden, and there she sat for 48 hours and it began to rain. It was not a heavy rain, but there were dark clouds which opened up enough to show that the fine business of watering the earth had not ceased to function.

The strawberry growers sent for Miss Lillie to come and sit by the lake in their midst to see if she could break the drought. As far as reports indicate she does nothing at all except sit by the lake and keep on sitting there, and when the rain came Miss Lillie got the credit. Says she is going to do some more sitting until a rain comes that will do some real good. We can only hope that if it starts to rain too hard provision has been made to get Miss Lillie Stoate out of the way quickly. We have passed the days of witchcraft but it's a fact that people yet spend their time nursing some strange beliefs.

The Mystery Of Moscow

There may be some sudden revelation on the part which Russia is playing in the Balkan situation. It is known that Premier Molotoff spent several days in Berlin, and it can be accepted as a fact that promises would be made to him. That is why Hitler wanted to talk to him. If Russia were not to become an active factor in the Axis war, then the expectation was that she would use her influence to keep Turkey from going to the assistance of Greece or Britain.

Molotoff is a powerful man in Moscow, but he is not Josef Stalin. Stalin is the power there and Molotoff might well have to return and explain everything to the supreme voice in the land.

Hungary has, since the Molotoff trip to Berlin, joined in with the Axis powers, and Hungary is located between Germany and Rumania (already under the wing of Germany). A German newspaper published a statement that Hungary had joined with the Axis powers, and had done it with the sanction and co-operation of the Soviet Union.

But right on the heels of that comes the announcement in Tass, the Soviet official news agency: "Tass is authorized to state that this report does not correspond to fact in any extent."

Blunt, of course, but the utterances of Tass are generally worded that way.

Then there is Bulgaria, and Bulgaria, along with Yugoslavia, separates Rumania from Greece. If Bulgaria entered the Axis fold it would make easy going for the Germans to arrive on the frontier of Greece and seek to do there by invasion what the Italians failed to do in attempting an entry from Albania.

Here again there is something peculiar. Moscow has openly advised — or warned—Bulgaria to steer clear of any outright alliance with the Axis powers. And Bulgaria has been regarded in a friendly way by Moscow.

But King Boris seems bent on joining with Hitler and Mussolini. There are plenty of leaders in the country who are opposed, but Boris knows well enough his country is not strong, and he knows that the Germans are near while Russia is some distance away. Russian advice backed by Russian assistance might have an effect, but it is more likely that Russian advice alone will not be sufficient to stop King Boris from throwing in his lot with the Axis.

Stalin doubtless knows what he has in mind, but he is not making that clear. It seems strange following that Berlin conference that he should advise Bulgaria to keep clear of any alliance with Hitler and at the same time announce that Moscow did not approve of the entry of Hungary into an Axis arrangement. On the face of things he appears to be moving in two directions which have no common terminal facilities.

Russia has so far in this war followed the policy of grabbing something while the time for grabbing appeared opportune. We refuse to believe Russia is interested in forwarding the interests of Germany because that would be plain suicide. Stalin would be more interested in having the great powers fight to the point of exhaustion, because if that point ware reached he would be in a position to reach out again and take what he desired.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Will Mussolini have medals struck for his officers and men who manage to escape from Koritza?

Among other things the United States army has purchased 6,000,000 handkerchiefs. Apparently something beside the North wind is going to blow.

Science has done a good deal for the farmer, but it has not yet succeeded in showing him how to retire like his father and grandfather used to do.

United States is having two Thanksgiving dates, and we suppose the old custom is still followed—roast turkey, cold turkey, giblet pie and turkey soup. That is supposed to cover four days.

Frosts have been hampering fall plowing in some districts, according to the bulletin of the Ontario Department of Education. What do they expect when it's just a month or so until Christmas?

Of explanations regarding the collapse of France there appears to be no end. It might be just as well to admit that France was defeated by the Germans and her own schemers. That covers about everything.

Move is under way for a 48-hour armistice at Christmas. There were times during the last war when enemy forces across the strip between trenches arranged that themselves, but in this war the troops are not in trenches.

We have noticed several pointed bursts against Canadians who persist in singing the last line of the National Anthem as "God save our King," instead of "the" King. However if they feel better singing it that way we really have no objection.

There are 380 Canadians who have subscribed to non-interest bearing bonds. That is, they have loaned their money to the government and will receive nothing for it. When people enter that class we are inclined to regard them as patriots.

SAVING THE NATION

¶ I read a letter just today on how the country should be run, it set forth rules and laws and such and showed just how the thing is done.

¶ 'Twas then I asked a friend of mine who is the great reformer here, the man who writes to tell me how to save the nation in a year.

¶ My friend he scratched his head a spell and then he hatched a friendly grin, past history swept in quick review, he strokes the whiskers on his chin.

¶ "I know that man, I know him well, he used to farm ten miles from here, and never could he pay his debts, not even in a bumper year.

¶ "For weeds grew thick upon his place, his stock was thin as stock could be, he was a lazy shiftless lout, least that's the way it seemed to me.

¶ "And then he quit the farming quick and sold what little stuff he had, he bought a little store in town and ran the thing alarming bad.

¶ "He failed in there inside three months, he couldn't seem to make it pay, and then he started selling things and most times he was far away.

¶ "I heard he lost that job as well, he never turned the money in, he failed at everything he touched, that was the last I heard of him."

¶ This man mussed up each job he had, he could not keep a brindle cow, and yet he's writing of the way to go and save the nation now.

Mexico To Enter Defence Pact Of U.S.-Canada

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Whether or not Uncle Sam definitely has concluded an agreement with Mexico granting the U.S. naval and air bases in the neighboring republic's harbors and on its soil, it's about as certain as anything can be that the deal virtually is concluded.

General Camacho

Mexico City's story is that the bargain actually has been signed. Under-secretary of State Sumner Welles says it hasn't been—not yet. Anyway, it's safe betting that the dicker's terms are mutually understood, even if formal signatures are lacking. Supposing that they are, there's every indication that they'll be affixed shortly.

It's to be remembered that the executive branch of the U.S. government has been considerably criticized lately for entering into what were described as amounting to international treaties without congress' approval, which constitutionally is required to validate them. Maybe that's why the state department's reluctant to admit that a compact with Mexico has been closed officially minus Capitol Hill's endorsement.

What the thing really is, according to exceptionally well posted authority, is an arrangement almost identical with the mutually defensive hook-up with Canada. That is to say, we and Canada are working on a bilateral basis. Now Mexico's coming into the alignment, making it trilateral.

THREE-WAY COMBINE

IT ISN'T at all to the prejudice of the group's relationships with the Latin-American countries south of Mexico. They'll be more than welcome to join the Yankee-Canadian-Mexican partnership. However, the U.S., the Canadians and the Mexicans geographically are an especially natural nucleus, covering the whole of North America. It's a three-cornered combination which ought to have plenty of appeal to the Central, South and insular Americas. That seems to have been the Washington, Ottawa and Mexico city governments' idea.

Well, the U.S. and the Canadians already are under the same mutually defensive roof. The certainty that Mexico's coming under it also appears to be pretty well established by President Roosevelt's assignment of Vice-President-elect Wallace to be in Mexico City Dec. 1, the date of General Manuel Avila Camacho's inauguration as President Cardenas' successor. And that isn't all. It's learned now that incoming President Camacho will visit Washington in the near future.

Henry Wallace is mentioned as a particularly suitable individual to represent the U.S. at the Camacho inauguration, because he speaks pretty good Spanish, which will flatter the Mexicans.

It's unfortunate that Henry didn't study Portuguese, too, while he was about it. Spanish is okay through all of Latin America except in Brazil. Portuguese is the Brazilians' lingo, and theirs is the biggest country south of the Rio Grande, the strongest and the most populous.

The truth is that there isn't much difference between the two tongues, but the Spanish-speakers pretend that they can't understand Portuguese and the Portuguese Spanish. They're linguistically jealous of one another. To be sure, a Mexican, for instance, can understand Portuguese or a Brazilian can understand Spanish if he sees a chance to make some money out of whatever proposition you put up to him. Illustratively, I knew a little Spanish myself, and in Brazil I always was able to make known my simple wants as for tobacco and food, because it was obvious that I had the cash to pay for 'em. But Henry Wallace, if he goes to Brazil, will find that his Spanish won't be of much use to him.

Henry, though, isn't scheduled to visit Brazil at present, so his unfamiliarity with Portuguese won't matter.

VARGAS TO VISIT U.S.

ON the contrary, President Vargas of Brazil is due to be in Washington before long. That's part of the Pan-American program. The notion's to get the Brazilians under the Yankee-Canadian-Mexican roof likewise. Most likely we'll get 'em. And Vargas, while here, won't expect us to speak much Portuguese.

Vargas, by the way, is a dictator. He denies that he's totalitarian, but there's a general impression that he's fascistical. I knew this from an inside diplomatic source. Among sojourners in the United States is James I. Miller, a prominent Yankee news correspondent in Buenos Aires. He married a Brazilian woman, a distinguished authoress. She's not only a distinguished authoress, but also an outstanding Vargasite politically. And when she wanted a passport to come here with her husband, she had a heck of a time getting it from the U.S. Argentine embassy, due to her supposedly fascistical leanings.

We'll be delighted to greet Vargas himself, however; we need him for our Pan-American line-up.

THE REAL THING

• We Become Interested In Greenland

GREENLAND, which to many people is known in name only, has now become the practical concern of both Canada and the United States. This huge island, covering about 830,000 square miles, most of which is a continuous ice-cap, has been a Danish colony since the 17th century. Its trade has been a severely guarded Danish monopoly, and its contacts with the outer world controlled by the ministry of the interior in Copenhagen. When the Nazis achieved their bloodless conquest of Denmark, says the Toronto Star, Greenland was placed in a precarious position; its population had depended upon Denmark for much of the food, medical and other supplies, and they were at once faced with the prospect of privation.

But this danger is past. The fate of Greenland is a primary concern to North America, since it is but a "stepping stone" on the North Atlantic air route from Europe to this continent. Were the Nazis to control Greenland, they would possess the gateway to the Americas. Canada almost touch Greeland in the far north, and it is said that its icy peaks can sometimes be seen from the Canadian mainland. Thus when the Nazis seized Denmark both Canada and the U.S. extended aid and protection to the island. The Danish embassy in Washington formed a committee to regulate Greenland's exports and imports, and Canada and the U.S. police are guarding the precious cryolite mines—the largest in the world —which are essential for the production of aluminum. Both Canada and the U.S. have also sent consular representatives to Greenland. Vigilance must be constant, for this island is important to the Nazis also as a weather bureau. Their air operations have been seriously hindered by the lack of co-operation from the Danish and Norwegian personnel of the Greenland weather bureau, and a few weeks ago an armed attempt was made to seize the bureau.

Whether Greenland will return to Danish control is an interesting question. At one time it was thought that Canada would buy it. Financially the island has been a heavy drain on Denmark. All trade was carried on at the cost of the Danish government, and the people were provided with free education, health and social services. The population totals less than 17,000, of which about 270 are Danes, the remainder Eskimos, and are scattered in 70 different settlements on this huge glacial island. The policy of the Danish government has been to bring to these colonists the advantages of western civilization as far as they could be assimilated, and to protect the natives from the type of traders' exploitation which did much to exterminate the Indians on this continent. Under the Danes' benevolent colonial policy, the Greenland Eskimos have prospered and developed, and had attained even a measure of self-government.

The future of Greenland is now bound up not only with the fortunes of war, but also with the changed position which the Arctic has in recent years assumed in the world's economy. Soviet Russia's experiments have proven that the Arctic is habitable also in winter. Moreover, recent research has shown that Greenland's ice-cap and floating ice are a potential blessing to aerial navigation and especially to war planes.

• Mussolini Didn't Tell The Truth

THERE is one point in the Duce's speech on Sanctions Day that calls for specific comment. He stated that the Italian spirit is such that the people could stand being told the truth, in contrast to the lying communiques issued to the British people, and that the Italian communiques, therefore, were always accurate, presenting the bad news as well as the good. Then he stated that the British report about Taranto was untrue; that only one warship was so damaged that some little time would be needed to repair it and that the other two would not have to be withdrawn from service at all.

Yet, the "truthful" Italian communique on the Taranto bombing said "only a few houses were damaged" there that day. Mussolini convicted himself out of his own mouth, contends St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Such is Italian control over all source of news, however, that foreign correspondents resident in Rome, have to accept the hand-out reports of the propaganda department, and put the best face they can on the military situation. If they did not do that they would be expelled, as has happened to several correspondents who attempted to thwart the censor and in some cases succeeded in doing so. Those who are still on the job in Rome and Berlin know that flapdoodle is being handed out to them, but they cover themselves by prefacing their statements with "according to official reports," or according to the propaganda department."

The reports from Rome concerning the campaign against Greece are masterpieces of adroit manipulation of words. One, a few days ago, when the outside world knew that the Italian army was broken against the Greek resistance, the communique said that "according to the propaganda department the Greeks at no point had advanced across the frontier." Italians could read between lines the obvious implication that instead of invading Greece, their army, at least, was struggling to keep the Greeks from invading Albania. If they exercised their intelligence they would realize that the Italian campaign had already failed. But a day or two later, their Duce was telling them that the crack Alpine division was behaving with magnificent courage, standing as firm as a rock. The official communiques also make the excuse that heavy rain was handicapping the Italian forces. Surely the same rain was also a handicap to the Greeks.

An American correspondent says the Italian people are now great encouraged by the fact that the Duce himself "has taken over personal supervision of the campaign." If that is so, it is another camouflaged admission that the Greek enterprise has failed. But we do not see how a man who was only a corporal in the last war can be hailed as a military genius.

A Bible Message For Today . . .

Is there not an appointed time to man upon earth? are not his days also like the days of an hireling? As a servant earnestly desireth the shadow, and as an hireling looketh for the reward of his work: so am I made to possess months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me....My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope.—Job vii, 1-3, 6.

DEEDS AND WORD

THE best picture one can draw of Hitler from available evidence is not that of the Nazi propaganda; it is the picture of the desperate gambler of the Wilhelmstrasse, pyramiding his winnings under even greater pressure until they have built up into an overgrown, uneasy, disorganized and necessitous empire, resting on the fearfully weak reeds of Italy and Japan, driven to dicker with the Soviets, and baffled in every attempt to break the supreme centre of resistance in the hearts of the British people. And this ramshackle empire faces a steadily growing British air power, delivering heavier and heavier blows, and backed not only by the full resources of the British Commonwealth but in even greater measure by the full industrial power of the United States. It one looks at deeds (of which Hitler is so fond) and not at the words, communiques and propagandas, this seems to be the picture.—New York Herald Tribune.

The Drawback

WHAT BRITAIN NEEDS

THE British situation is not critical; it is always serious—so serious that no one can safely count that the British people will win through unless they are backed with every energy the United States can command. Their main needs are several and may be broadly catalogued as follows: (1) Airplanes, in the greatest possible quantities, other munitions and factory capacity to maintain the supply; (2) Maintenance of the sea routes over which these supplies must be sent; (3) Protection of the British rear against the threat from Japan; (4) Money, and (5) The moral effect on the totalitarians and their enslaved populations which would be produced by a powerful democratic front, strong in its own defence, rich in its resources and energetic in constructive action.—New York Herald Tribune.

PLUG FOR A LECTURER

THERE are several writers by the name of Wells, but the most famous of them all is H. G. Wells, the British historian and writer of fantastic fiction.

That is one reason why a certain librarian was very eager to please a patron the other day who came up to her desk and asked her about a book.

"I want a book on Wells," he said.

"Did you want an autobiography?" the librarian asked.

The patron eyed the librarian blankly.

"Huh?" he said by way of making himself clear.

"Did you want something on his life?" the librarian said to make it plain.

Unable to conceal his impatience any longer, the patron blurted out: "Lady, I just want to know how to dig 'em!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

British Hussars Rout 50 Italian Tanks

WITH THE BRITISH DESERT FORCES IN EGYPT, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Out of the silent desert case-hardened officers of a famed British Hussar regiment brought a spectacular account today of how an Italian column of 50 tanks was routed in a six-hour battle on Nov. 19.

The official communique dismissed it with a few lines, but to these desert-wise men it was the most important encounter between British and Italian forces here since the Italians pushed their advance base to Sidi Barrani last September.

The "little party"—as they put it—took place at Hilquit, 15 miles south of Sidi Barrani, in the 70-mile-wide no man's land between the Italian and British lines.

The fight started at 8 a.m. when Italian planes dive-bombed and machine-gunned one of the Hussar patrols in the area. As such attacks usually precede Fascist land movements, British headquarters, upon hearing about it by wireless, immediately sent out more patrols.

"We sighted an enemy column of 50 tanks and other vehicles," recounted a Hussar officer, who now rides to battle in tanks instead of on horseback.

"We gathered full forces into the region, the Italians opening fire when they saw our movements.

"Our colonel gave the order to attack. One squadron of our tanks darted around the enemy's left to cut off retreat, while the rest of our force closed to within 200 yards of the Fascist vehicles.

"With heavy fire we disabled several of their tanks and sent two ammunition trucks sky high when their cargoes exploded.

"Our tanks, which had closed around their rear, inflicted heavy damage on the Italian light tanks because they have less armor in the back.

"As the land battle raged, 17 Italian planes appeared overhead. The Royal Air Force charged into the enemy formation, shooting down three of their planes at the first crack. The remainder took flight. One of our planes was lost; another was forced down but the pilot was safe.

"As additional British tank patrols came into sight the Italian column beat a full retreat, abandoning three heavy trucks, five tanks and some guns which had been dismounted from trucks during the battle.

"The Hussars remained on the spot to blow up Mussolini's disabled tanks, while the Italians—from a great distance — took potshots at them.

"The Italians left nine dead in the desert. We took 10 prisoners and suffered only two casualties."

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Summoned to the state penitentiary where her father lies near death, Lona Ackerman is dismayed when he fails to recognize here. He is serving a life sentence for a murder which occurred when he sought to avenge his daughter's honor. Finding a friend in Jim Claridge, Lona had just begun to take a new interest in life when the prison warden telegraphed her of her father's illness. Alone in the world, she had spent months finding jobs, then losing them when it became known she was a convict's daughter. Finally Jim had found her a new position, saw more and more of her until they fell in love. The prison warden takes Lona to his home. As they enter, two convicts confront them with guns. Once in the warden's car, the convicts slug the warden and dump him out, then attempt a mad get-away with Lona in the front seat. Eventually she pretends to faint, then lurches for the steering wheel. Then they crash. Only slightly injured, Lona recovers in the prison hospital and finds her father has died. When she takes her father's body to their old home for burial, she finds herself the object of all eyes, due to the wide publicity that followed the attempted prison break. Back in the city, her landlady asks her to leave because of the publicity. At her office she winds a strange girl at her desk. Find that her job is gone, she goes to the hotel to try to locate Jim.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER NINETEEN

FOR A LONG time after she had telephoned Jim's boarding house and learned that he had received her message and had not come to her, Lona paced the floor of her hotel room trying to control her despair. What was she going to do now, she asked herself? She was alone, friendless, without a job—back where she had been the night when he had rescued her from the park!

Why hadn't he passed her up, her heart cried out, now, in maddening pain? Why hadn't he allowed her to go her own way? It would have been all over by now. She would have been at rest, somehow. In the river, probably. Instead, he had snatched her back taught her what friendship meant, shown her how sweet living could be, and now. . . .

She couldn't bear it! Sobbing, suddenly, with the uncontrollable sobs of utter exhaustion and hopeless despair, she flung herself headlong on the bed and buried her head in the pillow. It had been only the thought of Jim that had sustained her through this past week. She knew now. Always he had been in the back of her mind. She had known he would be waiting and was comforted. It couldn't be true! Jim couldn't be like all the others. She couldn't believe . . .

The hands of the clock passed the midnight hour as she lay there sobbing. She slept, finally, in a fitful sort of way, a troubled sleep broken by thoughts of Jim. Once, far into the night, she started to her feet, certain that she had heard knocking at her door. She sobbed again as she realized it was only a dream. The cold gray of dawn found her still dressed, tossing on the bed.

"Jim!" she called, rousing at the beat of the porter's footsteps outside her door. Then realization possessed her brain, realization that it was a new day and that she must face it alone. She lay for a long time staring at the light creeping so hopefully in through the shaded windows.

A new day! How would she ever go through with it, and with the endless, pointless succession of days to come? What use trying to go through them, something deep within her cried out and, finding a little comfort in the very strength of her despair, she turned over on her side and slept again, soundly this time, her breath coming quickly now and then in little sobbing gasps like that of a child who has cried itself to sleep.

It was almost nine o'clock when she awoke again to the shrill, insistant ringing of her room phone. Trembling suddenly, she picked up the receiver and breathed a hesitant "Hello!"

"Hello, girl." It was Jim's drawl that came back to her.

For a moment she couldn't answer. "Oh, Jim! Jim!" she cried, then.

"Why, girl, what's the matter?" The tears in her voice must have carried over the wire. "Are you up?" he demanded. "Can I see you?"

"I'll be right down," she told him. "Wait in the lobby."

It was the quickest dressing she had ever done in her life. Discarding her rumpled dress and tidied up her disordered hair. Her eyes in the mirror were circled, and she looked small and very tired. In spite of the dizziness that reminded her she had been 24 hours without food, she almost ran down the corridor to the clicking elevator.

He was standing, hatless, in the hotel lobby, his tall figure erect, his sturdy legs spread slightly apart, bracing him, giving him that indescribable outdoor air that seemed so much a part of him. At sight of her, the brown eyes crinkled into the little half smile she had recalled so often with longing in the past week.

She had thought she could be calm when she met him, but the sight of him standing there brought the tears back to her eyes. Instantly he was at her side, and had gathered her into his big arms.

"Why, girl!" He looked down at her reproachfully. "You're crying. What's wrong? What have they done to you?"

"Oh, Jim!" She sobbed in earnest, then, unmindful of the clerk's interested eyes. "I waited for you to call. All night I waited. I thought you were—like the rest. I couldn't bear it, Jim—"

"Easy, girl! Easy . . . " His arms held her close. "You didn't think I'd let you down, did you?" He sounded hurt.

"You didn't call, and I—I've lost my job, and my landlady p-put me out, and I—I'm so hungry, Jim!"

"Hungry! Why, you little goose!" He laughed at that, and in spite of her own tears she smiled with him. It did sound ridiculous, now that she was with him. "I couldn't eat," she told him, half shamed. "I was so upset."

"We'll fix that right away." His arm on hers, he started her toward the hotel dining room. "Seems I'm always feeding you," he joked. "You're the hungriest woman I know. . . . Here, we'll sit back here in the corner, and you can tell me all about it over a plate of ham and eggs."

He hadn't received her message until just an hour ago, he told her, gravely. Mrs. Peterman had stuffed it beneath his door and it had been pushed under the edge of the rug. It was only by accident that he noticed it when he did. He had come immediately, laying off work for the day. He scowled and his fists clenched as he listened to her story of yesterday's happenings. He, too, had seen the headlines and the pictures in the papers, and they had angered him.

"It's been rotten having to read the stuff they've been printing about you, knowing half of it wasn't true, and not being able to do anything about it," he burst out. "I could take a punch at every reporter in the lot. I know what they were doing to you! I've seen it done before—" He broke off, and Lona had the impression that he was remembering something that had nothing to do with her. He looked so disturbed that she had an absurd impulse to comfort him. For what, she didn't know.

"Don't feel that way about it, Jim." She put a hand out to his across the table. "It couldn't be helped, I guess."

He seemed to come back to himself, then. "People have no right to hound you like that!" he declared. "You've done nothing. I'd like to meet up with your Mr. Sanders again. Calls himself a man—"

"He couldn't help it, Jim, if he feels that way. My landlady, either. What worries me is that I don't know what to do next. It's the thought of hunting another job that bothers me, going places, and having people recognize me. . . . I feel as if I'd like to crawl into a hole somewhere and never come out."

"Poor little girl!" He put his big hand over hers on the table and his sympathy made the tears threaten to well again.

"If you'd have gone back on me, Jim, I'd—I'd have died, I guess," she told him, her eyes hurt.

For a moment he sat there, stroking her hand in silence. Then he got to his feet abruptly, and came to her side of the closed-in restaurant booth. "Listen, girl, there's a way out of this if you want to take it," he brought out. His voice was husky. "You could marry me, if you can stand it."

The suddenness of the thing robbed Lona of words. For a moment she just stared at him. "Jim! You mean—" She broke off, to stare again. "You're asking me—oh, but I couldn't do that! Not just to get out of things. It wouldn't be fair!"

"I love you, girl! You must know that I love you! I'm not much account, I guess, and it wouldn't be much of a life for you, moving around from town to town the way I do. I guess I haven't any right to ask you, but we sort of—belong together, you and me . . . both of us are drifters. Do you think you could maybe, love me—enough—" His eyes were pleading.

"Oh, Jim!" she managed to bring out. "Jim, I do love you! How could I help it? You've been so good. But I couldn't—you're just doing this to be kind—"

"Girl, don't . . . I love you! This is a break for me. Can't you understand?" His arms closed about her there in the semi-seclusion of the booth, and she could feel his heart pounding. She found herself clinging to him, suddenly, straining against the rough surface of his coat that smelled of tobacco. A feeling of safeness enveloped her. She felt she could stay there always.

"Jim, oh, Jim!" she whispered again.

"You'll do it, girl?" He lifted her head with a hand beneath her chin and made her look at him.

"Yes, Jim," she said, then, and tried to hide her eyes in sudden shyness. "If you're sure you want me—"

"Want you? You're funny, girl." He kissed her, then, gently. His lips against hers were hard and strong, as she had known they would be. His kiss felt familiar, somehow, as if it were something that belonged to her, for which she had been waiting.

Dodge Widow's Grant Upheld

DETROIT, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Judge Theodore Richter upheld Saturday a settlement of the $11,000,000 Daniel G. Dodge estate which Oakland County Probate Court recently approved.

The settlement had been challenged by John Duval Dodge, a son of the late John F. Dodge, the automobile manufacturer. The verdict upheld a grant of $2,500,000 to Daniel Dodge's widow, Annie Laurine Dodge.

A suit by John Duval Dodge, attempting to break his father's will, which set up a $40,000,000 trust fund for the other Dodge children, still is pending.

Mr. Bradley predeceased his wife some years ago.

A service was held on Sunday afternoon in the home of J. A. Nichol and conducted by Rev. E. L. Buck of the United church. A solo "Crossing the Bar" was sung by Miss Gwendolyn Varcoe.

MICHAEL HERR

ELROSE, Sask., Nov. 25. — The funeral of Michael Herr, known to a host of friends and acquaintances as Mickey Herr, of Kyle was held Friday morning from St. Joseph's Church, Elrose. Mr. Herr had been in poor health all summer although his condition was not considered serious and his death came as a great shock. The church held only a small part of the friends who came from far and near to pay their last respects to a highly esteemed citizen.

Coming to the west in 1920 from Peterborough, Ontario, deceased was associated with his brother Jack in business here. In 1923 he moved to Kyle where he has since conducted a successful implement and oil business.

High Mass was sung by Rev. Fr. Carroll, assisted by Rev. Fr. Sexsmith, deacon and Rev. Fr. O'Donnell of Saskatoon, subdeacon.

Mr. Herr leaves to mourn his loss his widow, two sons, Jack 12, Jim 6, and one daughter, Doreen 9. His mother, Mrs. Michael Herr, still resides in Peterborough. A long cortege followed the remains to the Elrose cemetery.

A number of members of the International Harvester Company staff from Saskatoon attended the funeral. Members of Kyle Lodge B.P. O.E. also attended and conducted a short ceremony at the graveside, following the church ceremony.

A number of beautiful floral tributes and spiritual offerings bore witness to the esteem in which the late Mr. Herr was held throughout the district, including Plato, Kyle, Elrose and Rosetown.

The many friends who gathered and the numerous floral offerings testified as to how true were his words, for Mrs. Braden was loved by all.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Nov. 25 — (CP).— Coadjutor Bishop Philippe Desranleau of Sherbrooke, in a pastoral letter read in churches of the diocese, warned diocesans yesterday against mixed marriages and also announced a "crusade" for the conversion of non-Catholics. Belmont Branch W.I. Celebrates Society's 25th Anniversary

HAVELOCK, Nov. 25—(ENS). — Observing their 25th anniversary, the Belmont branch Women's Intitute celebrated the occasion in a most fitting manner at their November session, held last Thursday in the Belmont township hall. Appropriately decorated, with a great three-storey birthday cake occupying a prominent position on the platform, the hall was filled to capacity, when the families and friends assembled that evening for a chicken supper and program.

One of the first branches in this district, the Belmont W.I. was organized by Mrs. Charles McKeown of Seymour, and Miss M. W. Powell of Whitby. The minutes of their first meeting, written by Mrs. McKeown, brought back many memories as they were read by her during the program. The first president was the late Mrs. John A. Sexsmith, and the first secretary, Mrs. M. Dunlop. The latter was unable to attend the celebration due to illness in her family. Two minutes silence was observed in honor of Mrs. Sexsmith.

Composed of 42 members on the date of its organization, the roll now totals 55, with eight new members added on Thursday. The current president, Mrs. Donald Anderson, welcoming the guests, attributed the success of the present organization to the splendid work of previous executive and members.

Mrs. George Weller, district president, of Warsaw; Mrs. Harry Mann, district secretary, of Trent River, and Mrs. Charles McKeown all briefly addressed the gathering, extending congratulation to the Belmont branch. Voluntary contribution of $8 was made by the several visitors in attendance, to the Belmont treasury.

Officiating for the cutting of the birthday cake were the president, Mrs. D. Anderson and Miss Iva Smith, district director of the Belmont branch.

Included on the program, immediately after the supper were the following items: Vocal trio, "Playmates," by the McMullen sisters, Betty, Marcelena, and Audrey; instrumental duet, violin and guitar, Bernice and Randall Eills; vocal solo, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," Clifford Kennedy.

DEFIANTS LEAD BASKETBALL LEAGUE WITH THREE STRAIGHT WINS

Wellingtons Win From Spitfires With Early Lead

Capturing their second straight overtime win in as many weeks, Defiants sit high atop the Y.M.C.A. House Basketball League ladder as the teams passed the half-way post in one of the hottest campaigns in its history. Defiants took a two-game lead over the field on Saturday night by taking a torridly fought battle from Hurricanes that went into two overtime periods before a winner was declared. Wellingtons downed Spitfires 34-32 in the other half of the weekly double feature. The standing of the four entries at the half-way mark:

	W.	L.
Defiants	3	0
Hurricanes	1	2
Wellingtons	1	2
Spitfires	1	2

Defiants, fresh from an overtime win over Spitfires last week, were forced to go through two extra stanzas on Saturday night before downing Hurricanes 35-34 in a thrilling dog-eat-dog battle to preserve their unbeaten record. The winners held a 14-13 margin at the half-way, but Hurricanes nullified their point advantage to tie it up 24-all as the game ended. Both teams scored twice in the first overtime period and they went into extra chapter No. 2 tied at 28-28. The losers counted twice early on Thorburn's tries, but Defiants tied it up again and with the score deadlocked at 34-all and a quarter of a minute left, Craig scored the second of two free throw efforts to make it 35-34 as the game ended. Both teams played fine basketball all the way with the play as even as the score indicates. Hurricanes made six free throws in 18 tries and Defiants counted seven for 16. Thorburn, McArthur and Rogow led Hurricanes with K. Gillespie, C. Gillespie, and McPherson best for the winners. The teams:

Hurricanes 34—Centre, Garvie 1; forwards, Thorburn 17, McArthur 9; guards, Rogow 4, Csumrick 3; subs., Dundas, Ridyard, Clapham.

Defiants 35 — Centre, Craig 13; forwards, Currie 3, C. Gillespie 7; guards, McPherson 1, K. Gillespie 10; subs., Burns 1, Spencely.

Referee—Al Clark.

Piling up a 20-9 lead in the opening half, Wellingtons barely lasted to down Spitfires 34-32 as the losers rallied in the last period. Wellingtons had a big margin in the first period of a wide open contest that saw both teams featuring offensive rather than defensive tactics. The winners opened at a fast pace and held Spitfires' attack to 9 points in the first half, but led by Captin Joe Stewart the losers fought a game uphill battle in the final period to draw within two points as the whistle blew. Spitfires used a fast-breaking, fast-passing attack, but missed a lot of scoring chances, while Wellingtons were content to shoot from well out with an occasional fast-breaking, short-passing thrust to take better advantage of their chances and earn the win. The winners made two for four free throws and Spitfires two in five. Ferguson and Marsh led the winners and Stewart, Smith and West were best for the losers. The teams:

Referee—Doug. McPherson.

Indians Bow To Cleveland With Shore Off

(By the Canadian Press.)

Springfield Indians and Cleveland Barons are still breezing along at the top of their respective sections in the American Hockey League, despite the fact that each team suffered its second loss of the season during the week-end.

Springfield's loss came Saturday night, when they bowed 2-1 to the Barons in the first meeting of the year before a crowd of close to 10,000 fans in Cleveland. The Barons were tripped up 4-2 Sunday night by Providence Reds as Springfield topped Hershey Bears 5-2.

The Indians hold a six-point edge in the Eastern section over the second place New Haven Eagles while the Barons are four points up on Hershey in the western division. The Indians have 17 points from seven victories, two losses and three draws, while the Barons have 14 from seven victories and two losses.

Shore Serving Penalty

The Saturday meeting between the two clubs featured the week-end card, with goals by Bill Summerhill and Les Cunningham giving the Barons the victory. Fred Hunt, the league's leading point-maker, tallied the Springfield goal. The two Cleveland goals came while Player-Owner Eddie Shore was serving a 10-minute misconduct penalty.

In other Sunday night games New Haven topped Indianapolis 3-2 and Buffalo Bisons defeated Pittsburg Hornets 3-0. Other Saturday night games saw Pittsburg beat New Haven 4-0, and Philadelphia Ramblers defeat Indianapolis 3-2, while Hershey walloped Buffalo 6-2.

Glenn Brydson and Larry Thibeault paced the Indians to their Sunday night victory over Hershey, with the former scoring three goals and the latter chipping in with two. The Reds' goals went to Harry Frost and Jenkins.

Mann Scored Twice

Normie Mann was the star of Providence's victory over the Barons, scoring twice as Babe Tapin and Mariucci added singles. The two Cleveland goals were scored by Don Deacon. George Mantha of New Haven was another player to bag two goals, getting a pair against Indianapolis while other New Haven scorers were Allan Shields and George Patterson. The Indianapolis goals were scored by Joe Fisher and Jennings.

Bob Gracie, Cunningham and Waldriff scored for Buffalo against Pittsburg as Goalie Bill Beveridge kept Hornet marksmen off the score sheet.

Rookie Defenceman Bill Judza's overtime goal gave Ramblers their victory Saturday night over Indianapolis. In the first period Foster and Smith scored for the Ramblers while Brown and Fisher scored for Indianapolis in the second and third periods respectively.

Hershey Bears scored five goals in the first period in winning over Buffalo Saturday night. Joe Krol fired two of these tallies, while Jenkins, Kilrea and Lauzon got the others. The Bisons tightened their defence and stopped the Bears in the second period and cut down the score on tallies by Gracie and Rimstand. The last Hershey goal went to Kilrea in the third period.

The Hornets scored in every period to blank the Eagles. The four Hornet goals were divided by Harry Currie and Johnny Sherf.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

As expected Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Balmy Beaches are champions of the two senior loops in Eastern football. There were no upsets in Saturday's program. Ottawa's eleven point lead over Argos was increased to 18 on the round when the Riders defeated Lou Hayman's battling Oarsmen 8 to 1. Meanwhile the Bammies were proving that their win of the week before over Sarnia Battery was no fluke by defeating the Gunners on their home ground by the identical score 12 to 0. Both games ran about true to the pre-game predictions and the repeat champs of the Big Four and the new title-holders in the O.R.F.U. loop are now ready to decide the question of which club is entitled to claim Eastern supremacy in Canadian football. In brief the season's campaign has wound up just where most of the experts said early in September that it would end.

* * * * * *

The feature of the Ottawa-Argos clash in Toronto was the game fight Lou Hayman's men put up to avoid elimination. They went into the battle realizing that they were facing great odds in trying to wipe out an eleven-point lead held by such a mighty machine as the Rough Riders and they tried every trick in their repertoire to open the game wide and somehow snatch enough points to turn defeat into victory. They were not successful but they lost no friends in the stubborn struggle they put up. As to the score itself it hardly does justice to the grimness of the Argos' fight. Six of the eight points were handed to the Riders through a sheer bit of bad luck, an erratic snap resulting in a touchdown. It was an ironic twist of fate that the misadventure came after the Argos' defence had risen to great heights to prevent Ottawa scores. Twice they had blocked placement kicks by Tiny Hermann and on other occasions had played great defensive football to save their goal-line. However, Ottawa, decidedly the better team on the season's play, are worthy champions and no on will begrudge them the honors they have won.

* * * * * *

Balmy Beach again proved that their defensive system is about the most consistently effective of any club in the east. In winning their eighth straight game in the O.R.F.U. series Alex Ponton's classy team shut out Sarnia for the second time in succession and finished their loop campaign with a total of only 12 points scored against them in eight games. The Bammies have won every game by a comfortable margin and have made it decidedly tough for their opponents to hang up any points. Critics say the Beaches lack payoff punch but it must be admitted that they have had enough to win their battles and at the same time they have not needed big scores to win, so airtight has been their own defence. Don Crowe started them off on their path to victory Saturday, kicking a goal from placement for the first three points scored by the Bammies. It was from the 25-yard line.

This Is A Sizzling League

Whoever was responsible for arranging the lineups of the clubs in the Y.M.C.A. Basketball League should get a medal or two as a handicapper. The loop is the most evenly matched the Y has known and so far the games have been hectic affairs in which a two-point margin was a big lead—in fact two of the battles have gone overtime. Defiants, the loop leaders, are qualifying for the title of overtime kings. A week ago they won out in an extra five minutes play and Saturday night they had to go ten minutes overtime before the issue was decided. The Defiants and Hurricanes finished the regular time with 24 points each. In the first five minutes of overtime each team scored four points, leaving the score again tied at 28-28. Five minutes more fast playing saw the league leaders finally win by a single point when Jack Craig tossed in a free throw with only a few seconds of the second extra period remaining.

* * * * * *

A sporting record that has stood for some time was knocked for a loop Saturday when Tom Harmon, the great backfielder of the University of Michigan ran wild in the mud to score three touchdowns against Iowa State. The three goal-line crossing plays gave Harmon a total of 33 touchdowns for his three seasons of college football and surpassed by two the mark held for years by Red Grange. Harmon needed a touchdown to tie the record and after he had collected that he went on for two more to set a mark that will likely stand for some time. In addition to scoring 33 touchdowns Harmon has kicked 33 extra points on converts, made two goals from the field and has tosed fifteen touchdown passes to teammates. In Saturday's game he not only carried the ball over the foe's goal-line three times, but converted four tries and pitched two forward passes that wound up in touchdowns. Argos could have used a performer like that Saturday.

And so it's now Ottawa or the Bammies of Toronto for the Eastern Canadian title. At a meeting Sunday it was agreed that the playoff series would be a home-and-home affair with the first game in Toronto Saturday and the second in Ottawa on Saturday December 7. It will be quite a battle. The odds, of course, favor the Rough Riders but there is a feeling that the Bammies will give the boys from the Capital a merry argument. With Bobby Porter, backfield star not eligible and Syd Reynolds, one of the best ends in Canadian football out of action through illness the Toronto gang will be handicapped in their big job of trying to knock off the Big Four champions but Ponton has plenty of strength left and the Beach crew will be in there battling all the way. Peterborough fans are taking an unusual interest in the fortune of the Bammies because of the presence of two former Orfuns, Don Crowe and Leo Deadey on the lineup.

A crowded N.H.L. week-end was featured by the fact that the Boston Bruins who had been having trouble getting the engine started picked up three points in their two away-from-home games. They started off Saturday night by handing Rangers the first beating Lester Patrick's men have taken this year, winning 2 to 1 on two smart goals by Roy Conacher Sunday the Bruins moved into Detroit and they succeeded in getting a 1-1 tie with the Red Wings. As the net result of those two exploits Bruins are now in fourth place climbing over the Rangers' first loss but by Canadiens' first win, Dick Irvin's revamped team outscoring Amerks 3 to 1 at Montreal Saturday night. The Amerks however got revenge 2 to 1 Sunday when the teams met each other again at New York.

The Toronto Maple Leafs did not lose any ground, in fact they gained a point, in the heavy action. The Smythe men ran into an unexpected snag Saturday night when Paul Goodman with an uncanny exhibition of goal-minding held them off the score sheet entirely and the Black Hawks beat them on the strength of a second period goal by Cully Dahlstrom. Sunday night however the Leafs atoned for that loss by going into Chicago and taking the Hawks before the home-town fans 4 goals to 2. Sweeney Schriner, who looks to be in for a good year and who would score beaucoup goals if used on the Apps-Drillon line led the attack Sunday night scoring two goals for the Leafs. It was 3 to 2 with Hawks battling desperately to tie it up when Apps scored on a break-away late in the final session to cinch the argument.

Definite news as to the East-West clash between the Winnipeg Blue Bombers and the winners of the Ottawa-Balmy Beach series will not be available until tomorrow but with no possibility of the intersectional clash being played until two weeks from next Saturday, the chances do not look very bright. Winnipeg comment is that the Bombers are about to break training and while efforts are still being made by Toronto promoters to launch the East-West clash the outlook is not rosy at the present moment.

Red Cross Week Endorsed At O.H.A. Meeting

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's proposed Red Cross hockey week gained the unanimous approval of the Ontario Hockey Association at the Provincial body's 51st annual meeting here Saturday.

Brainchild of George Dudley of Midland, president of the C.A.H.A. and treasurer of the O.H.A., the Red Cross hockey week will commence Jan. 6. All clubs and associations affiliated with the C.A.H.A. will divert a major portion of the proceeds from a regular league game to the Red Cross. Seventy-five per cent of the receipts will go to the Red Cross for distribution to its branches in the locale where games are played. Remaining 25 per cent will be used by the C.A.H.A. to assist military organizations throughout the country to sponsor hockey. The C.A.H.A. will handle the opportioning of these allotments to the three branches of active service, the militia, air force and naval groups.

Amendments Passed

Most of the amendments confronting delegates to Saturday's conclave were passed without dissent, primarily because the majority were C.A.H.A. rulings put into effect this season, and which automatically became effective with the O.H.A. Probably the most heated discussion concerned reinstatment of professionals under the fifteen-day clause, but this was ultimately given approval.

Delegates accepted with ltitle comment the new definition of an amateur: "One who either has not or is not engaged in organized professional hockey." The entire list of wartime regulations as set down by the C.A.H.A. was adopted unanimously. Changes in playing rules, submitted by the O.H.A. subcommittee, also were adopted.

An amendment that only one import per season be allowed in the junior "C" series was set aside to become effective next year, as was the accompanying clause "that the entry of any composite team be refused by the O.H.A. executive."

In playoffs for senior "A" and junior "A" championships the O.H.A. shall receive 7½ per cent of the gross gate in all preliminary games and 15 per cent of the gross in all final games. In all other series, in all playoffs in grouns and between group winners until the finals, the association shall receive 5 per cent of the gross gate, and in all final games 15 per cent.

Change Junior Age Date

A change in date of qualifications for juniors was made. A player now under 20 by Nov. 1 is eligible for junior competition in the ensuing season. Only contentious point of the rule changes was that teams consist of thirteen players, plus two goalkeepers, but it was approved after much discussion.

In view of his long and faithful service to hockey and the O.H.A. in particular, the O.H.A. adopted a proposal to honor Capt. James T. Sutherland of Kingston, a life member and past president of the association, by naming the junior "B" championship trophy "The Sutherland trophy df. U-% ... ... land Cup." As a tribute to the late Sheriff J. F. Paxton, the intermediate "B" championship trophy was renamed the "Plaxton Cup."

Endorsement was made of a motion to make a grant of $500 to the Red Cross, to be paid through the branch of the society where the O.H.A. president resides.

The treasurer's report submitted by George Dudley revealed that the O.H.A. balance now is $1,979.14.

Ross Clemens of Hamilton succeeded James Douglas of Brantford as president. F. W.(Dinty) Moore of Port Colborne is first vice-president; George Panter, Gravenhurst, second vice-president; George S. Dudley of Midland, treasurer, and W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, secretary. All were elected by acclamation. The four members of the executive committee elected were S. R. Burrows of Belleville, Roy Reynolds of Chatham, J. M. Roxburg of Simcoe and J. J. McFadyen of Galt.

Week-End Stars

By The Canadian Press

Roy Conacher, Boston, whose two goals gave Bruins a 2-1 victory Saturday night over New York Rangers.

Tony Demers and Joe Benoit, Canadiens, who each scored twice as Montreal split a pair of week-end games with New York Americans, winning 3-1 on Saturday in Montreal and losing 2-1 last night in New York.

Syd Howe, Detroit, who continued to spark the Red Wings' attack by scoring a third period goal to give the Wings a 1-1 overtime tie with O'Flaherty, Demers and Benoit are three N.H.L. rookies who seem to know the way to the nets....The veteran Sandy Burrows of Belleville was re-elected to the O.H.A. executive on Saturday....Four jobs are open right now for baseball pilots. The only catch is the directors will expect the men who take the posts to win the pennant next season.... Chicago Black Hawks have yet to win at home or lose on the road.... Miller Outfielder Is Leading Hitter

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—(AP).—American Association pitchers were no puzzle to Albert (A) Wright, Minneapolis outfielder, the past season.

The 31-year-old mainstay of the Miller club led the Association in hits and home runs and gave an all-around display of heavy hitting, according to the official averages released to-day.

Wright's pace-setting average was .369, and he banged out thirty-nine homers, thirty-five doubles (five less than the leader), nine triples and collected 213 hits, one under the league-leading total of Stanley Bordagaray of Kansas City. The Minneapolis star also led in total bases with 383.

Second place in hitting went to Bordagaray, who had a .358 average. Other leaders included Phil Rizzuto, Kansas City, .347; Phil Weintraub, Minneapolis, .347, and Bob Estalella, Minneapolis, .341.

The Millers, placing four of the first ten hitters, led the league in hitting for the twelfth season, with an average of .307, an edge of nineteen points over pennant-winning Kansas City.

The reason for Sloan's quick relief is in the penetrating, stimulating warmth it brings to the stiff or painful part. And Sloan's does its work without rubbing. Just pat it on. It is not greasy. LEAFS BREAK EVEN IN WEEK-END'S TWO GAMES WITH CHICAGO

Schriner Sparks Sunday Win Of Toronto Team

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Seldom does a National Hockey League season go by without a new scoring sensation being uncovered, and this season it seems likely to be Tony Demers, the "Little Hercules" of Montreal Canadiens.

The bulging muscles that help him pack 160 pounds into a five foot seven-inch frame have also given him one of the hardest shots in the league. That blazing shot is rapidly making Demers the scourge of the league's goalies.

Demers is regarded as a rookie, despite the fact he signed a professional contract at the end of last season and took part in a couple of games. It was his second jump into the monied ranks for he turned pro once before with Canadiens three years ago.

However, he broke a leg in preseason training and saw action only in a few games at the end of the season.

Scored Five Goals.

Demers, who disclosed at the start of this season that it has always been his ambition to play pro hockey has accounted this season for exactly one-third of the 15 goals marked up by his team. Those five goals are enough to give him a share with George Allen of Chicago Black Hawks of first place among N.H.L. goal-getters.

Two of Tony's goals came during the week-end, as Canadiens split a pair of games with New York Americans. Demers got one as the Flying Frenchmen won their first game of the season by beating Americans 3-1 in Montreal Saturday night. He scored the other as Canadiens went down 2-1 to Americans in New York last night.

Now Bores In

There seems no reason why he can't keep close to his present pace, for Coach Dick Irvin has ironed out the one fault that could be found in Demers game up to this season. Tony just used to let his shot go from the blue-line, never bothering to bore in but Irvin has him firing from close range now.

Joe Benoit, who played amateur with Trail Smoke Eaters last season, also played a prominent part in Canadiens' first victory. He shot home two goals in 37 seconds in the Saturday contest. Americans' lone goal in that game was scored by Norm Larson, while their Sunday night goals went to Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty and Charlie Conacher.

In other week-end games, Boston Bruins topped New York Rangers 2-1 on Saturday night and then drew 1-1 last night with Detroit Red Wings while Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Chicago Black Hawks 4-2 in Chicago last night after dropping a 1-0 decision to the Hawks in Toronto on Saturday.

Dahlstrom Scores Goal

Leafs' Saturday loss brought an end to a five-game winning streak, the best compiled by any N.H.L. team in the still-young season. Cully Dahlstrom scored the winning tally in the second period and Goalie Paul Goodman did the rest by turning in a spectacular netminding effort.

Goodman, however, wasn't quite so fortunate in stemming the Leafs in Chicago as Dave Schriner accounted for two goals, and Gus Marker and Syl Apps one apiece. The Chicago scores went to Joe Cooper and Rookie Red Mackay. Apps' goal came on a breakaway late in the third period as Hawks put on the pressure in an attempt to deadlock the score.

The Rangers, last team in the league to leave the unbeaten list, were sent into the loss column for the first time as Roy Conacher found the range for a pair of goals. The only Ranger score went to Dutch Hiller. Art Jackson scored for the Bruins against Detroit, with Syd Howe being credited with the Red Wing score. The Bruins protested that Howe swung a high stick at the puck, making the goal illegal. Referee Frank Clancy maintained that the puck went in off Dit Clapper's hand, and therefore gave him no alternative but to award a goal to the Wings.

Ottawa To Meet Balmy Beach In East's Final

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

A flurry of football activity in committee rooms and on playing fields over the week-end left the Canadian football situation clarified in some aspects and confused in others.

Clarification Dept.: Ottawa Roughriders and Toronto Balmy Beach entered the Eastern final, eliminating Toronto Argonauts and Sarnia 2-26 Batery respectively.

Confusion Dept.: The Canadian Rugby Union ordered a two-game, total-points Eastern final, but Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, Toronto, still thinks his organization can arrange an East-West game.

Ottawa and Balmy Beach will play in Toronto on November 30 and in Ottawa on December 7. Undaunted, Hamilton is trying to arrange an exhibition game for Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Western champion, in Toronto on December 7 and another game between Winnipeg and the Eastern champions in Toronto on December 14.

Argos Beaten 8-1.

Saturday Ottawa beat Argos 8-1 to win the Interprovincial Union crown 20-2 and Balmy Beach blanked Sarnia 12-0 to take the Ontario Rugby Football Union title 24-0. But even in the heat of the two battles, much fan-interest was centred around the East-West game turmoil.

Sunday night the wires were hot with statements from the various parties concerned.

Fred Hamilton: "I have asked Balmy Beach and Ottawa to consent to the winner of the Eastern final meeting Winnipeg in Toronto on December 14 with proceeds to be split between Eastern and Western war charities and the Sports Service League. I have asked John Bannerman of Calgary, C.R.U. president, if his body would object to such an exhibition contest."

Joe Ryan, manager of Winnipeg Blue Bombers: "We agreed to play a game or games in the east to aid war services. We are still waiting to play if the east will provide an opponent. If we don't know for sure by Tuesday, Bombers will disband for this season."

James McCaffrey, manager of Ottawa Rough Riders: "We won't play in an east-west game without the sanction of the C.R.U." (The C.R.U. voted last week that it could not approve or arrange such a game.)

West's Clubs Barred

Western clubs were barred from C.R.U. competition this season when they failed to use C.R.U. playing rules. Winnipeg, Dominion champions in 1939, thus will not have a chance to defend its title officially, perhaps not even unofficially.

In Saturday's tussle Argos tried everything against Ottawa, but flash faded before sheer power. Sammy Sward scored seven of Ottawa's eight points, kicking two singles in addition to dribbling the ball over the Argos line for a touchdown after a Toronto snap went high. Tiny Herman converted the touchdown and the best Argos could do was a single on Earl Selkirk's long punt in the first quarter.

Beaches didn't have even that much trouble. For the second straight Saturday they played cosy football, waited for the breaks and got them. A pass from Art Walker to Johnny Manson went for a 25-yard gain and a touchdown in the final quarter, just after Hugh Tunnicliffe's field goal, second of the game for the Balmies. Don Crowe had booted the other in the first quarter. Tunnicliffe converted Manson's touch.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By the Canadian Press.)

Syd Howe, Detroit's Red Wings' deepndable marksman, maintained a two-point margin over his closest competition among National Hockey League pointmakers by scoring his team's goal last night in a 1-1 draw with Boston Bruins. Syl Apps of Toronto picked up a goal against Chicago to take over sole possession of second place, while George Allen and Mush March of Chicago and Gordie Drillon of Toronto remained deadlocked a point behind. The last spot in the Big Seven is shared by Bryan Hextall of New York Rangers and Defenceman Alex Motter of the Wings.

Hope Weygand Fighting Cheers Britain

(By MILO M. THOMPSON.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—(AP). — Britons, tremendously stimulated by events of the last few weeks, are starting to rebuild their pock-marked capital as earnestly as Hitler's forces try to tear it down.

They feel they have won the battle for survival.

They seem to have lost any fear whatsover of bombing or invasion. The bombing of the Italian felet at Taranto gave them a tremendous lift. The successes of the Greeks to date confirm their expressed belief that Italy is the Achilles' heel of the Axis, and that they will no longer fight alone. Most recent of the stimulating suggestions reaching them is bound up with the presence of General Maxime Weygand in Northern Africa.

In that connection I have it from a diplomat who talked to Weygand himself that the French military genius, though at present identified with the Vichy Government, has placed himself intentionally in a trading position so that if German demands are too great and German terms of peace too dishonorable, in his opinion, he can swing the military forces of Algeria (possibly Syria, too) in a new direction.

This will not be a matter of joining the Free French forces of General Charles de Gaulle. Weygand is not disposed to play second fiddle.

Flow of Supplies Impressive.

Another source of comfort to Britain is the accelerated speed of supplies from the United States. Both Lord Beaverbrook, Minister off Aircraft Production, and the Marquess of Lothian, Ambassador to Washington, have told me that the arrivals now are more than gratifying.

At the time of Britain's greatest need—when invasion was imminent and the Germans began to pave the way of it with that recklessness of aircraft attack which enabled the Royal Air Force to down more than 180 on a couple of days, and more than 130 on others — American planes and war materials were so slow arriving as to be an unimportant part of the picture.

Now that machine tools have been put to their task on each side of the Atlantic and assembly lines are operating full time, the flow has become impressive. Scarcely less impressive relatively is what Canada and Australia have been doing.

Britain worries about the availability of supplies less than about some means of financing it, because even her wealth is not inexhaustible.

Agree British Claim Low.

I have just completed a flying trip from the centre of the battle along with returning members of an American military mission and I know they share the opinion that the British authorities lean over backward in claiming war successes.

Take the number of German planes knocked out of the sky for instance. The neutral militarists say you have to increase the figures by approximately 60 per cent. to arrive at something like a true figure, so insistent are the British officials that they have absolute proof a plane is down before they claim it.

The same thing is true of figures of industrial losses. It is not propaganda when the British authorities say that most of the bombing has had small military significance.

This is not to diminish in any respect what has been happening in London or to take away from Londoners any of the respect due them for their will to withstand and to keep going under the hail of bombs.

The world's largest city probably will bear for ever the scars of the present conflict and there are appalling gaps in its lines of homes and business buildings.

The figures of property loss, if they could be compiled, would be astronomical. But London has a citizenry determined to die at its posts if necessary and proving night by night that this spirit can belong to shopkeepers, stenographers, factory workers, and porters, as well as to uniformed soldiery.

I have heard it said of sailors in a storm at sea that all is well when they are shouting and swearing; one can begin to despair when they are hushed in prayer alone.

The British grumble.

Typical is an incident with a taxicab driver the other day. I listened to his plaints for blocks and blocks —the detours around closed streets —holes in the road—petrol rationing—damage from falling fragments —irregular meals—damaged home—nights in poorly ventilated shelters.

"But," said I, "it is something one has to stand or give in."

He stiffened and grew stern. He drew up the car and said:

"Ye haven't pyed me yet and I myent get a tip, but I have to say ye're a lousy...."

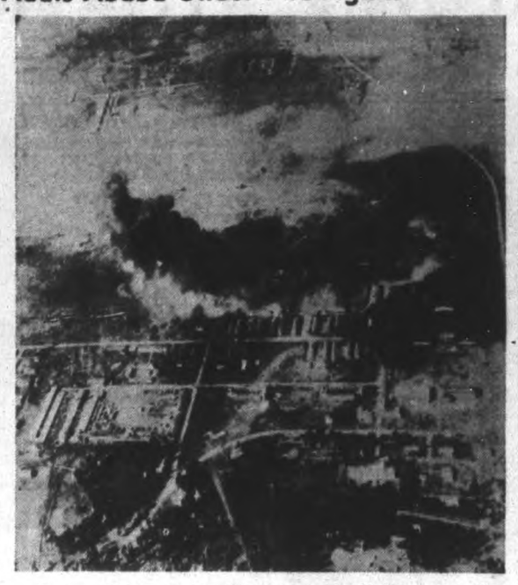
"And why?" said I.

"For even suggesting the possibility of giving in."

"You were doing the complaining," I reminded him.

"'Twas just my way of talking," said he.

Addis Ababa Under Fire Again



Just as it was under fire during the Italian campaign against Emperor Hailie Selassie's kingdom several years ago, Ethiopia's capital of Addis Ababa again is the target for raiding planes. This time they are of Britain's Royal Air Force. This picture was made from a raiding plane and shows the result of a direct hit on the military airdrome, where a gasoline fire was started.

Lloyd's does not list a Genovano but does have a Genoano of 6,067 tons. The Marinare, likewise, is not listed but the Marino O. is listed at 5,480 tons.)

The three German ships were among the four which attempted to dash to sea Nov. 15 but returned when the fourth, the Phrygia, was scuttled by its crew.

The Mexican foreign office on Friday night in its first official statement on that incident said it had concluded the three vessels fled back to port and the fourth was abandoned in the belief they had been hailed by British warships when destroyers of the United States neutrality patrol flashed a request for identification.

but a communique today said one section in the west of England was attacked heavily with damage to buildings and some residents killed and injured, from dusk to midnight last night.

British fliers who carried the air war into Germany and Italy Saturday night and Sunday morning brought back accounts of flaming destruction at Berlin, Essen, Leipzig and Duisberg-Ruhrort in Germany, at Boulogne, Brest and Lorient in France, and at Turin, where the Italian royal arsenal and the big Fiat works were attacked.

Bombs were dropped on the Krupp works at Essen and large fires were started in long, heavy attacks on the Pulitzstrasse and Lehrter freight yards, the Potsdamer station, and rail yards between Potsdamer and Anhalter stations, all in Berlin.

Pilots said they could see Berlin's famous Unter Den Linden and the Tiergarten clearly.

Concentrate On One Town

Anti-aircraft fire and fighter plane patrols beat back many of the German and Italian planes which attacked Britain in relays yesterday but the raiders broke through after dark.

Continuous relays of bombers concentrated on a town in western England where a home for the aged, two churches, two theatres and several shops were among the buildings hit.

When the attack dwindled near midnight townspeople toured the debris-strewn streets to view the damage.

A communique said "high explosive and many incendiary bombs were dropped and houses and commercial buildings were damaged by fire and blast. Some persons were killed and others injured."

Elsewhere, the communique added, "casualties as a whole were few although a small number of persons was killed."

Long range guns continued to take turns hurling shells across the Strait of Dover.

Yesterday German batteries near Cap Gris Nez shelled the Kent coast of England.

British coastal guns this morning began their own bombardment of the German-held coast of France.

hours yesterday the signing of tiny Slovakia as the sixth member of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance.

Slovakia, remnant of pre-war Czecho-Slovakia, followed Hungary and Rumania into the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo 10-year military and economic alliance with the customary ceremony in Berlin yesterday.

Blood Of Her Sons.

Premier Bela Tuka signed for the 20-month-old republic and pledged the "blood of Slovakia's sons" in upholding the pact, which requires the nation to come to the aid of Germany, Italy and Japan if they are attacked by some power not now at war.

Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische quoted Metaxas as saying that he was fighting for all the Balkans and declared the statement was "extraordinarily risky and dangerous."

(German circles in Sofia, Bulgaria, predicted Bulgaria would "seize the golden opportunity to obtain an outlet to the Aegean from Greece" after signing with the Axis. Bulgaria has wanted such an outlet ever since she lost it at the close of the first Great War, in which she was a German ally.

(Bulgarian Revisionists, on the other hand, were warned by the Yugoslav press to beware of adventures designed to annex territory from Southern Yugoslavia. The semi-official paper Vreme charged that Peter Doumanoff, who raised Bulgarian claims on Macedonia during debate in the Bulgarian parliament, was an "agent provateur who sought to embroil Yugoslavia with Germany and Italy," and added, "Yugoslavia is no house of cards.")

Albanian-Yugoslav border said the British planes and Greek artillery pounded retreating forces yesterday.

British non-combatant troops — their number undisclosed—were reported authoritatively last night to have been ferried across the Mediterranean by files of transports and landed at Greek ports where cheering, flag-waving Greeks welcomed them.

The British—many of them veterans of the last stand in Flanders and the retreat through Dunkirk—were specialists in equipment, transportation and supplies. They were sent as an operating force to work with the Royal Air Force in Greece rather than as reinforcements for the Greek army.

British Ready at Crete.

Reports said considerable forces of British and Greek troops were massed in an "expeditionary" army on the Greek island of Crete, awaiting the "zero hour" for a direct assault on the strongly fortified Dodecanese Islands.

Such an attack, it was indicated, might be sprung as soon as the British naval blockade in the Eastern Mediterranean weakens the Italian bases on the islands.

The high command communique said to-day that 1,500 prisoners were captured and quantities of guns seized in mopping up operations around Koritza.

Greek newspaper despatches from the Koritza front said the Greeks found 10 Italian airplanes burned at the Koritza airport, but that large quantities of food, munitions, tanks and guns were found in good condition.

These despatches said stores the Italians left behind included quantities of martial law declarations printed in Italian and Greek—and surmised these had been intended for use in Greek towns the Italians thought they would capture.

Anna Minch Victim?

LUDINGTON, Mich., Nov. 25 — (AP).—The body of a tall, red-haired man, believed to have been a member of the crew of the sunken Canadian freighter Anna C. Minch, was recovered from Lake Michigan Sunday near Big Point Sable coast guard station. The Canadian ship and the United States freighter William B. Davock both sank with all hands of their region in a storm November 11. In the clothing on the body found yesterday there was no identification, but the presence of a Canadian postage stamp in the pocket and Canadian soles on the shoes led to the belief that the victime had sailed with the Minch.

Work Railways Despite Bombs

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(CP).—British railwaymen continue to work during air raids to fulfill their "front line" responsibility of keeping the nation's railway services running.

According to a railway spokesman, all branches of the railway transport services operate as normally as possible during air attacks. Both passenger and freight trains continue to run, trainsmen and signalmen remain at their posts, and tickets are issued at the booking offices the same as usual.

"All other railway staff continue at work during air raids until danger is imminent in the immediate vicinity of the places at which they are working," he said. 'Work is resumed again as soon as the immediate danger is past.

"The closest co-operation exists betwen the railways and the railway trade unions in the maintenance of the railway transport services."

The spokesman said that as a safety factor, the speeds of trains are reduced during raids so that drivers have their trains fully under control in the event of a sudden emergency.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

"SOUL AND BODY."

"Soul and Body" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ Scientists of Peterborough on Sunday. The Golden Text was "O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard: which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved." (Psalms 66: 8, 9). Selections from the Bible included the following from Psalms 42: 11, "Why are thou cast down, O my soul? and why are thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God." Correlative citations from the Christian Science textbook included the following: "Science reveals Spirit, Soul, as not in the body, and God as not in man but as reflected by man. The greater cannot be in the lesser....This is a leading point in the Science of Soul, that Principle is not in its idea."

Legion Solicitors Are Not Endorsed

Attention of the citizens, merchants and manufacturers of Peterborough is called to the fact that solicitors have been at work in Peterborough, in the name of the Canadian Legion, and have been selling calendars and other pieces of merchandise, claiming that the proceeds will be devoted to work in connection with benefits for returned men.

The president of the Peterborough branch of the Legion, Fire Chief George Gimblett, has issued a warning to all in the city. No project in this direction is genuine unless it is operated through the Peterborough Branch. A telephone call to the Legion Hall will bring quick action against any posing as representatives of the Legion, and will verify statements made by genuine agents of the Legion.

Impregnating Pot Damaged In Fire

A fire that might have had serious consequences began about three o'clock on Saturday afternoon in the buildings of the Canadian General Electric Company. The blaze that had its origin in the impregnating pot, in the induction motor winding department, was brought under control by the workers in the department before the Fire Department had reached the building.

A composition is heated in the impregnating pot, and various parts of the induction motors are dipped into the pot to ensure their insulation. In some manner, as yet undetermined, the contents of the pot ignited. The amount of the damage has not been estimated, but it is not expected to be heavy. It will necessitate the emptying of the pot.

Motorist Is Arrested On Hit-and-Run Count

Charged with being the driver of the hit-and-run automobile that smashed into and damaged a parked car on George street last Saturday night, George Van Every was arrested early Sunday morning by Sergeant John Thompson and Provincial Traffic Officer L. A. McClure.

The damaged car, owned by Fred Cripps, was parked on George street north of London street when another automobile came along, collided with the motionless machine and then was driven off.

A taxi-driver who saw the affair followed the hit-and-run car and obtained the license number. Van Every's arrest followed shortly afterward.

The accused will appear for trial in police court tomorrow. The left rear fender, tail light, and rear bumper off Cripps' car were damaged and a tire was blown out.

Resume Hearing In Attempt To Upset Will

Hearing of the Mrs. Margaret Anker will case was resumed this morning in the Surrogate Court, with Judge D. B. Coleman of Whitby presiding.

Testamentary incapacity of the testatrix in altering her original will is alleged by Mrs. Catherine Hill, a sister of the deceased.

Mrs. Anker had lived at St. Joseph's Hospital from 1932 until her death in February, 1940. By a will drawn in 1932, Mrs. Anker devised certain small amounts of her estate to beneficiaries, leaving the residue to two nieces, Etta Hill, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Hill, and Vera O'Connor. The second will was made on August 10, 1934, by which the residue was given to St. Joseph's Hospital.

W. B. Gordon is solicitor for the executor, M. James O'Brien; Jacob Low for Mrs. Catherine Hill and Etta Hill; R. I. Moore, K.C., Lindsay for Mrs. B. Zoofeldt; William Fox for the Sisters of St. Joseph's Hospital, and C. P. Glover is representing the Official Guardian in behalf of L. O'Connor, a minor beneficiary.

Witnesses called this morning by Mr. Gordon were: Darrel Rose, taxi proprietor; Rev. Vincent J. Corkery, chaplain of St. Joseph's Hospital; Dr. Francis A. O'Reilly; and T. A. Mackay, joint manager of the Bank of Montreal.

Darrel Rose recalled occasions in a period of 1934, through September and October, when he took Mrs. Anker to visit friends of hers, go to the theatre, to Barries' Limited to buy a hat, to Hooper's for tea, and to G. N. Gordon's office.

"She seemed very bright. Her memory was good. She would tell me where she wanted to go," Mr. Rose said in reply to W. B. Gordon.

Mr. Rose said he had taken Mrs. Anker on 95 per cent. of her motor driving. The total bill might have been $100.

"I have heard her talking to Mrs. Hill, Miss O'Brien and others, and I though she talked very sensibly. There was nothing that she ever said that would cause me to think she was out of her mind. She talked normally when she was with me," witness said to Mr. Low.

Rev. V. J. Corkery, chaplain of St. Joseph's Hospital, testified that he had known Mrs. Anker and might sometimes have seen her once or twice a day and on other occasions probably only three or four times a week. He would meet her in the hall, see her in the sun room or in her room as he was passing.

"She would call me by my name. At times she would enquire about my mother. She used to know her."

Mr. Gordon: "What would you say about her mentality in 1934?"

Answed: "I would say she was quite normal.

"What about her memory?"

Answer: "For a woman of her years I think her memory was normal."

Mr. Fox asked the question: "Did you at any time refuse to hear her confession?"

Father Corkery: "Never."

Judge Coleman: "You never doubted her mental capacity?"

Father Corkery: "No."

Mr. Low: "Are you a brother of John R. Corkery?" "Yes."

"And Mr. Corkery is solicitor for the Sisters of the hospital in this action?"

Rev. Father Corkery: "Yes, but I did not think of that until you mentioned it."

"But you did know it?" "Yes."

"Did you ever see G. N. Gordon at the hospital?" "No."

'Did Mrs. Anker ever talk to you about her will?". "No."

"It is customary for people to do that?" "No."

"Did you ever hear Mrs. Anker threatening nurses with her cane or making other disturbance?"

"I think on one occasion about two years ago, I heard her talking rather loudly. I was at the end of the hall. I think she was saying "I don't want to go back into my room." When I came along she was normal with me. She was then either at her door or in her room."

Mr. Low: "Did she ever tell you she was going to leave the hospital any money?" Ans.: "No."

"Did you ever hear anyone say she was going to leave the hospital anything?" "No."

"You never heard anything like that at the hospital?" "No."

Dr. Francis A. O'Reilly testified that he first met Mrs. Anker professionally on August 1, 1934. She complained of pains in her chest and he examined her.

Mr. Gordon: "What was that pain?" Ans.: "Heart pains."

Dr. O'Reilly said he obtained at that time a medical history of the deceased. He did not notice any mental impairment.

"Did you find later that anything she told you was untrue?" "No."

"Did she have any delusions or hallucinations?"

Dr. O'Reilly—"I did not notice any."

Witness said he found a prior condition of paralysis in her left arm and leg. She was in indifferent health.

Dr. O'Reilly said Mrs. Anker was in failing health from her years when he saw her. He last attended her for an abdominal pain in September, 1934.

Mr. Gordon—"Did she remember your name after the first call?" "Yes."

Mr. Lowe—"Did she tell you she had a stroke?" "Yes, she said she had been seriously ill before she came to Peterborough."

Mr. Lowe—"What do you mean by failing health?" "She had suffered a stroke. There was an arterial change, hardening of the arteries."

Mr. Gordon—"When you made out your medical report on August 1st, 1934, what do yo say about the effect of a prior stroke in regard to her memory?" Ans. "I don't recall any impairment of memory."

"I did not notice any mental derangement," Dr. O'Reilly said.

T. A. Mackay, joint manager of the Bank of Montreal, recalled that Mrs. Anker had transferred an account from Lindsay in the autumn of 1932. She engaged a safety deposity box. The records showed that the box was opened on August 8, 1934 by Mrs. Anker, who was accompanied by Sister M. St. Joseph, and again on August 11, when Mrs. Anker was also with Sister St. Joseph.

"She said she wanted to look over the contents in the quiet of the hostital, and desired to take them with her," Mr. Mackay said in reply to Mr. Gordon. "I thought she was quite able to have the contents, and allowed her to take them out. I asked her to return them in a few days and she said she would. It was about a week later when the contents of the box were returned."

Mr. Gordon"Were you of the opinion Mrs. Anker was capable of looking after her affairs when she took the contents of the safety deposit box?"

Mr. Mackay— "I shouldn't have let her take the documents if I thought her incapable."

Witness said that shortly after the conents were removed Mrs. Hill or Miss Hill telephoned him that he should not have let Mrs. Anker take them. "I told her I thought Mrs. Anker was quite capable of taking them out, and that is still my opinion. I told the person who telephoned me, that I would advise her if there were any other transactions. Miss Hill was with Mrs. Anker when the box was engaged, and Miss Hill said then she would be with Mrs. Anker any time the box was opened and she did any business."

Mr. Mackay said he went to the hospital on one occasion, about a cheque from Mrs. Anker. He said he would have to confer with Miss Hill. Mrs. Anker said that was not necessary.

To Mr. Low, witness said the contents of the box were returned by Sister St. Joseph on August 17, 1934. He said he sold bonds for Mrs. Anker on instructions from Miss Hill.

Mr. Low—"Why "

Mr. Mackay—"Miss Hill was taking an interest in Mrs. Anker's estate and was looking after her accounts."

"When was this bond transaction?" Judge Coleman asked.

Mr. Mackay, from his records replied that it was February 16, 1937. The proceeds were deposited to the credit of Mrs. Anker. It was as a courtesy, Mr. Mackay said, that he had told Miss Hill he would advise her if the safety box was to be opened after the occasion of her protest.

His Honour—"When was it Mrs. Anker told you it would not be necessary to consult Miss Hill?"

Mr. Mackay—"Some time prior to the withdrawal of the contents from the box."

The case is continuing this afternoon.

A British flying patrol which has completed 1,000,000 miles used enough gasoline to drive 500 family cars around the world.

Rambling Reporters

IT'S DIFFERENT HERE.

One of Canada's war guests was given a jolt last week, and to-day she knows that customs in Canada are certainly different than in her homeland, England. Over there it is the proper thing for a child or adult to approach any elderly person who is loaded down with parcels and offer to assist in carrying them.

The girl, who attends Collegiate, was walking down George Street when she saw an old lady carrying several parcels. She stepped up and offered to assist. Instead of thanking her, the woman almost shouted. "Get out of here, you bold brat, or I'll call the police," and the bewildered child promptly went. Perhaps it is so unusual for anyone in Canada to extend such a courtesy that the woman figured the child had an ulterior motive.—MoG.

A POWERFUL DOG.

A week ago Vince Whittington's big police dog Rango disappeared. Diligent search throughout the Cavan district and several inquiries failed to reveal any trace of the missing dog. His disappearance was solved on Sunday when the dog struggled painfully into the yard of the service station out on Highway 28, in a pitiful condition. On one hind leg was a fox trap and attached to the trap chain was a block of wood. The dog was carrying the block of wood in his mouth and had made his way for some distance after tearing the trap loose. He was quite thin, and only the fact that he is a powerfully built dog made it possible for him to get home.—MoG.

The groundhog was out in a field eating fall wheat, and the letter received by the Examiner ends "If anyone disputes this, we still have the ground hog, and we can prove our story."—JWH.

Temple on the north side of the village on Sunday at 5.30 p.m. It was believed to have started from the fireplace in the living-room, getting into the wall and blazing up through the second storey and the roof. The Fire Brigade responded to the call, but it was nearly 7.30 o'clock before the fire was extinguished. War 25 Years Ago

Nov. 25, 1915. — General Sir Charles Townshend's force at Ctesiphon began retirement on Kut-el-Amara when the Turks brought up reinforcements from Baghdad. Herbert L. Samuel succeeded Winston Churchill in the British Cabinet.

Earl Of Athlone Inspects Highland Unit

OTTAWA, Nov. 25—While chill winds swept a muddy Lansdowne Park on Friday afternoon, His Excellency, the Governor General, reviewed the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders. Inspection of the recently mobilized battalion, which displayed military finish not usually associated with so short a period of active service, seemed highly pleasing to the commander-in-chief of all Canada's armed foces.

At Saluting Base

Highlight of the inspection was the march past in column of route. At the saluting base with the Governor General were Brigadier Logie F. Armstrong, D.O.C., Military District No. 3, and Lieut.-Colonel R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M.C., officer commanding.

The men marched with clockwork precision. Their bayonets didn't flash—for the day was grey, and bright sunshine did not flood the field until the ceremony was over. A few drops of rain were unheeded by His Excellency, who similarly disregarded heavy mud to inspect closely the bearing and equipment of the troops.

Inspects Motor Transport

Despite the almost bitter weather, men and officers alike wore no greatcoats with their battle dress as they stood with ramrod straightness while the Governor General went up and down the ranks. His Excellency apparently had little fault to find. He afterwards inspected the motor transport section of the unit, in charge of Second Lieut. J. E. Gillespie, inspection officer.

The Governor General was attended by Col. H. Willis O'Connor and Capt. T. R. C. Goff. Staff officers in attendance at the inspection were headed by Col. L. P. Sherwood, officer commanding the Ottawa Area Command, and included Major Richard Taylor, Capt. R. Fraser and Second Lieut. John Cunningham, of Kingston.

Kinsmen Clubs Hold District Rally

Seventy-five Kinsmen representing practically all of the clubs in District 6 which extends from Montreal west to Sault Ste. Marie met at the regular semi-annual meeting held in the Kawartha Club on Saturday.

War activities took the paramount position in the day's deliberations and the highlight of the program was the talk at the evening dinner meeting by Hal Rogers, founder of the Kinsmen Clubs. He is chairman of the War Service Council for the National Association of Kinsmen Clubs, and his outline of activities indicated clearly that Kinsmen across Canada were doing a full share of the essential work of Canada's war effort, along with taking advantage of the great scope for service work which has arisen in conjunction with war problems. He explained too that many clubs had their membership depleted by enlistments.

Vern Selkirk, president of the Peterborough Club tendered a welcome to the visiting delegates but had to leave the meeting to attend to business. At the banquet, Lorne Bateman, vice president of the club acted as toastmaster, doing a fine job. Besides the founder Hal Rogers, District Governor W. Honey of Toronto spoke at the banquet.

During the afternoon the district executive along with representatives from each club met in business discussions, and the district service council headed by Harvey Lyons also held a session.

The convention was not only a district council meeting but an interclub meeting as well and the various club representatives had an opportunity to compare notes on the different activities which were being sponsored by the clubs during wartime.

Members were on hand from Toronto (four clubs), North Bay, Sudbury, Ottawa, Oshawa, Kingston and all the smaller places in this area. Major Jim Turnbull, second-in-command of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, along with Lieut. Don Scott of the same unit, both Kinsmen came down from Ottawa for the meeting. Douglas Crewe of Oshawa, Past National President and Mev. Smith of Ottawa, District Deputy Governor were both in attendance.

Man Given 10 Days Assaulting Officer

Edward Reynolds who pleaded guilty last week to assaulting Sergt. John Thompson while the latter in the discharge of his duties as a peace officer was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to twenty days in jail.

Called upon to give evidence this morning Chief Constable Newhall said that Reynolds had admitted assaulting Sergt. Thompson but said that he had been very drunk at the time and was very sorry for what had occurred.

It was explained that the accused had been signed as an army cook.

However after scanning the record presented to him by Crown Attorney McElderry, Magistrate Langley decided that a jail sentence would best meet the ends of justice.

STEWART'S HALL

Springville Y.P.S. Presents Play

STEWART HALL, Nov. 25—(ENS)—The Stewart Hall group of Red Cross workers met at the hall on Thursday afternoon, with twenty-one ladies in attendance. During the afternoon a Red Cross quilt, donated by one of the members, was quilted, also Red Cross sewing finished. Arrangements to have another quilt ready for next Thursday were completed. A pot-luck supper was served and everyone enjoyed a social hour.

Concert In Hall

On Friday evening a concert in aid of Red Cross was given at the hall. The opening number was a piano solo by Mrs. Harold Dawson. Several vocal numbers were given by Miss Mary Robson of Springville, also readings by Miss Velma Staples and several instrumental selections by Happy Staples and Laura Neals, violin and piano.

Springville young couple presented a one-act play entitled "Hannah's Pitcher," which was introduced by Miss Mary Staples. It was quite humorous and much enjoyed by the audience.

Four of the Stewart Hall school girls sang "Playmates" and the junior pupils put on an exhibition of tap-dancing. The entertainment was brought to a close by singing "The King."

Lunch was served. Proceeds of the evening amounted to $21 and a sale of home-made candy by the Red Cross members brought in $3.00.

Presbyterial Officers Visit Hastings WMS

HASTINGS, Nov. 25.—(ENS). — In conformity with the new plan of holding meetings with each W.M.S. Auxiliary in this section instead of a single sectional rally, the officers of the Peterborough Presbyterial W.M.S. of the Presbyterian church put on the programme on Thursday at St. Andrew's church, Hastings.

Mrs. Carman Carlaw of Warkworth, acted as chairman, and opened the meeting with prayer. Mrs. A. G. Thompson of Campbellford, read the scripture lesson from St. John 21, after which she gave a commentary on the chapter, stressing especially the essentials of a consecrated life.

The missionary review roll-call was conducted by Mrs. Carlaw.

Mrs. H. B. Wilson, Hastings, took up the offering and Mrs. Carlaw pronounced offertory prayer, then Mrs. C. E. Meiklejohn of Warkworth, offered prayer.

Mrs. Thompson gave the report of the recent W.M.S. provincial board meeting. Members of the Auxiliary were urged to increase their usefulness. The Japanese with their present aggressive policy, acknowledge the missionary as their worst enemy.

Mrs. Milne of Campbellford, sang a solo, which was much enjoyed, entitled "An Evening Prayer."

Mrs. John Storey gave an interesting and illuminating talk on 'Missionary Education.' It is not just being made acquainted with missionary enterprise but it is a training in a certain basic concept of Christianity. Meetings should be carefully planned before the beginning of the year. There should be one central thought or meaning, in every meeting, and everything in the program should be in harmony with that theme.

Afternoon tea was served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Mrs. Carlaw thanked the Hastings Auxiliary for its hospitality and Mrs. J. A. Brown thanked the Presbyterial officers for presenting such an inspirational program and assured them how much it was appreciated by the local auxiliary.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, November 26

ENERGETIC and persistent application to new and important projects is under definite impetus for success and progress, according to the strongly favoring planetory operations. This highly productive work may be in association with prominent and influential personages or with groups having rather advanced and ambitious objectives in relation to political, educational, social and humanitarian expansion.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of lively, productive, and gratifying experiences, with associations of a most profitable and ambitious nature with those of prestige and influence in both social, business circles.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, hard working and have advanced and progressive ideas and ambitions.

Airs by Stephen Foster Fun to Sing on Dates

Dixie Songbook a Hit

More popular than ever—the airs of the old South, the beloved Stephen Foster ditties. These winter evenings you can have such fun with your friends, getting out your songbooks and singing away.

What a catchy swing to Foster's "Oh, Susanna," its unforgettable refrain:

"Oh, Susanna, oh, don't you cry for me.
I've come from Alabama wid my banjo on my knee."

Another Stephen Foster song that everybody loves is "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground." Sing with lots of feeling:

"Back in de cornfield
Hear dat mournful sound.
All de darkies am a-weeping
Massa's in de cold, cold ground."

Your group will want to sing a spiritual, too. "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" is a favorite:

"A band of angels comin' after me,
Comin' for to carry me home."

Then there are the beautiful love songs "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair," "Darling Nellie Gray."

Words and music of these and many other favorites are given complete in our songbook. Has 27 airs—among them spirituals, ballads and eight Stephen Foster songs. All have guitar diagrams.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

THE "GRAND COUP"

NO PLAY has a fancier name than the "grand coup." It is always a pretty thing, whenever executed, but is not nearly so difficult as some of the elaborate squeezes and lead-throwing end-plays. The times when it is absolutely necessary are sometimes quite easy to recognize, and the player who understands the mechanics of it can hardly fail then to employ it properly.

The "grand coup" is simply one form of "trump coup." The latter is used in a situation which shows one defender holding a trump honor with so many guards that the declarer cannot finesse through it often enough to catch it. If he plays normally, he will wind up being obliged to lead from his tenace to the opponent thereby giving the latter a trump trick. But if he shortens his trump holding by apparently unnecessary ruffing, the lead may be in the dummy on the crucial trick, so that the defender has to play before the declarer. If the cards ruffed in this process were normal winners, the play is called a "grand coup."

	♠ 6 2 ♥ J 3 ♦ K J 10 8 3 ♣ A K J 10
♠ 10 ♥ A K 7 5 2 ♦ 7 6 5 4 2 ♣ Q 8	W. N. E. S.	♠ Q 8 7 3 ♥ Q 9 6 ♦ A 9 ♣ 9 7 5 3
	♠ A K J 9 5 4 ♥ 10 8 4 ♦ Q ♣ 6 4 2

A double "grand coup" was absolutely necessary on this deal to make the 4-Spade contract by South, both opponents having bid hearts and East having doubled. When the declarer has to shorten his trumps with three ruffs of winners, which is extremely rare, the play is called a triple "grand coup."

Here West took two high hearts. East wanted to make dummy ruff, to protect his own trump holding, so gave a high-low signal. After dummy trumped the third heart, declarer finessed the spade J, dropping the 10 and marking the need of a double grand coup. Natural play would end with his leading trumps to East for the setting trick. He had to pare his own trumps to the same number as East, requiring two ruffs.

First he led his diamond Q, overplayed by the K, to East's A. The latter returned his diamond 9. Though the dummy could win this, South trumped with his 4. He led to the club J, then ruffed the diamond J with the 5. Next he led to the club K, cashed the club A and led the diamond 10. East now had only his three trumps, so the spade A, K and 9 took the finishing tricks.

Tomorrow's Problem

	♠ A ♥ A 10 8 ♦ K Q 8 7 4 3 ♣ A 6 4
♠ Q 10 7 6 3 ♥ 7 5 4 2 ♦ 10 ♣ J 9 2	W. N. E. S.	♠ K J 8 5 4 ♥ J ♦ J 9 6 5 ♣ K Q 3
	♠ 9 2 ♥ K Q 9 6 3 ♦ A 2 ♣ 10 8 7 5

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

What little card held by the defenders makes it impossible for South to make 7-Hearts on this deal after a lead of the diamond 10?

Warden McColl Is Given Mantel Clock

Warden John McColl was presented with a mantel chimes clock by his colleagues of the County Council at dinner in the Elite Court Saturday, and Mrs. McColl received a bouquet of flowers.

Deputy-reeve A. W. Archibald of North Monaghan was chairman of the dinner, a year-end felicity which was begun by the late James Milby.

"We extend to you our hearty congratulations on the administration of this county, which you, as warden, have guided so successfully this year," Mr. Archibald said, in making the presentation. "It has been a privilege and a pleasure to serve with you. At this time, too, we reaffirm our loyalty to Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth, and all which they stand for.

Our prayers go out for our armed forces on the sea, on the land and in the air, and to our kinfolk in the Mother Country who are valiantly withstanding the onslaught of barbarism.

May we, in conclusion, express to you our appreciation of your kindly leadership this year, ans as a remembrance of our associations we ask you to accept this gift, hoping that it will recall your fellow members of these sessions."

The presentation of flowers to Mrs. McColl was made by Miss B. E. Stainton of the county clerk's office.

Little speeches endorsing Mr. Archibald's address were made by E. A. Peck, K.C., county solicitor; Frank C. Paterson, agricultural representative, and members of the council.

Warden McColl thanked the members for their kind expressions and also their gifts to his wife and himself, and said he would always gratefully remember the members of this year's council.

At the conclusion of the week's session Saturday afternoon, Warden McColl briefly referred to the year's work, especially mentioning the fact that the county roads committee had to hold four extra meetings as a result of the absence of E. A. Chalmers, county engineer, who had enlisted for active service and was now in Great Britain. The Council was for months without efficient direction of Mr. Chalmers, and during that time the committee was faced with difficulties which would otherwise not have arisen.

A tribute to the roads committee was also paid by Warden McColl on their deal in buying a new truck. "It was one of the closest deals I have ever seen," he said, and added about $1,400 was saved by the committee this year.

Reeve A. B. Mann, chairman of the roads committee, said that in E. A. Chalmers, Peterborough County had one of the best engineers in the province. "We had to carry on the best we could without him. One reason why we could not provide the council with a complete statement of road costs at these sessions was because we did not have Mr. Chalmers with us, and Mr. MacIver has not been with us long enough to expect the information from him."

The council decided to send a letter of good wishes and Christmas greetings to Mr. Chalmers, on Reeve Gifford's motion, seconded by Reeve N. Lean.

FRASERVILLE

Friends Shower Mary Atchison

FRASERVILLE, Nov. 25 (ENS).—Miss Mary Atchison, whose wedding takes place today (Saturday) was honored with a miscellaneous shower, held at the home of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. S. Todd, on Wednesday night.

Games and contests were enjoyed for the first part of the evening, after which the main event took place. To the strains of the wedding march, a little "bride" and "groom" Eileen Gainer and Billy Douglas marched down the stairs and into the room where the bride was seated, and a very attractive basket in pink and white heavily laden with gifts was brought in.

The bride's sister, Mrs. W. Gainer, sat on her left side, while her cousin Miss Mary Lawrence sat on her right and helped unwrap the beautiful gifts.

Mary expressed her appreciation and asked everyone to come to see her at her new home in Cavan.

Mr. R. Finlay spoke a few words on behalf of the Sunday School and other organizations of the regret of losing Mary from the community.

A short program followed: duet by Eileen Gainer and Billy Douglas "Billy Boy" and encore "The Woodpecker Song"; reading "How to Cook a Husband," Mrs. R. Finlay; trio, Mr. and Mrs. Gainer with mouth organs, accompanied by Mrs. P. Monorief on the auto harp; reading by Jean Holden; duet and encore by Orville Monorief and Jimmy Adams; reading by Mrs. H. Oullette "Advice to the Girls"; duet, "Juanita" by Mrs. W. Gainer and Mrs. P. Monerief. God Save the King was sung and a delicious lunch served close to the midnight hour.

Grant Of $1,000 Recommended Plowing Match

To their successors of 1941, the County Council on Saturday recommended for consideration at the January sessions a grant of $1,000 for the provincial plowing match which is being tentatively assigned to Peterborough County next year.

Expecting a deputation from the Peterborough Plowmen's Association before the week ended, the Council discussed the question of a grant Friday morning, and had their answer ready after they had heard a deputation of eight members Saturday, for whom the speakers were Howard Quinn, president; Vincent Eastwood, Alex Huston and F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative.

With the Peterborough Exhibition rubbed out for next year by the military occupation of their property, and some prospect that Norwood Fair directors may suspend operations until after the war, several members pointed out that these were two customary grants of which the 1941 council would be relieved, $500 plus $300, and it was also felt that the two smaller fairs in the northern section of the county might discontinue operations under the stress of war. Possibly Reeve W. A. Anderson had that prospective margin in mind when he suggested that $800 be recommended to the incoming council. Reeve A. B. Mann said he would support $1,000.

The vote of the $1,000 proposal was not recorded, but an unofficial listing of those who supported this amount was as follows: Wallace Shearer, Allan B. Mann, Gilbert McIlmoyle, James Gifford, Percy Davidson, Martin Coughlin, David Curtin, W. A. Anderson, Isaac Anderson, and J. R. Thompson.

Reference of the decision to the authority of the new council was made in a resolution by Reeve Scriver of Lakefield, seconded by Reeve Martin of Dummer.

Horses Not Available

Reeve M. H. Johnston said he did not support the proposed undertaking by the county for the reason that many teams of horses would be needed for the match, that he had made quite a number of enquiries as to what horse power could be obtained, and not one team was offered.

"They'll have trouble enough as they go along, and there is no use discouraging them at the start," Reeve W. A. Anderson remarked. He said he wasn't interested in the slow, straight plowing at the match, but he believed the demonstration of all kinds of new home and farm machinery and improvements was of general interest to farmers.

Mr. Quinn and Mr. Eastwood said the city had already expressed its willingness to give its assistance, and the only contribution sought from the county as a grant. The local association would look after the organization details.

Eggs Are Easier On Farm Market

Prices on the farmer's market on Saturday showed a steadiness to last week's prices with grade A eggs easing a little to a top demand of 45 cents a dozen.

Eggs were plentiful and the prices ranged from 45 cents downward to to 40 and 37, with some farmers selling pullet eggs for 33. There was a quantity of chickens, the majority being of splendid quality. Top price was 25 with a wide variety downward to 18, but the prevailing price was 22. Year olds sold at from 15 to 20.

Butter was steady at 30 cents but a few farmers got 32. There were a few turkeys, hens about ten pounds each which sold at 25 cents a pound and only a few geese at the same price. Ducks were plentiful and the general price was 25 cents, but a few could be had as low as 20.

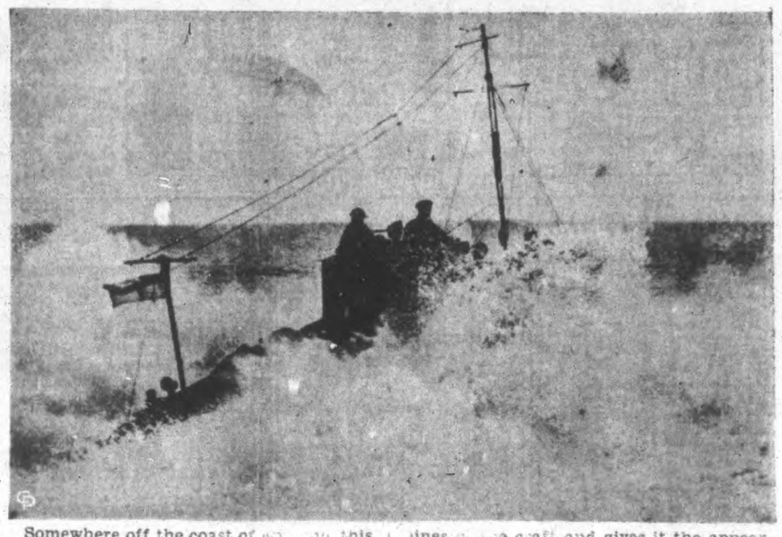
Potatoes ranged in price from 1.00 to 1.10 a bag, late varieties commanding the higher price.

There was some lovely pork for sale, and the price was steady, 15 cents a pound for hind quarters and 13 for fronts. Lamb sold at 22 and 16 cents a pound.

Apples were plentiful, and the price in bushel hampers was as follows: Spies, 1.25; MacIntosh, 1.00; Talman Sweets, 1.50; Baxters, 1.25; and Cranberry Pippins, 1.15.

There was the usual amount of garden truck, honey and even a few flowers, and one farmer had a large basket of artichokes on his table.

Torpedo Boats Help Patrol Eng lish Channel



Somewhere off the coast of [illegible], this torpedo boat is really making the spray fly as it speeds along on patrol duty. So high does the water leap that it obscures the lines of the craft and gives it the appearance of a submarine. Scores of these tiny craft are doing a full-size job in protecting Britain from raiders.

Over The Fence But Not Out

A Royal Air Force sergeant-pilot concludes a busy day with this leap over a fence enclosing a field a few miles from his home airport. While on a lone patrol, he encountered a flight of Messerschmidt 109's over the mouth of the Thames estuary. The enemy refused to give battle and turned back. Tommy chased them clear to the French coast where he cut off and downed one. Over the Channel, on the way home, his Spitfire ran out of gas and he glided to this little field where he set his craft down in a perfect three-pointer.

Winter Shipping For Welsh Coal

SWANSEA, WALES, Nov. 25. — (CP).—West Wales antharcite coal circles have high hopes that trade with Canada will be continued during the winter months.

In view of the external markets lost to the anthracite trade in France and Italy, there is grave danger that many colleries may have to close down.

A conference, attended by D. R. Grenfell, minister for mines, was held of all the interests concerned and it is understood that negotiations which have been proceeding here and at London for an arrangement whereby shipments to Canada would continue all the year round are making favorable headway.

Usually the season extends from April to November and during that period substantial trade is carried on with the Dominion. The St. Lawrence river is closed by ice in the other months and shipments, in the ordinary course, cease until the first open water.

Pilots Airplane Lying Prone

LONDON, Nov. 25 — (CP). — Fighter pilots of the future will fly their super-fast machines while lying on their stomachs because this will be the only way the human frame can bear the strain of banking and pulling out from a dive at the speeds certain to be reached, the Evening Standard Air Correspondent predicts.

Pilots flying in the orthodox sitting position would be more liable to "black out"—a loss of vision caused by an abnormally sharp movement which produces pressure inside the skull and acts on blood vessels in the abdomen. Dilation of these vessels withdraws blood from the brain into the abdominal pool, but if the airman is lying down while taking sharp curves there is less tendency for the blood to surge into the abdominal pool.

The correspondent did not believe the prone position would make much difference to the pilot's efficiency as a flier. He would be able to see everything below, above and around him. Mirrors might help him see to the rear.

Moreover, the prone position of the pilot would assist the streamline of the fuselage of the superfighter in that it could be reduced in depth, more rounded, and possibly shortened.

Naval Guns Rock Desert Outpost

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Nov. 25.—(AP).—British naval gunners were officially announced today to have pounded the Italian desert outpost at Maktila, Egypt, while Royal Air Force bombers smashed at other of Marshal Graziani's bases along the Libyan coast.

(London reports said the concerted attack was made the night of November 20 and identified Maktia as the Italians' most advanced camp in the drive into Egypt—about 15 miles east of the main Italian position at Sidi Barrani).

The new bombardments were said to have been made shortly after an Italian radio broadcast that Marshal Graziani had completed construction of a military highway from Salum to Sidi Barrani and solved his troops' water supply problem with discovery of new wells.

The announcement of the bombardment did not disclose whether the road or wells were damaged.

ASTHMA BRONCHITIS AND TOUGH, HANG-ON COUGHS DUE TO COLDS YIELD FASTER TO BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE

Township Area School Plan Means $11,000

Ratepayers of rural public schools in Peterborough county are depriving themselves of approximately $11,000 in Departmental grants by retaining the system of three-trustee sections instead of adopting the township area plan which was adopted by five schools in Otonabee township three years ago.

This information was given to the county council Saturday afternoon by the two local inspectors, R. F. Downey and Leo W. Copp.

The school sections comprising the part of a township area in Otonabee are receiving all the money they can earn in grant, Mr. Copp said, and although the township as a whole is thereby saving $800 it is foregoing about $1,000 by reason of the other sections clinging to the old system.

Virtual losses by townships which continue the administering of their schools by separate boards of trustees composed of three members were quoted by Mr. Copp as follows, but the figures he quoted were subject to the general reduction of 15 per cent this year:—

Asphodel $831.84; Belmont $2436; Burleigh $1168; Chandos $1928; Douro $1174; Dummer $1086; Otonabee $1185; North Monaghan $300; Harvey $1441 and Smith $1386.

The total, Mr. Copp said, was $12,940, money which could be obtained in those townships by the adoption of the township board system. With the 15 per cent reduction the total was around $11,000.

Although there has been the fifteen per cent cut, already mentioned, the Department has been paying more money this year than in any previous year. This did not mean that Peterborough schools were getting their share. A substantial part of the increase was explained by the growth of township school areas throughout the province.

The corresponding loss by school ratepayers in Hastings county was $5,100, due to the fact that the new system was in operation in various townships in the northern section of that county.

Mr. Downey and Mr. Copp collaborated in giving the council this information. In Otonabee township five out of sixteen school sections were operating under the township area plan. This area is now in third year, has reduced the cost of school supplies to one-fifth of what it used to be, has supplied manual training with necessary equipment, with other advantages, and the school rate in the area is still less than it was.

Replies to questions asked by some of the members of the council frankly acknowledged that the Department does not consider the old type of school board satisfactory.

Insure Independence If She Avoids Aid To Axis Powers

LONDON, Nov. 26 — (CP). — Great Britain madea bid to-day for Bulgaria's neutrality in the war with a promise that Britain will strive to ensure Bulgaria's integrity and independence in any eventual peace settlement.

Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said in a written statement in the House of Commons:

"Lord Halifax (the Foreign Secretary) welcomes this opportunity of stating that, provided Bulgaria does not join or assist, either actively or passively, the enemies of Great Britain, or attack her Allies, it is the intention of His Majesty's Government to do their best to ensure that in any eventual peace settlement to which Great Britain is a party, integrity and independence of Bulgaria shall be fully respected."

(The proposal that Bulgaria not attack Britain's "Allies" obviously was a reference to the latent threat, reported from the Balkans, that Bulgaria might attempt to wrest from Greece a corridor to the Aegean Sea through Macedonia, with Axis encouragement.)

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(CP)—Three trucks of an American Ambulance unit, packed with clothing, blankets and medical supplies, sped today for the west of England to assist in the area severely damaged in Sunday night raids.

The Bristol Evening Post advised officials of the Allied Relief fund, donors of the supplies, this morning that help was needed.

Mild Excitement In The Neighborhood

The wreckage of German warplanes is getting so commonplace throughout England that hardy Britons now take them in their stride. This big bomber that crashed into a house at Hornchurch attracted no more than a handful of neighbors. The caption failed to state if anyone were in the building wrecked by the fallen raider.

Britain Staggers, Girds On

Writer Sees Need Of Aid Acute, Real Bomb, Sub Toll Hidden

By DREW MIDDLETON
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 26 (AP)—Britain, struggling with bomb wreckage and confronted with a continued German stranglehold on the initiative, is turning increasingly to the United States as a potential savior in these darkest hours of the war since the German panzer divisions reached the channel coast last May and looked longingly at the white cliffs of Dover.

British capacity for understatement is working overtime, partly through patriotism—"it is not cricket to tell the truth, old boy"—and partly through propaganda—"casualties were few having regard to the weight of the attack."

Complacency, distortion and reluctance to admit the truth, even privately to correspondents who have no hope of getting some news through the rigorous censorship, which sometimes even delays official communiques, perhaps are as dangerous to the British cause as nightly bombings. The way the censors work is reminiscent of the conduct of French censorship before the fall of France.

Why these darkest hours?

This is one man's opinion—therefore uncensorable—but the opinion of a man who was with the B.E.F. in France and who has spent a great deal of time with the army navy and air force and—more important—with the people themselves, not civil servants and cabinet underlings.

First, there probably is no answer to night bombings, outside of mastery of the air, and for this Britain frankly is looking to America although in earlier and better days the newspapers of Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, belittled United States planes.

German night raiders have dropped tens of thousands of tons of bombs from thousands of planes, yet one is asked to believe there is no military damage; that only churches, hospitals, schools and tenements are hit, plus of course "slight damage" to utilities.

(They dropped a bomb next to The Associated Press building before Sept. 24. The crater still is yawning.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP).—The "Mr. X" who developed the No. 1 United States military secret—the jealously guarded, high accuracy bombsight—is being shielded so carefully, it was learned today, that authorities decline to reveal his identity lest his life be endangered.

"Mr. X" is the men responsible for the instrument known as the "Norden bombsight." Although not a navy man, he worked closely with that department for 15 years in perfecting the invention.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, spoke of the secret device as the "Norden bombsight" when he emphasized last week that GUELPH, Ont., Nov. 26—(CP).—Two three-year-old children who wandered away from their homes shortly after noon yesterday were found sleeping in a ditch last night.

A large search party scoured the district for hours before finding the missing boys, Bobby Beeteson and Tony Contini. Apparently they had been exhausted by their wanderings and they were fast asleep side by side in the roadside ditch when discovered by members of the volunteer civil guard of Guelph.

The two were none the worse for their experience.

Convoy Beats Off 9 Raiders Damaging Two

LONDON, Nov. 26 (CP)—German raiders returned to the attack today on the town in the west of England which was hard hit in a heavy raid Sunday night. (Germans have claimed this town to be the port of Bristol.)

Reports were lacking immediately in London on the extent of this raid, launched in the afternoon. It was the same town the Germans apparently had picked for a heavy assault last night, which was blocked by bad weather.

The raiders, flying through murky skies, came over in force after 12 hours of weather—curtailed activity in which London enjoyed its first night without an alarm since Oct. 6.

London had one short afternoon alert, apparently caused by a raider which flew up the Thames estuary.

British fighters engaged in a dogfight with on German formation off Dover and shot down a Messerschmitt.

A squadron of nine Messerschmitt fighters made a three-minute bomb attack this afternoon on a convoy in the Channel before being driven off by the ships' anti-aircraft guns. Observers on the coast said none of the ships was hit.

Early last night raiders dropped bombs in the west of England. An official announcement said casualties were few, damage light.

The air ministry announced early this evening that two German bombers and two fighter bombers had been shot down in fighting over Britain during the day. There were no Royal Air Force losses.

Mother Burned In Vain Rescue

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 26.—(CP) Mrs. John R. Jackson, Jr., is in serious condition in hospital here with burns and other injuries suffered yesterday in an heroic but futile attempt to rescue two of her four children from the fire which destroyed their home near here. Mrs. Jackson saved the other children.

Arlene, six, and Janet, aged two, died in the Kakabeka Falls home. Mrs. Jackson, working in the yard, saw the fire and rushed into the house by the front door. She hurried John, aged four, and Florence, three, to safety but the flames spread so rapidly she was unable to return.

In a desperate effort to save the other children the mother smashed the glass in a side window with her bare hands, which suffered deep gashes, and attempted to crawl thorugh. She was burned severely and driven back by the flames and smoke.

Neighbors who saw the fire rushed to help but arrived too late. Cause of the fire has not been determined. The father was absent at the time.

Belfast, Ireland, Nov. 26 (CP)

FIVE members of the outlawed Republican Army shouted taunts at the judge from the prisoner's dock as they were sentenced today to 12 years' imprisonment and 10 strokes with the cat-o'-nine-tails.

The I.R.A. members, captured in a roadside gun battle after attempting to raid a bank at Armagh, were rushed to their cells by police who muzzled them with their hands.

Only 2 Waiting Sentence In Murder Ring

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26—(AP)—An investigation that began with the death of an obscure relief worker two years ago and disclosed the grim machinations of an insurance murder ring has about reached its finale.

"Only a few odds and ends remain now," said Vincent McDevitt, assistant district attorney, as he ticked off the cases of 25 persons charged with the 27 known slayings.

Two women and two men have been sentenced to the electric chair. Nine are serving life terms. Five are imprisoned for two to 20 years. Another "lifer" died soon after entering prison. Three women were acquitted and one is yet to be tried. Two men await sentence.

It was a long trail that police set out upon in November, 1938, when Ferdinand Alfonsi died of poison. His death touched off an inquiry that spread over Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey and part of New York state.

Ace 42nd Regiment Of Rome Rushed In To Turn Tables Breaks At Bayonet Charges

Fascists Fight Desperately At Argirocastro To Save Being Cut Off From Sea; Retreat In North Continues Steadily

ATHENS, Nov. 26—(AP). — A counter-attack by fresh Italian troops newly brought from Italy to stem the Greek advance into Albania was reported today to have been repulsed, and the Greeks continued their drive.

Although the 42nd Regiment, direct from Rome, made a desperate effort to halt the Italian retreat troops, reports from the front declared it was overwhelmed by two Greek bayonet charges.

In the north, the Greek forces were believed to be pushing ahead. Reconnaissance pilots reported that the Fascist troops were offering little resistance in withdrawal.

The retreat was in a general westerly direction toward the Adriatic Sea, across which lies Italy.

(A report from London said Greek troops had landed on the Adriatic shore in Albanian Epirus and had got behind the Italian flank.

A dispatch from the central sector said: "The Italians made a final effort yesterday—a frantic, read-guard effort—to halt the quick advance of the Greeks. They failed, however, in a way which was tragic for them. An attack by the Greeks at bayonet point was followed by a second attack which overthrew everything."

Greek troops also were reported battling fiercely for Argirocastra against desperate Italians whose retreat might be cut off by fall of the town—Italy's last "invasion" base in Southern Albania.

The special dispatch from the central front added that "the furious resistance of Italian rear guard lasted all night," continuing:

"They brought in the 42nd regiment, which is a choice regiment of Romans, and dispatched it immediately to the front lines to hold up the retreat. They were fresh men, their officers full of enthusiasm. The enemy had been decimated in this sector in the past few days and had been re-inforced to prevent disbanding.

"After a four-hour pitched battle, they had to retreat in spite of the fact that their officers fought with self-sacrifice and made great efforts to hold the men."

In the northern sector of the front Greeks reported passing the key town of Pogradetz, without specifically claiming its capture, and said cavalry and mountain troops were pursuing rapidly retiring Italians northward.

(Authoritative military circles in London reported Pogradetz actually had been captured.)

ROME, Nov. 26—(AP).—Greek troops which disembarked on the Epirus coast were claimed by the Italian high command today to have been "in part destroyed and in part captured with their arms."

New Ambassador Sees Fate of World On America's Move

TOKYO, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, who expects to leave for Washington next month as Japan's new ambassador to the United States, declared today there is no issue between Japan and the United States that cannot be solved without recourse to war.

Official announcement of his appointment as ambassador succeeding Kensuke Horinouchi, who was called home from Washington last September, was withheld. Because of this Nomura said he had not conferred with the cabinet on a program for improving relations between the United States and Japan.

"In many ways," the retired admiral said in an interview, "the fate of the world hangs on American actions just now.

"If the United States becomes involved in conflict either in Europe or in the Pacific, civilization will go up in flames. There are few—if any—Japanese who want war with the United States. What is important is how to prevent the situation from reaching its worst stage.

He said he viewed any possible United States embargo upon Japan as dangerous and asserted that "cutting such a large trade channel might result in abnormal actions here."

"If the United States refuses to sell us oil and other supplies," he said, "we must get them elsewhere."

A conflict between the United States and Japan probably would touch off a "chain of wars" stretching indefinitely into the future, he declared.

"Nations must live side by side," he said. "You can't exterminate a nation."

U. K. Finances Good for Year

U.S. Officials See Credit Move As Feeler Offset Controversy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 (AP)—Some of the highest officials in the United States government estimated today that the British government had financial resources for at least another year of American purchases.

Several said they thought the supply of gold, securities and other assets might conceivably last even two or more years.

In these quarters the apparent general belief was that the Marquess of Lothian's recent statements on Britain's dwindling resorces were intended primarily "to set the stage" for some future date when it may be vital for the empire to obtain credit. The British ambassador said yesterday, however, that financial assistance was one of the problems his country would have to meet "in the first half" of 1941.

The high officials who estimated that Britain still had financial reserves indicated that if the question of extending loans should go to congress eventually, approval could not be expected without a long controversy. Fact that, they indicated, might explain why the British plea was being made "so early."

According to available information the facts of British spending and assets appeared to be these:—

1. Since the outbreak of war, Britain has contracted to buy about $2,500,000,000 worth of goods in the United States, of which only a fraction has been delivered and paid for. In the next year, British commitments for airplanes and other supplies are expected to total $4,000,000,000.

2. In the first 12 months of the war, actual shipments of all kinds of merchandise, including large amounts of normal commercial transactions, to the British Empire, totalled $1,740,000,000.

3. At the beginning of the war, British Empire gold, American securities and other dollor resources exceeded $4,500,000,000 and were be-

LONDON, Nov. 26 (CP)—Admiralty officials expressed disbelief today concerning indications from Berlin that two new 35,000-ton battleships had been added to the German navy.

They said it was significant that these indications came out shortly after the British air raid Nov. 11 on the Italian base of Taranto, where three Italian battleships — half Italy's capital ship strength — had been seriously crippled by aerial torpedoes.

The indications took the form of pictures published in German publications of a battleship, apparently either the new Bismarck or Tirpitz, showing steam and seamen on the ATHENS, Nov. 26 (CP)—Greek troops were reported battling fiercely for Algirocastro today against tattered, desperate Italian soldiers whose retreat might be cut off by fall of the town—Italy's last "invasion" base in southern Albania.

At the opposite end of the battle-front, Greeks reported passing the key town of Pogradetz, without specifically claiming its capture, and said cavalry and mountain troops were pursuing rapidly retreating Italians northward.

Greek advance units were said to have driven to the outskirts of Argirocastro against determined resistance.

A dispatch from an Associated Press correspondent on that front said fighting still was going on last night between scattered forces in the maze of mountains and valleys around the town, with some Italians who surrendered "a sorry sight, ragged and hungry," and others holding out grimly from positions in the rocks.

They were under artillery fire—some of them cut off from support.

Greeks said other large forces of Italians in southwestern Albania were in danger of being isolated by the Greek drive to Argirocastro, commanding the road north.

R.A.F. Bombers Visit Naval Bases

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(CP).—British bombers attacked the German naval base and dockyards at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, docks at Hamburg and Willemsoord, the De Mok seaplane base and German airdromes during the night, the Air Ministry announced to-day. One of the bombers was lost.

The communique follows:

"Last night, our bombers attacked the naval base and dockyards at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven.

"Other aircraft attacked the docks at Hamburg and Willemsoord, the De Mok seaplane base and several enemy airdromes.

"One of our aircraft is missing."

The Press Association said it learned authoritatively that Wilhelmshaven and Kiel were the R. A.F.'s main objectives. The British bombers were believed to have found their targets at both places in spite of "not so good weather, the Agency said. Other pilots, running into thick fog over their main targets, flew on to secondary targets.

help to do it. Much of the recent staggering shipping losses can be traced to deficiencies in escort vessels.

Unless Britain can get more United States destroyers, shipping losses likely will continue at a high level because of U-boats, bombers, and surface raiders.

The need for merchant vessels goes hand in hand with the need for destroyers. Britain's need will increase as spring brings an increase in U-boat virulence.

Taranto (British raid on Italy's naval base) was a great British victory, but not for the Navy, although the fleet air arm accomplished this task (reporting the crippling of three Italian battleships), because every battleship similarly is vulnerable to torpedo-carrying planes while in harbor, where they all must go sooner or later.

Third, the Army is as good as the best—if properly equipped. In fighting spirit and leadership, I can testify, it is able to stand up to the Germans.

At first it was said a British offensive could be expected in 1941. Now Government leaders talk of 1943 and 1944.

Fourth, Britain, the greatest financial power in history, is reaching the end of her financial tether. If she is to buy in the United States—and German bombing of idustries will force her to buy in increasing quantities—the United States will have to put it on the cuff.

Fifth, British industry which started the war on an eight-hour day, still has not expanded to the totalitarian level; there still are tens of thousands of unemployed and unemployment even is increasing.

Railroads still charge service men for transport, which is like having a toll bridge in a communications trench.

Finally, the people of London are cheerful, stubborn and tired. Shelter conditions still are abominable; the menace to health is more dangerous potentially than Nazi bombs. Sanitation in sleeping quarters is terribly inadequate, despite assurances that "steps are being taken for improvement."

In the country, returning Londoners say, the people "don't know there's a war on."

They Prefer the Truth

In other cities people are less cheerful than Londoners, they grumble that London is given greater protection and say that propaganda that London is unhurt is causing the Nazis to change strategy and hammer by turns at such targets as Coventry, Liverpool, Birmingham, Bristol, Southampton.

The people, far more ready to face the brutal truth than the newspapers and the B.B.C., grow sarcastic about headlines and communiques that tell of "slight damage" when they can see the wreckage with their own eyes; grow bitter when they read that "casualties were few" when their families are destroyed.

"But the spirit is wonderful," he said. "Shopgirls bombed out of their homes phone up and apologize for being late. Then, most marvelous of all, they show up behind their counters with smiles on their faces, doing their best to satisfy the customers."

Typical of the spirit of English women was the case of two girls who spent an entire night entertaining a group of soldiers and civilians in a London hotel.

"They were dead beat when it was finished. One of the girls actually fell asleep at the piano," he said. "Later we learned they had been entertaining troops the previous evening.

5. Although the British Government has sequestered practically all the American securities of its nationals so that they could be sold for cash, net British sales of American securities amounted to only $48,545,000 in the first half of 1940. The total security holdings were estimated at $735,000,000 at the war's outbreak.

6. Part of the Empire's cash needs are being met from the sale of British products in this country, particularly Scotch whisky and Australian wool. Whisky now leads all United Kingdom exports to the United States, and amounted to $35,000,000 in the last year.

Bank Balances Aiding War

The annual statement of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for its fiscal year ending 31st October reflects the contrasting influences of the first war year. In the previous year's statement exceptionally large balances of the Dominion Government were shown, these resulting from the Government's first important war financial transaction, the sale of $200,000,000 short-term securities to the chartered banks, and since then the Government has issued two war loans to which the Bank's savings customers contributed, thereby reducing their bank balances. The effects of these changes on the liabilities of the bank were of course reflected in the assets, notably in security holdings, although total assets were at a high level, $704,480,000, as compared with $745,651,00 on 031st October 1939.

Total quick assets are shown as $396,932,000, this amount representing over sixty per cent. of total liabilities to the public. Included in this section of the assets were cash and cash holdings of $119,121,000, made up chiefly of notes of and deposits with the Bank of Canada and notes of, cheques on and deposits with other banks. Also included as quick assets were securities of $258,237,000. Reductions were recorded in all classes of securities owing to maturities of some issues and sales of others effected to meet the increased demand for commercial loans and withdrawals from savings accounts by subscribers to the Dominion Government's war loans. The bank's holdings of Dominion and Provincial Government bonds maturing within two years declined from $118,905,000 to $101,393,000, securities of these Governments of longer term from $116,195,000 to $107,881,000 and those of Canadian municipalities from $9,550,000 to $8,661,000. Public securities other than Canadian were reduced by $10,138,000 to $20,943,000, and other bonds, debentures and stocks by $6,747,000 to $19,359,000. Call loans fell by $5,395,000 to $17,726,000, owing to less activity in the stock markets.

The net profits for the year of $3,006,035 were up $68,000 after providing for Dominion and Provincial Government taxes of $1,526,018 which were $536,596 higher than last year. The other items appearing in the profit and loss account are the amount written off bank premises $350,000, dividends $2,400,000 and $253,832 for the staff pension fund. The balance carried forward in profit and loss account was $785,000, slightly above that in last year's statement.

"Norden" had been generally unknown. Efforts to obtain additional information, however, met an official wall of silence. Although the secret sight was developed originally for the navy, department officials refused to disclose the inventor's first name, initials or whereabouts.

"Do you think an effort might be made to kidnap him and extort the secret?" one was asked.

"It might be," he replied.

One familiar with the sight's performance said that it was an exaggeration to say, as some reports have had it, that the sight could plump a bomb into a pickle barrel unerringly from the altitude of 20,000 feet. He asserted, however, that a small group of bombers equipped with the Norden device could spread a deadly bomb "pattern" over a small target from great altitude. Pattern bombing is used, it was explained, to offset the slight margin of error caused by varying air currents that bombs encounter as they drop.

PrivateMembers Demand Additional To Do

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—(CP).—Private members of Parliament want more to do. They want a greater say in what is being done—and who is doing it. They want to know how expert the "experts" are. They want a chance to "help the government to win this war."

The case for the private members was stated last night by Walter Tucker (Lib. Rosthern), fluent and earnest westerner, during the Throne speech debate in the House of Commons. Back-benchers of all parties suggested how they felt about it by their frequent, loud applause.

"We were elected to run this country, but someone called in from Vancouver and someone else from Halifax, men who could not get elected to the House no matter how they tried," Tucker asserted.

There would be a "true democratic government," he contended, "if representatives of the common people, through the Banking and Commerce committee of the House, were convened to investigate and report on the financing of Canada's war effort and Canada's financial assistance to Britain.

Strength Shown In Bank Report

After a year of war-time conditions, the annual statement of the Bank of Montreal reflects again the strength and solidarity of an institution which for 123 years has been in forefront of Canadian finance. Assets of $961,334,955 show some contraction as compared with the previous report, when an all-time record of $1,025,508,367 was established—due in part to transactions of a special nature, as was explained at the annual meeting of shareholders—but showing a substantial increase over the total of $874,255,828 reported in 1938.

The profits for the year, after making appropriations to Contingent Reserve Fund and provision for bad and doubtful debts and Federal and Provincial taxes, were $3,435,941, as compared with $3,462,446 in 1939. The increase in the bank's contributions to public revenues is indicated by an increase in Federal and Provincial taxes from $1,198,413 to $1,927,824, or $729,411. The profits are the equivalent of 4.5 per cent. on the capital, rest and undivided profits, showing no appreciable change.

The bank's liquid position is strongly maintained. Quickly available resources, totalling $663,185,436, show some contraction, largely as the result of the reduction of holdings of government and other bonds and debentures from $517,171,255 to $461,827,000, but are still at the high ratio of 75 per cent. of all liabilities to the public. Cash in the bank's vaults and money on deposit with the Bank of Canada at $83,034,576 compare with $94,641,456 in the previous report and are 9.39 per cent. of the total liabilities to the public. Notes of and cheques on other banks, $32,254,269, money on deposit in other banks, $61,382,283, stocks, $196,182, call loans outside Canada $19,552,470, call loans in Canada, $4,606,348, and acceptances $332,264, show no significant changes.

London Sleeps First Night

LONDON, Nov. 26—(CP).—Britain slept through early morning hours today untroubled by air raiders, but the Germans preserved their series of nightly bombardments—unbroken since September 7—by dropping several bombs in the west of England last night.

After daylight, the Germans sent their squadrons roaring over the coast again.

One break in a night of quiet, apparently forced by bad weather, came shortly after dark last night and caused little damage and few fasualties, a government communique said. A few persons were killed.

Previous independent reports had indicated the entire country escaped the raiders for the first time since nightly bombings began September 7, but the Government communique said the Nazis kept their chain unbroken by the one "token" attack despite bad weather.

"Little damage was caused and casualties were few" the communque said, "but they included a small number of persons killed."

Fog Spoils Hun Plans

Reports reaching London this morning indicated the Nazis had planned a heavy raid on one town last night, but called it off because of the weather.

The first planes over a western town which was badly hit Sunday night (identified as Bristol by the Germans) dropped incendiary bombs to light the way for bombers-to-come.

But then a heavy blanket of fog apparently dropped down suddenly on the continent, and the German planes were grounded.

Londoners, skeptical of the break in the air war, since it was only

The Greeks themselves claimed the capture of Konispolis, Albania, just north of Philiataes and close to the spot where the troops are reported to have landed.)

The high command also claimed Fascist fliers bombed the fortress on the island of Corfu.

Heading for the Sea.

SALONIKA, Greece, Nov. 26 — (AP).— Reports from various parts of the Albanian battlefront indicated to-day that all Italian units were seeking to turn toward the Adriatic Sea in their retreat from the Greeks.

Winter took a biting grip on Albania and Macedonia amid reports that the Italians were withdrawing in all sectors. Cold rain drenched the valleys and lowlands; snow fell on the mountains, slowing up military operations on most fronts.

Tennent agreed in the opinion the ship was trying to draw the German raider, which attacked a convoy two weeks ago, into a fight with the battleship.

Train Squeezes Car Against Building

A late model sedan car owned by Art Hill, well known wholesaler, was demolished at two o'clock this afternoon when it was struck by a shunting box car, and jammed between the car and a building.

The car, driven by Elgar Speers, was coming out of the yard behind Hill's warehouse on Bethune street. The driver stopped to see if a train was coming and as he did so the front end of a box car caught his bumper, pulling the car toward the north. Speers scrambled out of the right door, before the auto became wedged between the box car and a small one storey concrete block building. The first box car was derailed, and this car along with the box-car immediately following wiped one side of the auto clean, taking both fenders, running board, both doors and the windshield. Both left wheels were twisted. The entire front of the car was crushed and the cast iron brackets were smashed as though made of paper. It took two wrecking trucks to get the car to a garage.

Art Hill said he had just sent the young fellow, who is an employee on a message uptown, and in a few minutes Speers came back into the warehouse, pale and shaking, and said: "The train hit your car, it's ruined."

Fobert—Rice

MARMORA, Nov. 26 — (ENS). — A picturesque wedding took place at St. Paul's Church, Marmora, at 3 p.m., on Monday, when Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell united in marriage Kathleen Lily, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rice of Marmora, to Cletus Harold John (Jack) Fobert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fobert of Toronto. Wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. L. R. Rundle, and George Rice, brother of the bride, played "I Love You Truly" as a violin solo, with organ accompaniment during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was prettily attired in a full length Queen's blue crepe dress with matching shoulder length veil and accessories. She wore a nosegay of Johanna Hill roses and bronze chrysanthemums. Miss Eleanor Clyde of Toronto as bridesmaid was daintily dressed in pink georgette with matching accessories, and wore a corsage of pink roses. Mr. Peter Tisler of Toronto discharged the duties of best man.

Following the ceremony, the wedding banquet was served at the home of the bride, with the immediate relatives and friends attending. The bride's mother wore a navy blue dress with a corsage of yellow roses.

The happy young couple, who were the recipients of many choice and useful gifts, later left on a short honeymoon which is being spent in Hamilton, the bride's travelling dress being wine crepe and her coat all grey cloth, fur trimmed, with black accessories.

They will take up residence in Toronto. Also in attendance at the wedding in addition to those aforementioned were Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Dandy (nee Evelyn Rice), and Mrs. Harvey Clyde of Toronto.

Country Fair To Replace "Y" Annual Bazaar

The special effort of Y.W.C.A. girl members toward Association finances takes the form this year of a Country Fair in place of the usual bazaar. For some weeks the Girls' Council of the Y.W.C.A. has been considering ways and means of helping, and members are anxious to make a special effort this year to supplement the donation to Y.W.C.A. War Service work, which includes, at the request of the Government, Hostess Houses at the larger training centres, also a gift to the British Y.W.C.A., which is meeting so loyally the needs of refugees and women in war service.

The Fair, to be held on Monday, December second, will open at three-thirty o'clock, with afternoon tea served in the Green Room. In the gymnasium a Country Store will be stocked with a generous supply of bargains in Christmas gifts, canned goods, novelties, groceries, dolls, china and linen. There will be home-made cake, bread, pies and candy. Fortune telling and a program of games of skill will provide entertainment, and for the children there will be the ever-popular Wishing Well. Three lucky number door prizes are to be presented, and someone will win the beautiful baby doll.

A pancake supper is to be served from five-thirty to six-thirty p.m., and in the evening the usual Monday night dance will be held.

We Noticed . . .

. . .The approach of Christmas stirs in us a mixture of feelings; a bubbling up of good will, delight in the mystery and magic, and cold shivers as we realize that we cannot do one-tenth of the loving things we wish we might. The only solution—if any—of the Christmas problem is to Begin Early.

. . .The wise housewife's first activity will be to make the holiday fruit cake. She will then make lists of those to whom greetings will be sent and those for whom there must be gifts, with an appropriate gift suggestion or two after each name. She can then shop, wrap and mail her remembrances early and get that off her mind.

. . .It is an efficiency stunt to plan early the menu for the Christmas dinner and for any holiday social affairs the home may have on hand. The recipes for these should be assembled, lists made of supplies to be ordered, and even of the manner of serving, and the table linens and dishes to be used. She will not then need to wash a lunch cloth or borrow extra spoons at the last minute.

. . .Such forethought and preparation well in advance will make for poise, and give Mother time to enjoy with the children their plans and the real sprit of that age-old, but ever thrilling, blessed season: Christmas.

No Golden Rule There

Pope Pius XII. prayed for "peace in our days" and made a plea for an end "to the whirlwinds of war that in the light of day or in the dark of night scatter terror, fire, destruction and slaughter on humble folk."

He called for something which is described as a golden rule of war, urging that combatants under no circumstances "do to others that which they would not have done to themselves or their country," and to fight the war as humanely as possible.

The Pontiff is living close to the scene of war, and being a man of peace, he is moved to protest against war as it is today.

But that old phrase "War is hell" has not been wiped out, nor do we anticipate it will. The temporal chief of the state in which Vatican City is located has been rattling the sword or its equivalent for eighteen years, and he willingly allied himself with a neighbor who has devised and planned and carried into execution a war from which humane considerations have been swept as clear as though they never existed.

Those who deal in war will never take their hand off the newest and best thing which science has developed. Gunpowder, dynamite, cordite can all be made to serve useful purposes. We blast in our mines to loosen out the wealth safely concealed there; we blast to remove rocks when we build highways or railway lines; we blast to remove stumps when clearing the land. All good and useful purposes.

But we use this power to blast when we engage in war. We use it to kill and destroy rather than as aid to useful accomplishment.

The airplane is relatively a new thing, and it looked as though it was one of the greatest advancements ever made in the field of transportation. It carried mail and passengers great distances in incredibly short time; it brought sick and injured people from hidden spots to hospitals; it crossed oceans with ease and could readily surmount mountains.

But it became an implement of war. It was found that from it could be dropped bombs in such a way that they were highly destructive. So it is that each scientific achievement becomes also an implement of death.

In the war of today the golden rule is not present. The Axis powers have ruled it out. Italian bombers a few weeks ago were delighted to boast they were dropping bombs on London. Would they find equal cause for jubilation if the bombs were falling on Rome?

A Good Reputation

Milo Thompson has been in London since 1938 as chief of the Associated Press Bureau there. He has lived through all the bombardments and recently returned to New York.

Mr. Thompson discussed a number of events and possibilities, among which was one to the effect that Weygand would yet take part in the war. But there was something which might appear to be of lesser importance because it had to do with giving out information.

Mr. Thompson says he is certain when the British give out a statement telling of the number of German planes which have been brought down it is necessary to increase the number by at least 60 per cent. to get a correct idea of what has taken place.

As the Associated Press man puts it, they lean over backwards in aiming to be accurate. A plane that has been so disabled that it could not possibly keep going far on the way home is not counted as having been brought down. In order to be "downed" it must be just that—actually down, wrecked, captured and all else.

There is something in that reputation which is worth while. It does not build up a false hope nor does it seek to fool people with high claims. That is why people prefer to get their news from British sources.

One Way To Help

The Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to United States, has been in London for purposes of conference. Returning to Washington he made the plain statement that "Britain is beginning to come to the end of her financial resources." He said that financing through 1941 would be difficult enough.

Britain has been buying in United States on a scale never before thought possible. The reason for such tremendous buying is that Britain had to start to rearm after going to war. For eight years Germany has been spending almost one-half of her entire national income on armament; labor had been taken from its ideas of union bargaining and told how long to work each day and at what wage; supplies had been so regulated that all needed materials went toward armament shops.

Britain had to step in and approach a standard of equality with Germany and do it in incredibly short time, and the process is still in the stage of being done. It has not yet been accomplished.

United States changed its Neutrality Act so that munitions and implements of war could be sold to such nations as were able to come, take them away and pay for them on the spot. There is also in operation the Johnson Act, which forbids foreign nations the right to float loans in United States if they have any debts to that country which have not been paid. That includes Britain as the debts from the last war have never been paid.

Britain has been able to pay for the $4,000,000,000 worth of equipment which she has bought in United States, much of which has not yet been delivered. Our belief is she will be able to pay for a good deal more than that, but she cannot possibly keep on paying unless she has a cash income, and the only way to secure that is through her export trade.

Right there is one way in which the average householder can do something about it in a practical way. By buying goods made in Britain. There is not even sacrifice involved, and one receives full value for each purchase investment.

It may be difficult for some to realize that buying British goods is actually aiding Britain pay for the war, but that is the way in which the situation is regarded in Britain today. Export trade is recognized as munitions of war.

Britain can keep on paying as long as Britain keeps on selling.

When we buy British goods we are actually making it possible for Britain to keep on buying war material.

We can aid directly and in a way which costs us nothing to postpone the day referred to by the Ambassador as the time when Britain could no longer pay.

The system is actually so simple that we may have overlooked it on that account. But it is as workable as it is simple. If you purchase imported goods see that they are British-made: That's all there is to it.

Makes Quite a Difference

Trans-Radio News Service, available for newspapers or radio stations, has a large-sized question mark front and back. It has been mentioned in reports of the Dies Committee at Washington, and named as the receiving and transmitting agency of the Trans-Ocean News Service, Nazi propaganda agency.

Within recent times this service has become violently anti-American, and that is because it is distributed in South America, as well as elsewhere. The effort is to create bad feeling or distrust in South America toward United States.

This service has been questioned before in our country, and what makes the thing look suspicious is that South American papers have been offered free service. One of the first rules to be followed in newspapers is beware of the individual or agency who desires to furnish something for nothing. The business of the world is not carried on that way; neither is the business of a newspaper. The one safe rule is to know what you want, be satisfied it is reliable, and then pay for it. The fact that this service, according to the Dies report, can be obtained free of cost in South America, makes us highly suspicious of it.

Readers of newspapers may not be much interested at times in discussions which take place regarding various press services. But it is actually a matter which concerns readers of papers just as much as it does those who publish them. It should also be of deep and positive interest to those who listen to the radio and believe what they hear. They may never know that something to which they pay attention has come to them from German-inspired sources.

That is why the Examiner relies on its Canadian Press service. We know the people who operate it; we know its world-wide affiliations. This question has been brought up at Ottawa again following the revelations made by the Dies Committee at Washington. The governors of the Broadcasting Corporation meet in Ottawa this week and they should go to the mat with this thing and settle it.

A Life Of Adventure

Ralph W. Barnes, one of the foreign correspondents of the New York Herald Tribune, is dead. He was killed when a British bomber crashed in the Balkans. He was 41 years old, holder of a Master of Arts degree, and had seen more in his brief span than most people of far greater years.

One of his first assignments was when Gertrude Ederle swam the English Channel. Barnes was in a boat for 14 hours and the Channel was choppy. He became seasick but had to complete his assignment. To see if things would get better he secured a rowboat, and that was worse. He finally jumped overboard and swam to shore. There was no place nearer than two miles where he could get a telephone, so he ran that distance, phoned his story to London, and had it relayed to New York.

In this war he had ridden in motorized columns, in war planes and battleships. He went to France with the British Expeditionary force. In April of 1940 he was switched to the German army, and went along when they reached Dunkirk. After that he was in Berlin, but his stay there was cut short because the German officials said his despatches were too revealing; that is, they told too much of what the German invaders did when they went through a conquered land. He was given 24 hours to quit Berlin.

After that he was assigned to the Balkans and went to Budapest, Bucharest, Bulgaria, Syria, Turkey and Palestine. Ralph Barnes followed the Italian army in its movement to Sidi Barani, when it set out with the purpose of invading Northern Africa and capturing Alexandria and control of the Suez. When that expedition bogged down he went on a British warship to Greece at the time the Italians were launching their attack.

Before this war Ralph Barnes spent five years in Russia; he reported the mass execution of those who were called plotters against Stalin in 1934. He followed pretty much the trend of circumstances and events from the time the Germans militarized the Rhine until they turned to the invasion of Poland. In between times he was a passenger on the dirigible Hindenburg on its initial flight from Germany to United States. He had been at sea with the British fleet in the Mediterranean and in the camp of the British in the desert lands.

That is but a sketchy survey of the places where this foreign correspondent, Ralph Barnes, M.A., had been. His experience was typical of the adventures of other faithful writers who will travel to the ends of the earth in search of news. They are constantly exposed to danger because where there is danger there is also news. But what vast territory and what experience to cram into ten short years as foreign correspondent!

NOTE AND COMMENT

One member of Parliament very wisely remarked in debate: "Canadians cannot drink their way to victory."

It would be quite interesting to know Hitler's candid opinion of Mussolini and his army.

United States is now probing the activities of Italians in that country. Meanwhile the Greeks are probing the Italians in a different spot in Albania.

When Hon. Eric Cross resigned it was decided to do away with his departments as separate entities and merge them with others. Wouldn't it be fine if the tax collector resigned to find they had done away with the office!

Gordon K. Fraser, M.P. for Peterborough West, has been named as a member of the Printing Committee of the House of Commons. Our belief is that Mr. Fraser may find there is entirely too much of it done at Ottawa, and too much of it mailed out to people who never read it.

NEW MAN

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I read about some brand-new pills, that smooth the skin and cure the chills, one only needs a few; the folk who take them write to say, they scamper forth at break of day, and feel as good as new.

¶ One man drove daily in his car, to walk a mile was much too far, but now just watch him go; the car stands in the laneway now, he tells the people why and how, the car is far too slow.

¶ He skips about the blocks with ease, seems like new springs set in his knees, his appetite is great; when he comes home he is not tired, so much with energy he's fired, he always jumps the gate.

¶ He shakes the furnace down so hard, you feel the trembling in the yard, hard labor he can stand; he fills the furnace to the neck, scoops up of coal about a peck, and does it with one hand.

¶ Down at the shop where he's employed, the people get at times annoyed, to him hard labor's play; they hired an extra man I hear, to try and keep the workshop clear, and move his work away.

¶ He went out bowling other night, it almost ended in a fight, they talk of it in town; he shied the bowls so hard and fast, that when he up and shot his last—he knocked the building down.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

WHEN I was a child, no one had ever seen Santa Claus; he was a mysterious old party who whisked around the world on Christmas Eve, slipping down chimneys to leave presents for good children, and passing by the chimneys of bad ones. I was always a good child myself, good almost to the point of priggishness, so that Santa never missed me, nor did I know anyone whom he neglected. It was customary in my part of the country to leave some slight refreshment beside the fireplace for the old gentleman—he favored cocoa and well-buttered soda crackers—and in the morning it was all gone, and only crumbs by the hearth and the store of presents addressed in a shaky hand told of the passing of the children's saint. We sometimes thought we heard him on the roof, we wrote him letters, and we worried when Christmas came and there was no snow for his sleigh, but see him—we no more dreamed of looking upon his face than a Japanese would think of looking directly at his Mikado.

C & B

Nowadays there are thousands of children who have seen Santa Claus. A week go I made one of my periodical visits to Toronto, and found it in a state of remarkable confusion. The streets were thronged; there were four street-cars where the visitor might expect to find one. As I was making my way with difficulty towards the centre of the city I leaned out of the window of my car and enquired what was afoot; it was Eaton's annual Santa Claus parade. I should have liked to see it myself — I am fond of parades—but I had to hurry on about my business. "Hurry" is not the right word; I crawled, and as I had plenty of opportunity to observe the crowd. Never had I seen so many children; there were thousands of them. The older ones were noisy and vociferous, but the little ones were stiff and silent with excitement. They were going to see Santa Claus; by a happy chance it was snowing. They were going to see Santa Claus, and it was still November. Would the flavor last until Christmas, I wondered?

C & B

CHARLES DICKENS is usually credited with having established the pattern of our modern Christmas, and certainly the Christmas scenes in his novels have set a tandard of jollity and good-will to which we still aspire. But at least equal with him in the formation of our idea of Christmas must stand another man, one not usually associated in our minds with merry-making, Albert, the Prince Consort of Queen Victoria. It was he who introduced from his native Germany the custom of giving children presents from a mysterious source on Christmas day, but it was not Santa Claus, but the Christ Child, who was said to bring them. He also introduced the Christmas tree into England; at present one finds it hard to associate the upright, generous and gentle Albert with Germany!

C & B

Santa Claus is a borrowing from Scandinavian countries where he is associated with Saint Nicholas, though it would be hard to explain why. Indeed there is no satisfactory background or history for Santa Claus. Saint Nicholas was most unlike him. Saint Nicholas is the patron saint of virgins, boys, sailors and Worshipful Company of Parish Clerks of the City of London. He was a saint of such piety and virtue, we are told, that even when an infant at the breast he could not be induced to take any nourishment on a Friday. The story of his greatest miracle is deeply interesting, and accounts for his association with boys. It seems that a gentleman sent his two sons to study in Myra, in Licia, where Nicholas was bishop, and bade the boys call upon him for his blessing. The boys stopped at an inn, where the wicked inn keeper killed them while they slept, cut them up, salted them, and attempted to sell them as pickled pork. But Nicholas had a vision of these things, and in the morning visited the inn, charged the landlord with his crimes, and brought him to confession. Thereupon the bishop prayed, and the pieces of the boys re-united, and they leapt out of the brine-tub, full of rejoicing. Admitting that this is a very remarkable event, we can still see no resemblance to Saint Nicholas as we know him.

C & B

NOWADAYS we always imagine Santa Claus as wearing a rather smart red ski-suit, on his travels. In the nineteenth century he was always shown wearing a long robe with a hood, and sometimes the robe was colored blue. The white flowing hair and the beard are the same, however.

C & B

I did not see Santa Claus in his parade. Later in the day I saw an effigy of him in a shop window; he was seated on a throne, and some cunning mechanism in his inside made him appear to shake with laughter. His eyes were cast up, and his face wore an unchanging expression of agonized mirth; his head rolled and his sides heaved. From a loud-speaker came an unending roar of hollow laughter. There were a great many children standing outside this window, but none of them were laughing. Rather, they looked on with pity at the spectacle of an old gentleman having a fit. As I moved away that maniacal laughter was clearly audible for a whole city block.

HORIZONTAL DUTY

"But I am on duty sir—looking for parachuters."

• A Little Flutter in the Debate

From Parliamentary Debates

Mr. GARDINER: Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege, I did not boast that we made millions as a matter of bargaining with Great Britain. We accepted, with no bargaining, the prices that Great Britain offered us.

Mr. HANSON (York - Sunbury): There is no privilege in that; that is merely a matter of opinion.

Mr. GARDINER: It is a statement of fact.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. gentleman who had the floor said that the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Gardiner) a few days ago had boasted of having made a shrewd bargain with Great Britain. The Minister of Agriculture is within his rights and within the rules of the house in stating that he did not make such a statement.

Mr. BRUCE: Mr. Speaker, I refer to Hansard of November 14, which contains the report of the speech of the Minister of Agriculture. On page 115 is given a statement of the value of exports of certain Canadian agricultural products and fish to the United Kingdom for the years 1935 to 1940, with estimated figures for 1941. The value of those exports in 1935 was $34,133,394; the value for 1941 it is estimated will be $105,741,000. For nine months of this year the value was $63,343,411.

Mr. GARDINER: Largely without increasing prices and, in some instances, even with decreasing prices.

Mr. BRUCE: Well, that may be so—

Mr. GARDINER: It is so.

Mr. BRUCE: —but I do not think it alters the situation; and if the minister has anything further to say, perhaps he will be good enough to wait until I have concluded my few remarks.

Mr. HOMUTH: Let him make another speech afterwards.

Mr. GARDINER: I can do that if necessary; I have two more rights.

Mr. BRUCE: I was going to say that surely if there ever were a time when we should make a thank-offering, it is now. Let us open our bursting granaries to Britain and give her our wheat. Now is not the time to drive bargains or seek higher prices than are prevailing right at home. Certainly we must pay the farmer, and pay him a fair price, but let our dealings with Britain be on a basis of a thank-offering out of our abundance.

Last Sunday night the second shock came. The Minister of Agriculture is his dual capacity as Minister of National War Services, said on a nation-wide radio hook-up:

Factory managers who contend they cannot produce to capacity without interfering with the training of men may have to be told by someone, just as they are being in Britain, that they as factory managers are not good enough for war time.

The inference from those words is plain: Do what I tell you—or else. He was addressing the patriotic industrialists of Canada.

Mr. GARDINER: Again I rise to a question of privilege. The hon. gentleman is reading into my statement in the house and into my statement last Sunday night something which was not said. The statement which I made was based upon correspondence which I have from factories, and one factory in particular, which refused to send any men to the camp. I am prepared to back up my statement.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): The hon. member for Parkdale is putting his interpretation on the minister's statement. That is done in this house every day and is a legitimate practice. Are we to be muzzled?

Mr. GARDINER: The hon. member let me have the floor to correct it.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): But given an inch you take the whole ell.

Mr. BRUCE: I have quoted, Mr. Speaker, from a press release from the office of the director of public information. My quotation will be found on page 9.

Mr. GARDINER: And, speaking for the two papers which have done most of the talking to which I referred.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Oh, now, that is most uncalled for.

Mr. GARDINER: It is not uncalled for.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Let the hon. gentleman proceed. I implore you, Mr. Speaker, to ask the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Gardiner) to be courteous to the hon. member who is now addressing the house.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member for Parkdale has the floor and will proceed without interruption.

Mr. BRUCE: The Minister of National Defence (Mr. Ralston) said the other day that the army and the men in the factories were partners, that they realized how essential each other's services were. With that I heartily concur. Here, however, is the view the Minister of National War Services has of the importance of labour. I quote from the same radio speech:

My observations in Britain lead me to conclude that we can put too much emphasis upon the need for skilled labour. I inquired in factories and shipbuilding yards everywhere and was told in every line of industry that not more than five per cent required any skill before coming in to do the job, and in a very short time they could operate the machines and tools in the plant.

Mr. GARDINER: Correct.

Mr. BRUCE: The Minister of National Defence said that he would see industrialists in England before trying to work out a new system of training recruits 'on a widespread system of granting exemptions His colleague blew into England like a Saskatchewan dust storm, bargained for millions of dollars' worth of bacon, cheese, apple juice, tomato juice, and saw everything there was to see in the factories. Exemptions are not needed, he says. Only five per cent of the workers need to be skilled, he tells us. It does not matter what experts have been telling us for months. It does not matter what the Minister of National Defence says or finds out. The one-man cyclone from the prairies has been there first. He talked to the workers. He watched the workers. From his long experience—

Mr. HOMUTH: In industry.

Mr. BRUCE: —he tells us, and I again quote from the radio speech:

One girl running a rather important machine said she lived in the country....I have seen similar girls milking cows, and I am sure it took much more nerve, ingenuity and skill to sit on a stool and pull teats than it did to operate this inanimate creation.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the government: We wish to co-operate with you and assist you in every way possible in your war effort, but in turn we expect you to be frank with us and let us know the facts. After listening to the statements of the ministers, one would conclude that everything they had done was one hundred per cent perfect. We would be more likely to believe them if they admitted sometimes that they had made mistakes. They could not do better than follow in this respect the example of British ministers. I will conclude by quoting a few words from Mr. Churchill's speech of yesterday, in which he says:

I have never concealed from the nation or the house the darker side of our dangers and burdens, but it is in adversity that British qualities shine brightest.

I hope and believe that the same may be said of Canadians.

A Bit of Nonsense

Wrong Connection

"In whose reign do we first hear of railways, Mary?" asked the teacher.

"In Solomon's," promptly replied the child.

She was asked to think again, but persisted in her original statement, and the teacher then inquired why she thought so.

"Because," said Mary, "we are told in the Bible that the Queen of Sheba went to Jerusalem with a very great train."

Peyton: "I have a pair at home, Doctor, but I don't wear them because Mother's afraid I'll break them. Besides, she wears them all the time herself."

School Doctor: "Were the glasses prescribed for you or your mother?"

Peyton: "Neither one, Doctor. They are Dad's."

PROVIDENCE IN THE WAR

THERE have been numerous occurrences in the war to encourage those who offer prayer to the Almighty for the victory of Britain's cause. As to the supernatural character of some of these the most confirmed agnostic could scarcely feel doubt.

During the evacuation of Dunkirk a dense fog descended which permitted the safe escape of 245,000 men. Since then, the highest temperatures for three decades have melted the Italian attack upon Egypt into nothingness. The worst earthquake in 120 years has caused material damage to the Rumanian oil supply on which Hitler relied, and affected plans for a blitzkrieg against Greece and Turkey.

Bad flying weather and low ceiling over Britain, during the full moon, curtailed many of Goering's ruthless raids, while at the same time the moon brilliantly lit Germany for operations of the Royal Air Force.

Four weeks earlier than usual, rains have fallen to mire Mussolini's mechanized units on the Greek border and filled ravines with rushing waters.

When one reviews the action of the elements, it seems evident that the Almighty has marvellously answered prayers on behalf of a Christian nation.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Witness Swears Lawyer Said "Woman Is Crazy"

Supporting the judicial order suspending probate of the last will of Mrs. Margaret Anker which is being contested by Mrs. Catherine Hill, her sister, on the ground of alleged testamentary incapacity, Miss Etta Hill, daughter of the claimant, was the only witness heard in this case throughout Monday afternoon in the Surrogate Court with Judge D. B. Coleman of Whitby presiding.

Miss Hill was examined by Jacob Low and cross-examined by W. B. Gordon. Her evidence told of incidents, which occurred when she was with her aunt during the year 1934 when the second will was drawn, purporting unsoundness of Mrs. Anker's mind, with other evidence referring back to 1932 when the first will was made.

The bulk of Mrs. Anker's estate was left by the first will to her two nieces, Miss Hill and Mrs. Vera O'Connor, and by the later one in 1934 the same residue of the estate was left to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Examined by Mr. Low yesterday afternoon Miss Hill briefly recalled the movements of Mrs. Anker from the fall of 1930 when she came from Rochester to Lindsay, then visited in Port Hope and Peterborough, returned to Lindsay and went back to Rochester in 1931.

"I think she would be at least 80 when she went to Lindsay. I went to see her while she was back in Rochester. She had a stroke on March 25, 1932, while she was there. I was told about it and two other seizures."

Finally, Mrs. Anker was brought to Peterborough on August 20, 1932, and stayed at the home of Mrs. L. O'Connor, her niece, Bethune street, witness told Mr. Low.

Witness said her own father had died in 1917. Her mother has been ill for the last thirteen years, and bedridden for nearly three years. She was supported by the members of her family.

Mrs. Anker went to O'Connor's because their home is all on one floor. We have a stairs in our home, and Mrs. Anker had to be helped around. She stayed with Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor for one year less twenty days. When she was there she said she wanted to make a will. I took her to the Standard Medical Clinic for electrical treatments. I told Dr. Dobson I did not think she was in a medical state of mind to make a will."

The first will was made in November, 1932, Miss Hill said. "Mrs. Anker asked me to go with her to G. N. Gordon's office. I stayed in the waiting room. Mr. Gordon came out and asked me if there were such persons as Mrs. Catherine Kennedy, Mrs. A. Fox of Lindsay, Etta Hill and Mrs. L. O'Connor.

I saw her about twice a week at O'Connor's, and Mr. O'Connor brought her in his car to call on us once a week during that time. Mrs. Anker couldn't remember things. She would start a conversation, and stop and put her hand to her head trying to think. Some days she would be fair and would be up and about. She called their little boy Edmund. His name was Victor. Edmund was the name of her own son who died in 1930.

When I went with her to the Bank of Montreal she told Mr. Mackay she could not remember her pass book and that I would have to look after her business. She transferred from Lindsay $1,500 in cash and two bonds amounting to $5,000. I used to draw out money for her until about June, 1933. After August in that year when she went to the hospital she stopped coming to our place.

Mr. Low—"Did you know she was planning to go to the hospital?"

Miss Hill—"I didn't know until the day she went, August 1, 19333. Mrs. O'Connor telephoned to me. I though Mrs. Anker was very fond of the O'Connors. When I went to see her on August 2, she said she had got along very well with them. She said Miss Josephine O'Brien had arranged for her to go to the hospital. Mrs. Anker said they went back to James O'Brien's house and telephoned a priest that the rates were too high, and couldn't they be made cheaper because she intended to stay there for some while. My mother and I went to Mr. Gordon's office. He telephoned Dr. Dobson and then called St. Joseph's Hospital and told them to send Mrs. Anker's Bills to me, that Mrs. Anker was not responsible. In 1933 and 1934 I never missed a week calling on her. I used to wash her hair, because she said they had not done so.

Mrs Anker first left the hospital and went to see Mrs. O'Connor. She insisted on going out, and I told them to let her go."

Miss Hill told of an incident about a fur coat being brought from Lindsay by Mrs. Fox. It was taken to Barrie's to be repaired, and Mrs. Anker declared that it was not her own coat.

"On August 5, 1934, she phoned me to go to the hospital, and when I went there she had forgotten that she sent for me. She asked me if I had anything to eat at my home. Later that week she sent for me again. I went on Saturday morning. Mrs. Anker was crying. She told me everything was taken. I asked her what did she mean, and she said "the things from over town. "I went to the Bank and found Mrs. Anker had taken everything out of the safety deposit box. That was August 11, 1934. I couldn't find any of the papers in her room."

Mr. Low—"While she was in the hospital did she discuss with you making a new will?"

Miss Hill—No."

"I was told at the hospital the will was made on August 10, 1934. My sister was with me. I was told some man had been there and the papers were signed."

Mr. Low—"What state was she in that day?"

Miss Hill—"She seemed very confused."

"When I went home I phoned Mr. Gordon. He asked me to go and see him, that he had been to see Mrs. Anker. I went down to see Mr. Gordon on August 14. He said he made a will. He handed it to me to read it. Mr. Gordon said: 'That woman is crazy. I've made her four or five wills.' My sister, Mrs. Caldwell, was with me."

Mr. Low—"Did you ask him why he made it?"

Miss Hill—"He said: 'If I didn't, some one else would, if they wanted it'."

Witness said she did not see the 1932 will three weeks after Mrs. Anker's death. It was in the safety deposit box. "She had told me she left the residue of her estate to me and Ms. L. O'Connor."

Mr. Low—"What was her condition at the hospital in 1934?"

Miss Hill—"She was always wanting me to take her out. I couldn't because I had my mother to look after. I couldn't get another place for her. Anyway she told me she couldn't go that day because they had hidden her clothes. That was shortly after the will was drawn. Often she would say she couldn't remember what she had for dinner."

Miss Hill testified that she had gone to the hospital on March 10, 1935, with Jessie Maconomy.

"Three or four nurses and one sister were in the room. They were coming out as she went in. Mrs. Anker picked up her cane and struck at me. She said a maid had hid behind the door and took some snapshots of her. I asked her why, and she said she didn't know; and maybe she wanted them for me. I stayed about fifteen minutes that time. The next morning at the clinic I told Dr. Dobson about her raising the cane, and he said I'd better stay away from her for some time."

Miss Hill said Mrs. Anker always recognized her until the week prior to her death. "On August 11 I asked Mr Mackay at the bank why he had let the things in the safety I was not present, with my sig- deposit box be taken away when nature on the bank's ledger. He said there was no harm with a nun being present. He said he would get the papers back in a few days. In the following week he phoned that they were back."

"Two weeks after Mrs. Anker's death I asked Mr. Gordon if he had been notified of her death. He said he hadn't. He got the will and read it After he was through I asked him if it was a legal will. He said the only funny thing about it was that Mrs. Anker wanted to leave him some money, and he said it was not a usual thing for a client to leave her lawyer any money."

Miss Hill declared that Mrs. Anker had told her several times at the hospital that she had no money and some man was paying her bills. "I can't remember those dates."

Mr. Low—"Did you know she had any money in the States?"

Miss Hill—"No."

"When did you first hear of that?"

"After her death, in a letter from Mrs. W. O'Connor of Rochester.

"On August 5, 1934, Mrs. Anker asked me who the lady was with me. It was my sister, Mrs. Caldwell. My sister had been there before. Mrs. Anker knew her on some occasions, and on others she didn't."

Miss Hill said Mrs. Anker had told her in 1934 about people stealing her clothes. That had occurred even back to 1932. She also said Mrs. Anker used to hide under the bed clothing, fruit that was brought to her, because she thought some one would steal it.

Referring to the hallucinatoins of Mrs. Anker as related by Miss Hill, W. B. Gordon asked her when it was that Mrs. Anker began talking about some man paying her bills and the reply was in 1935.

Witness said she took care of the majority of her aunt's accounts after she came from Lindsay, and paid most of her hospital bills.

Mr. Gordon—"In regard to the cane raising incident, you and Miss Maconomy were alone in the room with Mrs. Anker when you say that happened.

Miss Hill—"Yes."

Mr. Gordon—"Was she excited?"

Miss Hill—"Yes. You could hear her out in the hall."

"How do you remember that date March 10, 1935?"

"It was my mother's birthday, and I took a few of the things we had, little cakes, to the hospital."

"Did you know that Dr. Dobson had not seen Mrs. Anker from June, 1934?"

"No, sir."

Miss Hill said the bed was between her and Mrs. Anker.

"Did you ask Dr. Dobson to go and see her?"

"No, sir."

"Did Mrs. Anker tell you in 1935 that she was capable of looking after her affairs?"

"No, sir."

"Mrs. Anker did not call the boy Victor O'Connor, Edmund, when she made that will?"

"No she called him Victor."

Mr. Gordon enquired whether Dr. Dobson had said anything when Miss Hill had told him in August, 1932, that Mrs. Anker was talking about making a will.

Miss Hill—"He told me to let her make a will. He'd not guarantee any will of hers would carry in the courts."

"Did he use the phrase in the courts?"

"I am not sure now whether he said in law or courts."

Witness said Mrs. Anker expressed a wish to make her will when she was at the Clinic. That was in September 1932. "She was after me all the time to make a will."

"When she was staying with the O'Connors did she blame anybody for stealing her clothing?"

"No; she didn't blame Mrs. O'Connor."

"When she was at the hospital, did she blame the nuns?"

"Only once when the papers were taken from the safety deposit box at the bank."

Miss Hill said she looked through the drawers but could not find the papers.

Mr. Gordon—"It may have been that the sisters were keeping them for her?"

"It might."

"And she asked you to look for them in her room?"

"Yes. I looked in her dresser drawers."

Another incident told by Miss Hill was about an idea Mrs. Anker had that she had paid a bill at the hospital. Witness found $100 in her club bag, and paid it on the bill which amounted to $105. Witness asked a nun whether the bill was paid, and the answer was that it was not paid.

Miss Hill said she believed the Sister, that there was no receipt. Mrs. Anker was very excited about the episode. It was on May 22, 1934.

Witness said her aunt's board was not paid during 1935 and 1936. Miss Hill had not received any accounts from the hospital. In January, 1937, the management enquired from Mr. Mackay what was to be done as the account was getting quite large.

"Mr. Mackay wrote me, and I saw him, and went from the bank to the hospital. One of the bonds had to be sold to pay the bill. It was $1,400. Mr. Mackay advised me to have the hospital bill paid every three months."

Miss Hill said Mrs. Anker was paying $2.50 a day for her board at the hospital. In May, 1934, she continued, there was a bill for special nurse, twenty-eight days. "I don't know who engaged her. Mrs. Anker said she didn't want to be alone. I don't know who paid that bill." Witness said that for a long time she had paid accounts and bought clothing, hats, underwear, two bathrobes, and so on.

Continuance of the trial was postponed by Judge Coleman until Friday next at 10 o'clock.

Montreal Medical Corps First Job Is Saving Babies

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Nov. 26 — (CP Cable). — A Montreal unit of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps is in the civilian front line fighting against death that flies by night.

In addition to caring for 140 children placed in the comparative safety of a Canadian general hospital after being evacuated from children's hospitals in a bomb-scarred Midland city, the unit has established surgical teams for performing operations on the scene of bombings.

It had been suggested that medical units of the British Army should be used for such civil work throughout the United Kingdom. While the suggestions were receiving official consideration, Col. A. E. Lundon, commandant of the Canadian Hospital, hurdled red tape and established the surgical teams for work among civilians and servicemen alike.

The teams composed of two surgeons, an anaesthetist, and the required number of orderlies are subject to call at any hour day or night for operations within a five-mile radius of the hospital. The British-American Ambulance Service is co-operating in the scheme. A first-aid post has been established at the Canadian hospital for the care of bomb casualties until they can be safely moved to a civil hospital.

6 Weeks to 12 Years.

The children, who are receiving the expert attention of the commandant and his medical staff of 22 officers, range from six weeks to 12 years. All are from poor families and there are many surgical cases among them.

The hospital was being outfitted for opening around Christmas, but when the need arose for evacuating children from the bombed city the Canadians hurried their plans and were ready to receive the tots in a few hours. The Canadian Red Cross sent feed bottles, clothing, and amusements for the children.

A small staff of nurses who accompanied the children from their own hospital are being assisted by khaki-clad orderlies.

"It was a shock when we found a baby in one hand and a feeding bottle in the other," one brawny orderly confessed, "but we are used to it now and it's good training. I hope to have babies of my own some day."

"These kids have been in the front line," said another. "They are deserving of army medical attention as anyone else."

When Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, and Mrs. Massey paid a week-end visit to the hospital the only adult patient was Sgt. Don Butt of Montreal. He suffered head injuries in a motorcycle crash.

Soldiers' Aid Meets

FOWLER'S CORNERS, Nov. 26—(ENS). — The Lakevale Branch of the Soldiers' Aid Society was enjoyably entertained at the home of Mrs. Eva Deyell, when a quilt was completed for Red Cross purposes.

At the conclusion of the quilting a pot-luck supper was served. Members and visitors present included: Mesdames J. Tully, S. Tully, K. Nurse, H. Archer, R. McAdam, M. Deyell, S. Mahood, M. Archer, G. Tully, J. M. Young, William Darling, Wallace Darling, R. Nurse, Mrs. Austin, and Mrs. H. Nesbitt.

British Have Faith In Mr. Churchill

"Our soldiers are only waiting now to give them a bashing." This is one sentence of a letter received by Mrs. C. A. Cooper, 271 Mark street, Peterborough. She has been the recipient of two letters from the "old country" recently, and both tell the same story, the determination of the people in England, and the United Kingdom, to keep the Germans worried.

With houses damaged, Mrs. Cooper's sister and her niece write stirring letters of the fight for England. Most of their friends' houses have been to some extent damaged, and though bombs often land within a few hundred feet of them, the people in the homeland never waver.

Words of praise for Winston Churchill come in the mail always, and the faith he inspires amongst his people is echoed in the letters Mrs. Cooper has received. "We have a wonderful Premier, and when he speaks to us on the wireless, he cheers us up....We have such faith in him."

Mrs. Cooper's niece has had a baby recently, and in her letter she tells of its birth during an air raid. It seems quite in harmony with the noise, the mother says, and it doesn't seem to bother her in the least. The baby is thriving on the constant excitement the letter goes on, and is "the most gorgeous little daughter imaginable."

Tales of bombing follow, with a vivid description of the landing of an incendiary bomb within a stone's throw of the house. The British spirit is noticably present, and the writer says "We always remember that we are British, and we keep our chins up."

Mrs. Cooper's sister seems intent on her thought not to worry her sister with the news that might be frightening, which seems quite typical of the letters coming over now. The amazing unselfishness of the people, and their desire is to explain that they are not so badly off as Canadians might think, but are able to carry on...as usual.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, November 27
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

LUNAR as well as mutual aspects of major planets bearing rule on the affairs of this day signify much excitement, confusion, turmoil and tension. In all relations there may be commotion and conflict, with scattering of forces as well as resources, excesses, hostility, and contradictions. Difficulties and distresses may best be vanquished by extreme caution, restraint, sagacity and high principle. Reckless, belligerent, tumultuous and impetuous conduct of threatening and frustrating circumstances would prove disastrous.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which progress and satisfaction may be menaced by divers disturbances, distresses, opposition and conflict. Such turbulence and commotion are likely to be aggravated by rash, hasty, impetuous and violent activities when difficult and challenging situations call for calm, controlled and clever management and shrewd insight into obstructing and malefic causes.

A child born on this day may have many contradictory traits which call for sympathetic direction and understanding. It may be impetuous, aggressive, wayward but ambitious and shrewd, with probable programs of rule or ruin.

LENGTHY LIST OF BASEBALL PLAYERS TO FIGURE IN EXCHANGES

See Big Session In Player Trade At Ball Meeting

By RAY PEACOCK
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—For everybody except the Detroit Tigers, who are in coventry," the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues in Atlanta come Dec. 4 should be a bright lively trading session.

That's the usual optimistic forecast, even though it may turn out (as it has so often in the past) that the only player trades involve a couple of Joes nobody had bothered to mention before the meeting. Or does afterward, for that matter.

Larry MacPhail just couldn't wait until the Atlanta meeting to announce that he had acquired Kirby Higbe from the Phillies to pitch for the Brooklyn boys. MacPhail may be one of the busiest traders at the session—he just can't resist buying outfielders at $25,000 a throw.

If it isn't MacPhail who sets the pace, it may be Mr. James Dykes of the Chicago White Sox, the American League's most active ivory broker.

About Ted Williams

One trade rumor, complete with denials, has Pitcher Johnny Rigney and an outfielder going from Chicago to Boston for Outfielder Ted Williams, the modern Joe Jackson. Dykes also would like to pick up a second baseman somewhere, and has to prepare for First Baseman Joe Kuhel's pension.

National League clubs still are nibbling at the Phillies' remaining trade bait, Pitcher Hugh Mulcahy.

Fear of the draft, of course, may hold up things. The Yankees, now that they have moved out of the American League's doghouse to make room for Detroit, have a lot of elderly talent they would like to dispose of at pre-war prices.

The Yanks have offers for Frank Crosetti, who might do a Bartell in a different uniform. But the chance that Uncle Sam may put Phil Rizzuto in khaki for a year is a long one for the Yankees to take.

The market for catchers is bullish, the Cardinals are comfortably overstocked, and the Cubs, Giants and Dodgers are reported in trading moods. Hank Danning, Mickey Owen, Babe Phelps and one or two backstops may change uniforms.

Possibly the Cardinals will peddle Walker Cooper, rookie catcher and brother of Pitcher Morton Cooper, but it doesn't seem likely that such a box office attraction would be broken up.

Here's a list of players most likely to figure in any winter exchanges:

American League: Washington—Rick Ferrell, Ken Chase. St. Louis—Don Heffner. Philadelphia—Wally Moses. Detroit—Nobody unless the A.L. rescinds its no-trades-with-the-champions rule. Cleveland — Jeff Heath. Boston—Ted Williams. Chicago—Rigney. New York—Crosetti, Jake Powell, George Selkirk.

Bunny Morganson, press agent for the O.H.A. admits there was surprise among the officers of the Ontario Association at Saturday's annual meeting when the sub-committee's proposal to take a bigger share of the gate receipts in final series and also to cut in on group finals and semi-final games was adopted almost without discussion. "Several officers," says the O.H.A. publicity man "figured this matter would cause quite an uproar." In our opinion it should have caused an uproar. On the strength of the annual financial statement submitted to the meeting there was no reason whatever to justify this raid upon the finances of the hockey clubs hroughout the province. It was shown that there was a cash balance on hand of nearly $2,000 and in addition the O.H.A. was able to invest $6,000 in war bonds during the year. With $8,000 available as a reserve the additional grab has been made by the parent body is impossible to defend.

* * * * * *

The surprising feature about the whole affair is that only one voice was raised in protest. W. C. Kerr of the Marlboro Club suggested that the O.H.A. instead of slicing off a generous hunk of the gross gates should "play ball with the clubs and take their proposed increase from the net rather than the gross." The Marlboro man's suggestion was entirely reasonable but, strange as it may seem, he got no support from the delegates. Under the present setup the whole load is carried by the hockey clubs. They have to pay for the rink, pay the referees and the advertising, put up the travelling expenses of the visiting club and do it all out of what is left after the O.H.A. has taken its chunk of the gross receipts. Granted the governing body needs certain amount of funds to carry on but we fail to see why a big surplus is considered essential, especially when it has to be taken from hockey clubs, many of which find it tough work to keep out of the red.

* * * * * *

The thing is done now and any complaints are just a waste of time. What we find it impossible to understand is why scores of delegates representing the clubs whose gates were being raided should sit silent and let the moguls get away with it with hardly a word of protest. The clubs had the matter in their own hands. They had the power to vote down the proposal by an emphatic majority. Instead they accepted the raid as a matter of course. It will be too late to kick later on in the season when the governing body steps in and grabs off a share of the gross gates. About that time the clubs will realize that on a certain Saturday morning in November 1940 they missed the boat.

* * * * * *

And Now A Boost

Having fired this broadside at the O.H.A. we might as well give that body a pat on the back for the unanimity with which the C.A.H.A. proposal for an Across Canada Red Cross hockey week starting Monday January 6 was adopted at the annual meeting. Under that scheme every club in the association will turn over one night to the effort with a regular group game scheduled and the proceeds will be donated to the Red Cross. Referees and other officials will give their services without charge and it is expected this hockey effort will raise a very substantial sum for a most worthy cause. It has been decided that 75 per cent of the amount collected will be given to the Canadian Red Cross and the balance will be used by the C.A.H.A. to supply hockey equipment to the many soldier clubs that are being formed. Hockey week will be a big event throughout the Dominion.

Congratulations are in order for Bowmanville High, conquerors of P.C.I. this season, upon their feat in coming from behind to defeat Belleville 10 to 4 Saturday and win the round from the Quinte students 31 to 30, thus taking the Central Ontario interscholastic title. Belleville, with one of its strongest teams in years won at home 26 to 21 and outscored Bowmanville 3 to 1 in the first half of Saturday's return game. Clare kicking a field goal while Brown kicked over Belleville's line for a rouge for Bowmanville's only point of the half. However, the Bowmanville plays began to click in the third period. Plunges by Colville and McIlveen carried the play down field and a forward from McIlveen carried the play down field and a forward from McIlveen to Allen gave the ultimate winners a touch and Brown converted. Soon after Brown won the championship by booting a goal from the field, the ball hitting the crossbar and bouncing over. Belleville scored a rouge to wind the affair up but could not connect for another point.

There is a report going around that Coach Alex Ponton has called a practice of his Balmy Beach squad to be held at the noon hour in front of Toronto's City Hall. The idea is to get the Bammies somewhat accustomed to pulling off their plays before a crowd. The O.R.F.U. champs have been playing so long before empty seats that there is grave danger that when a real crowd turns out next Saturday to see the first game in the home-and-home series for Eastern honors the Beachers may develop stage fright. Seriously, though, this playoff arrangement is about the first break the Bammies have had from a financial viewpoint and real football fans will hope that they cash in handsomely Saturday. They have been operating on slim gates so long that they must almost imagine they are dreaming when they hear of a demand for tickets for Saturday's game.

Toronto ball club will retain its franchise in the International League and the veteran Lena Blackbourne will pilot the 1941 edition. This was the double announcement made yesterday from the club's headquarters. For some time there have been rumors, apparently well-founded that Toronto as a pro ball spot was all washed up and that the Leafs' franchise would be transferred. However the club is in again and will make another effort next year to improve conditions. All that is necessary, of course, is a ball club that will prove a contender. Toronto is a good ball town and there would be plenty of support from the hinterland if the Leafs were putting up an argument. Lena Blackburne's qualities as a manager are beyond questions. If he can get any material at all to work on he will have a fighting ball club and the Toronto outfit may be able to drag itself out of the financial slough of despond in which it has been mired for a number of seasons.

* * * * * *

Two raher interesting battles are carded in the N.H.L. tonight. Toronto Maple Leafs invade New York where they will clash with the Rangers in what should prove a tidy argument. Leafs rarely have much luck against the Patrick pack in New York but the 4 to 1 defeat plastered on the Toronto gang by the Rangers on the opening night of the season is still rankling and Hap Day's athletes will be all out tonight to tie a defeat on the New Yorkers. The absence of Art Coulter, Ranger defence star, will give them a good chance but we still like the Rangers for this battle. Over in Boston Art Ross's Bruins who have just finished a successful road trip after a dismal showing at home will endeavor to pull off their first win of the season in front of their hometown customers. They should turn the trick at that for their opponents are the tail-end Canadiens who have managed to hang up only one victory in eight starts.

Link Hartnett With Jerseys

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 26 (AP) —The name of Gabby Hartnett, recently deposed as manager of Chicago Cubs, was linked today in corridor gossip at the International Baseball League directors' meeting to the vacancy at the helm of Jersey City Giants.

Meanwhile, league officials decided to reduce the playing schedule next year from 161 to 154 games, voted to retain the Governor's cup playoffs, re-elected President Frank M. Shaughnessy to a three-year term and agreed to open the 1941 season April 17.

Besides the grapevine report that Hartnett has the inside track on the Jersey City post, the names of Benny Borgemann, former Sacramento pilot, and George Uhle, one-time major league pitcher and more recently coach of the Cubs under Hartnett, were mentioned for the Syracuse and Buffalo managerships, respectively.

Previous reports that Toronto might withdraw from the league were dissipated when club representatives, headed by Senator Salter Hayden, announced Lena Blackburne as manager and showed willingness and financial ability to stay in the circuit. A committee was appointed to consider the club's plea for special consideration because of Canadian law which prevents the Leafs from playing home games on Sundays.

The league also voted to maintain the player limit at twenty-one and to keep the current salary schedule. A $5,000 award for first-place winner in the regular campaign was voted, while the playoffs victor will receive $3,000 and the Governor's cup.

Lena Blackburn To Pilot Leafs

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 26 (Special)—With the signing of Lena Blackburne as manager succeeding Tony Lazzeri, the Toronto Leafs flashed the "Go" signal for at least another year, dispelling all reports that the Canadian Metropolis was about to toss up their franchise in the International League.

Blackburne was appointed by Senator Salter Hayden and Percy Gardiner of the Toronto Club for one year on an unannounced salary.

The Leafs asked for special consideration from the league because they are handicapped by the law which prohibits Sunday baseball in Toronto. They asked for 50 per cent of the gate receipts of seven Sunday games played in other cities, which would normally be Toronto's "home" games. The league appointed a committee composed of Oliver French of Rochester, Jack Cook of Jersey City, Don Beach of Buffalo and Senator Salter Hayden of Toronto to go more fully into the matter.

Blackburne was a popular choice at the meeting of the league here yesterday. His baseball is known to be sound and he has a rich background in the major and minor leagues. His signing leaves only three posts to be filled, at Buffalo, Jersey City and Syracuse.

Strong Defence Main Hope Of Balmy Beach

TORONTO, Nov. 26 — Perhaps you didn't notice it, but it happens that the same two clubs that started the Eastern Canada football season will be the principals in the last games of the Eastern Canada championship series.

Ottawa Rough Riders, carrying the colors for the Interprovincial Union, will clash with Balmy Beach, standard bearers of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, in a two-game, total-points series, beginning here next Saturday at Varsity Stadium.

At Lansdowne Park, Ottawa, last September, the Ottawans embarked on what has proven their most successful season in years. Both competitively and more important, financially. They licked Alex Ponton's young Beachers 10 to 0, a team which at that time was badly disjointed through lack of practice together, but which was good enough to make the doughty Riders go all out to get points. Now the same clubs are arranging battle formations for the payoff of their friendly rivalry.

Beaches Strong Defensively.

In September it was an exhibition game, a test of strength in the preliminary stages of the grid season. Now in November—and the series carries on until the first week of December—it is a test of strength of two of the most highly regarded teams to come down to the East payoff wicket in year. Balmy Beach, the team with the superior defence, and Ottawa, the team with the superior offence.

Beaches didn't have Don Crowe, star backfielder, when they played against the Riders, but that doesn't mean that Crowe would have made all the difference between defeat and victory. He wouldn't have—but he would have helped a lot to forestall those 10 points. It was in the Ottawa exhibition that young Bill Drinkwater, the freshman to senior company, showed his first signs of greatness. Drinkwater, the long-geared halfback, has now blossomed into a full-fledged star.

On what Beaches have shown this year they rate as one of the best tackling teams to come along in years. Their front wall is well sprinkled with a mixture of experience and youth, and they have a much stronger offence than they had in September.

Manson Sparks Locals

Ottawa, if anything, has not made any great improvement in their play. The club that whipped Argos 41-6 was the hottest team they have ever put on the field. They were terrific. But from that time Rough Riders had to struggle to get down in front of Argos, Hamilton and Montreal.

Alex Ponton has finally found the answer to his quarterback problems. Johnny Manson has filled the spot perfectly, and fits in well with Messrs. Bobby Porter, Crowe, Frankie Seymour, Drinkwater and Co. Beaches still have their best effort ahead of them. They whipped mediocre opposition in the O.R.F.U. and were never at any time forced to worry much about the final outcome. They come into this series after playing against Sarnia Battery, a solid and sometimes brilliant defensive team. Sarnia's stout wingline play forced Beaches to go the limit along the front wall, and after mingling with guys like Paithouski, Trepanier, the Norris' et al., Beaches won't be stampeded by Wadsworth, Herman, Sprague and the rest of the Ottawans.

Lew Hayman took his defeat on Saturday in very sportsmanlike manner. He had nothing but praise for Ottawa, and when someone nearby suggested Riders were lucky, Hayman checked him, saying: "Listen, never mind that stuff. You've got to be good to be lucky. Ottawa was just too good for us."

Fred Waghorne Sr., the veteran lacrosse, hockey and football official and executive officer, is in high glee these days. Wag refuses to watch any senior football games unless Balmy Beach is one of the competing teams. He can hardly wait for this Saturday to come along. "We," repeats Fred, "can beat Ottawa."

It was announced last night by C.R.U. officials that tickets for the game here Saturday will go on sale this afternoon at the usual agencies that dispense the pasteboards.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Out of a job, and asked to leave her boarding house because of the wide publicity she received as the result of an attempted prison break, Lona Ackerman is almost desperate because she cannot locate Jim Claridge, the only friend she has left. Just before Lona sped to the penetentiary to see her dying father, serving a life term for murder, she and Jim had fallen in love. At the warden's house during her visit to the prison, two escaping convicts force her into the warden's car and make a safe getaway until Lona grabs the steering wheel and the car crashes. Only slightly hurt, she finds her father has died in the meantime. After taking his body home, she returns to the city. Finally Jim calls her and asks her to marry him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER TWENTY

JIM WANTED Lona to marry him immediately, that afternoon, as soon as they cold go through the motions of obtaining a license and finding a minister. Now that they had made up their minds, he argued, there was no reason for waiting. But, laughingly, Lona put him off. It wasn't decent, she said. A bride must have some time to get ready for her wedding. She couldn't be married in her crumpled office suit.

"You look good to me in anything, girl," he protested, his eyes meeting hers across the restaurant table with a new look in them, a possessive, promising look that brought a warm glow to her strained face and made her feel suddenly alive. Alive, after all these days of just enduring, just getting through things because they must, somehow, be lived through.

"I hope you're not going to want any fuss," he brought out. "I hate that sort of thing. You're not planning any church aisle stuff, are you?"

She laughed. "I've had enough publicity this last week. I'm wondering if we could go away some place, out of the city. Do you suppose the reporters will write us up if they find us out?"

"They'll eat it up. . . . Prison Escape Girl Weds. . . . Can't you see the headlines?" He crinkled his eyes into a frown over his cigaret and Lona felt suddenly panicky.

"Couldn't we elope?" she brought out. "To Greenwich, maybe?"

But he shook his head. "Greenwich is too public. All the runaways go there. The reporters watch the license lists and they'd spot us right off, unless—" He hesitated, and she sensed a sudden tenseness in his eyes. "You wouldn't want to use some other name, would you, girl? They wouldn't tumble then."

For a moment Lona frowned. "But, Jim, that wouldn't be legal, would it? I thought you had to use your own name on a marriage license."

"Oh, it would be legal, all right. It's the intent that counts, not the name. There's many a man gets himself hooked up under an alias Why, for all you know, maybe I'm not using my right name. You've only my word that I was born Jim Claridge."

He grinned at her, and she had to smile back. Gazing into his face, it came to her that she really did know very little about this man she was planning to marry. Nothing but that he was kind and strong, and that he loved her. She was sure of that, now. But he had told her almost nothing about himself, and what he had told her might not be true.

"I'll take your word for it, Jim," she brought out, abruptly, ashamed of even the shadow of a doubt. "And I suppose there's no use trying to run from the newspapers. I'll just have to take the publicity." She shrugged and he gave her hand a reassuring pressure.

"We'll make it Friday," she promised when he did not speak. "Friday afternoon—" She broke off, then, flushing at her own boldness.

"Friday! That's three whole days! When we could be hunting up a license right now. You women are funny." He shook his head and she laughed again.

"Wait until you see the wedding dress I'm going to buy," she told him.

It couldn't be white, of course. With Daddy just laid to rest in the grassy cemetery back in Bridgewater she had to pass up anything reminiscent of bridal satins and orange blossoms. Blue was her next best color and it was upon a demure little fall model of navy crepe that she decided finally. With a delicious recklessness she cashed the check Mr. Sanders had given her, and bought a trim little blue felt hat with turned-up brim and a price-tag that would have sent her scurrying at any other time. She even managed a pair of blue pumps, with the sheerest of matching hose, and a pair of smart hand-knitted gloves.

Waiting for Jim to call for her at the hotel on the last evening before what was scheduled to be their wedding day, she tried on all her purchases together. She adjusted the collar of filmy white organdy on the blue dress and stood for a long moment studying herself critically in the mirror. She looked slim, and girlish, and not very bride-like, she told herself severely. More like a business girl ready for work.

She fluffed out her hair a little more beneath the severe lines of the hat and wondered if Jim would like her in it. Funny, to be thinking of someone's approval. It had been such a long time since she had had to care about anybody's opinion of her clothes. Not since the old days back in Bridgewater that were gone now, past hope of return, forever.

With tears starting in her eyes she sat down, still in her bridal outfit, and counted the money which remained in the shabby old purse that had gone with her through so many weary days. It totaled ten dollars. Impulsively she took pen and paper from the dresser drawer and penned a letter to the old minister in Bridgewater who had buried her father.

She told him she was to be married, that she would be happy, and he must not be concerned about her. Into the envelope she slipped the ten dollars and directed that it was to be spent for flowers for the new grave in the churchyard. Her eyes were swimming with tears as she wrote the familiar address and sealed the letter. It was, she realized, the last thing she would ever do for Daddy with her own money.

Traces of her tears still remained when she met Jim a few minutes later in the hotel lobby. She had changed to her work suit again and scrubbed a powder puff over her face to obliterate them, but her eyes were still red. His face darkened a little as he looked at her.

"You've been crying, girl," he accused. "Aren't you happy?"

"Of course I'm happy, Jim. It's just that I was—lonesome, I guess. I got to thinking of Daddy . . ."

"You shouldn't be alone." He took her arm as they left the hotel together, and his hand was warm and strong. Close to him she felt safe.

"Jim!" she brought out, snuggling against him as they started up the street. "You're so good to me, Jim."

He turned then, there on the street, and looked down at her with sudden pleading in his eyes. For a moment she thought he was going to speak, and she waited. But in-

OSHAWA G-MEN DEFEAT ST. CATHARINES SAINTS FIVE TO TWO

Sailors Beaten In Close Game With Hamilton

TORONTO, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Just when it looked as if S. Catharines Saints were starting to hit their stride, little Ebbie Edmison had to go and put on the greatest display of playmaking in the Senior A Division of the Ontario Hackey Association this season.

The former Brantford flash led his Oshawa teammates to a 5-2 victory over the Saints in Oshawa last night by scoring one goal and assisting in all the others. The triumph atoned for a loss to the Saints in St. Catharines last Friday.

In the only other senior tilt last night, the classy Hamilton Dofascos lengthened their league lead with a 6-3 decision over Port Colborne Sailors. Three goals in the final frame did the trick.

In Edmison's show, which jumped him up among the league scoring leaders, the diminutive forward set up his wingers, Johnny Carr-Harris and Johnny Thompson, with two goals each. Then, to top off the performance, he scored the final home tally on a pass from Carr-Harris, former Kingston performer, late in the second period.

Paul Mundrick, the big fellow who performed with Toronto Goodyears last season, snared the first goal for the visitors, and Rosy Rossini scored the other. Three major penalties were issued in the scoreless and heavy-checking third period.

Fritz Lays in Two.

Over at the small Port Colborne rink, Doug. Fritz of Hamilton scored twice to retain his circuit scoring lead. Other Dofasco scorers were Clarence Shillington, Conick and Polly Miocinovich, who also counted twice. Jimmy McKelvie, with two goals, and Lloyd Fitzgerald, were the scorers for the Tars.

Four major penalties were issued by Referee Johnny Jones of Guelph during the struggle, all for fighting. Despite the defeat, Port Colborne showed improved play over their other games this season. Always a contender, the Tars each season seem to take a little more time to round into shape than other teams.

Results of the tilts gave Hamilton a total of 12 points, three more than Niagara Falls and Toronto Marlboros. St. Catharines, Port Colborne, and Oshawa are tied for the third spot, each with six points. The luckless London Streamliners are the cellar occupants with but one victory in seven games played.

ART WIEBE

One of the cleanest-playing defencemen in the National Hockey League is Art Wiebe, right defence of the Chicago Black Hawk team. Yet he's had more stiches placed in various parts of his anatomy than the average player in the strenuous winter sport, where stitches are a regular part of the proceedings.

Curiously, practically all of the wounds which necessitated stitching of the Wiebe face or body have been quite accidental. In the Hawk-Toronto playoff game of 1938, Wiebe was sitting on the bench, as the second period ended. A Leaf player carelessly tossed the puck into the air, it sailed over the boards by the Hawk bench, caught Wiebe over the left eye as he turned toward the dressing rooms. It was good for six stitches.

He had twelve stitches taken at training-camp this season, for cuts resulting from accidental clashes with teammates.

Wiebe started playing hockey when he was only nine years old. In 10 years he suffered only one cut, necessitating three stitches. Then he joined the Hawks, training in 1936 at Duluth. His first day in camp, he got four stitches over an eye. Another day a skate nicked him in the throat for four. In practice, he ran into Earl Seibert's stick for eleven stitches. Last season, he had 30 stitches in all.

The biggest single job of stitching, in hockey circles, is believed to have been done on Helge Bostrom when he was a Black Hawk. A skate caught him over the instep and it required 148 stitches to pull torn muscles back together. Although this record is held by a former Black Hawk, Wiebe isn't at all anxious to excel it.

Gophers Are Solid In No. 1 Position

NEW YORK, Nov. 26 — (AP). — Now that Minnesota has finished its season with eight straight victories and the Western Conference football championship, it appears nothing can dislodge the Gophers from No. 1 position in The Associated Press United States College football ranking poll.

One week away from the final rankings, Minnesota heads the list with 1,562 points—96 more than Texas Aggies, 298 more than Stanford, and 448 more than Boston College. Of the 170 voters in this seventh weekly roundup of national opinion, 88 plunked for the Gophers as first choice.

The standings (points figured on 10-9-8-7-6 etc. bases):—

1, Minnesota 1,562; 2, Texas A. and M. 1,476; 3, Stanford 1,264; 4, Boston College 1,114; 5, Michigan 1,042; 6, Tennessee 595; 7, Northwestern 396; 8, Nebraska 391; 9, Georgetown 229 3-7; 10, Penn. 227 3-7.

Bruins Gunning To Turn Score Upon Canadiens

TORONTO, Nov. 26 — (CP). — There are indications that Boston Bruins, like all big things slow to start, are beginning to roll in the manner to which the National Hockey League has become accustomed. It just didn't seem right to see Boston wallowing around the bottom of the league so long.

When the firing from the heavy week-end program had subsided, the Bruins had rushed up to fourth place and only a point behind Chicago Black Hawks. Their defence, the question mark in the Bruins' early game, showed lots of class in holding the opposition to three goals in two games.

The week-end performance was all the more impressive for the Bruins' victory was over New York Rangers and was the first defeat suffered by the Stanley Cup champions. They led into the third period against the high-flying Red Wings of Detroit and came off with a tie. Even Art Ross, the perfectionist, could find little fault in that kind of work.

Tonight the Bruins, who must have been a little nettled at the uncomplimentary things said about them in their 1-1 tie against Montreal Canadiens at the start of the season, have a chance to settle some of this score. They play hosts to the cellar-place Montrealers.

Their defence bolstered by the acquisition of big Jack Portland, Canadiens have been getting stronger and making it tougher every game for the position forwards. The Bruins are the kind of a team they like—a solid bunch without the elusiveness of Toronto Maple Leafs or New York Rangers.

The Leafs and Rangers clash in the only other game tonight. It is their second meeting of the season, the return bout of the season's opener when the Rangers spoiled Toronto's opening night by winning 4-1.

The Leafs have gone a long way since then. They have lost only one other game and have showed the most devastating offensive of any club, an attack so evenly spread that the blanketing of Syl Apps and Gord Drillon no longer means a choking of Leaf power. Sweeney Schriner is moving now, and so is Billy (The Kid) Taylor, Walter Stanowski, and the others.

Rangers called up Defenceman Bill Allum from Philadelphia Ramblers of the American League to bolster their defence for the Leaf visit. Short-handed because of Art Coulter's injury, Rangers decided to take no chances with a weakened rearguard.

Rose Bowl Game At New Year's Is Aim Of The Stanford Team

By SAM JACKSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 23 (AP) —A Cinderella story of football is being written this season, and its logical storybook ending should take place in the Rose Bowl on New Year's day.

Its hero is Clark Daniel Shaughnessy, Stanford University's new coach. With the same players who in 1939 gave Stanford its most dismal, disastrous season in years, he mopped up the Pacific Coast conference.

Until Stanford completes its schedule by playing its old rival, California, on November 30 the happy ending will have to be held in abeyance. But even if a defeat edges Stanford out of the Rose Bowl, the 1940 team still will have made history.

At the end of 1939, Stanford had had C. E. "Tiny" Thornhill as football coach for seven years. With his famous "vowing sophomores" he had won a conference championship and a Rose Bowl date three times, but recently things were going badly. Except for its final victory over Dartmouth, the Stanford team was unable to win a single game on its 1939 schedule.

From Chicago

Thornhill was dismissed. About this time the University of Chicago, after a humiliating season of lopsided losses, decided to discontinue football and Shaughnessy became a coach without a team. Stanford hired him.

Shaughnessy, 48, has been identified with football as either player or coach for 30 years. His reputation was made largely at Tulane and Loyola universities in New Orleans.

Shaughnessy brought with him the T formation which the professional Chicago Bears use for offense, and which had been employed only sparingly in coast football.

Quarterback Star

Shaughnessy is coaching the Indians through a brilliant season, but the man who does their thinking on the field as well as their most spectacular playing is Quarterback Frankie Albert.

Because of his deadly passing, Albert is being mentioned in the same breath with the great Sammy Baugh. And his admirers believe that if he doesn't rate all-American at the end of this triumphant Stanford year, next season—he has another year of competition—he is sure to make the grade.

Albert is a left-handed passer and a left-foot kicker. When he's in the game—which is practically all of the time—he does Stanford's punting and goal kicking. In addition to calling the plays and handling the ball from centre in Shaughnessy's T formation.

R.A.F. Squad Takes Canucks 9-0

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Nov. 26—(CP).—A Canadian artillery regiment from the 1st Division with batteries from Winnipeg, Kingston and Brantford, has built up a high reputation in the United Kingdom for its gunnery—but when it comes to shooting for goals on a soccer field, the men just can't figure out the range.

Playing a Royal Air Force team in aid of a Spitfire fund the Canucks were beaten 9-0. Fifteen hundred fans turned out despite a rainstorm.

The Airmen outclassed the Gunners completely in the first half, chalking up six goals, but the Canadians came back in the second half and gave the English team a real battle.

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, 1st Division Commander, attended the game along with Sir Edward Campbell, a member of the British Parliament, and a number of high-ranking officers of the Canadian Artillery and the R.A.F.

The Airmen were out in force with their band, and played medleys of Canadian tunes including "We're on Our Way," composed by Capt. Mert Plunkett of Dumbell fame and introduced at a soldiers' rally in Ottawa a year ago. It has been published in England and is a popular tune with this particular R.A.F. squadron.

The Canadian lineup was:

Gnr. H. Gilbert, Oshawa, goal; Sgt. John Law, Kingston, Ont., and Gnr. Henry Mansfield, Winnipeg, full backs; Sgt. John Walker, Kingston, L. Bdr. Art Lockwood, Kingston, and L.-Sgt. Jim Smith, Kingston, half-backs; Gnr. Fred Murray, Kingston, Bdr. Carey, Gnr. Fred Lappage, Kingston, Brd. Ernie Miller, Kingston, and Sgt. Dyble, forwards.

Following the game, two batteries of the Canadian Regiment played an exhibition softball game.

Many Canadians To Judge At Chicago Show

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—(CP)—Farmers from five Canadian provinces will compete in the 41st International Livestock Exposition and the 22nd grain and hay show to be held at Chicago Nov. 30 to Dec. 7 inclusive, the Department of Agriculture said today.

Six Canadians will be among the 22 judges selected for the shows. For the first time in more than 20 years, a Canadian has been appointed to judge the steers, the announcement said.

He is Charles Yule of Carstairs, Alta., general manager of the Calgary Stampede and Exhibition and a breeder of purebred Shorthorns. Steer judging is regarded as the major assignment at the Chicago Exposition.

Other judges from Canada are: J. Irvine Black, Fergus, Ont., who will judge Oxford sheep; William Goddard, Denfield, Ont., Lincolns; Lionel Orbell, Queenston, Ont., Suffolks, and H. Noel Gibson, Mt. Brydges, Ont., Wethers of all breeds. James Laughland of the Field Husbandry Department, Ontario Agriculture College, Guelph, will act as one of the judges in the grain and hay show and will be one of three who will name the wheat king and also the king of oats, barley, rye and flax.

Ontario Leads Sheep

In the live stock division Canadian entries have been listed for 12 breeds. Largest entries from the Dominion in the cattle section are from well-known breeders of Aberdeen Angus and Shorthorns, in both eastern and western Canada. All entries in the sheep classes are from Ontario, some of them consistent winners for several years.

About 20 head of Clydesdale horses from Ontario and Saskatchewan will be shown and there are several entries of Belgian and Shires from Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

In the 1939 International shows at Chicago, Canadian exhibitions won 451 awards including 18 grand championships and 13 reserve championships. Among the championships was the grand championship for wheat, the 17th time this award had been won by Canada at Chicago. It went to Francis Lloyd Rigby of Wembley, Alta., for the second time in succession, on a sample of Reward, a variety originated at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Canada is represented on the Board of Directors of both the International Livestock Exposition and the Grain and Hay Show, by Dr. G. I. Christie, president of the Ontario Agricultural College.

The five Canadian provinces competing are Alberta, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario. No entries have been received yet from Quebec.

Britain's Warriors On Three Fronts

At BOTTOM, the Arabian headdress to guard against dust storms is worn by officers of the Trans-Jordania Frontiersmen.

Suspects C.B.C. Behind Beard's Shelving

VICTORIA, Nov. 26. — H. E. Winch, C.C.F. member from Vancouver in the British Columbia Legislature, asked the Legislature last night if the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation had employed Gestapo methods in bringing about the retirement from duty of one of Canada's naval heroes.

Navy Minister Angus Macdonald recently announced that Commander Charles T. Beard, skipper of the Canadian armed merchantman Prince Robert when she captured the German merchant ship Weser in the Southern Pacific waters, had been retired.

Winch said that the people of Canada were entitled to know why he was "pulled off" the Prince Robert and why the "first" intimation that he was "being beached" was given him by a newspaperman.

The Government said an old ailment was the reason, but Winch asserted a check-up at the hospital showed he was 100 per cent. fit.

Canadians are entitled to know if the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is becoming a sort of Gestapo," he declared.

"I am told Beard gave an interview to reporters and "the CBC aboard the Robert when the Weser was brought in. The CBC representative sat next to him with a mike and when the off-the-record chat took place the CBC did not turn off the mike."

He said he was told a record of the entire conversation had been mailed to Ottawa and it "might have resulted" in Commander Beard's retirement.

"The people of Canada whose sons are in the navy are entitled to know why a highly competent senior officer is twiddling his thumbs while mere youths are second in command of our warships."

Premier Pattullo tried to cut short Winch's speech on several occasions by saying it was a Federal matter, but his efforts were of no avail.

Canadian Air Officers Home From England

Damage Serious Not Critical Over Midlands

(By EDWARD W. BEATTIE, Jr.)

LONDON, Nov. 26—(BUP).—The new German air strategy which has swung the weight of the offensive onto the industrial Midlands has hurt but not crippled the thousand-and-one industrial processes which go to make up the modern war machine.

Nobody outside a few officials knows to what extent industry has been hit, and if he did know he would not be permitted to tell. The consensus in well-informed quarters is that, while the damage has been serious, it is not critical.

In the present state of defence against night bombing, no city, either in England or Germany, is immune. The defences of the Midlands are stated to be at least as strong, in proportion to the size of the objective, as those of London—or presumably those of Berline, Hamburg and the Ruhr.

England as a last resort could move essential industries production overseas, out of range of present bombers. Without the wholesale transfer of its industrial plant deep into Russia, with the almost insuperable obstacles involved, Germany could not put its factories out of the reach of British bombers operating from bases in England and the Mediterranean.

Two years ago, when the "shadow" system for the munitions industry was first put into effect, there was widespread criticism of the fact that new factories had been built close to old industrial concentrations instead of on isolated sites where they would be hard to find and hit.

New Plants Scattered

Since then there has been improvement in the construction policy. Not only are the new factories scattered, but in no case is one factory the sole supplier of any essential weapon or part.

Another factor tending to diminish the shock of German air attacks is the German bombing technique which relies on a tremendous weight of explosives dropped from a great hight over a comparatively wide area to accomplish what the Royal Air Force tries to do by carefully specialized low-level attacks.

According to well-informed air circles in London, the Germans have been flying just as high in the Midlands as they ever did here, and in some cases bombed on moonlight nights from 18,000 to 20,000 feet. It is claimed that British attacks on Germany have been carried out from a height of 5,000 to 8,000 feet, and occasionally only a few hundred feet, with corresponding dividends in results.

Coventry took a worse beating than any town in England in a bombing which was distinguished above all others by its ferocity. Over a comparatively small city, the Germans dropped enough high explosives to create an approximation of Guernica in Spain or Rotterdam in Holland. Although the damage elsewhere outside London has been serious, there is no indication that it was anywhere on a scale proportionate to Coventry.

The war in its present stage is as much one of production strangulation as a starvation blockade. No one denies the gravity of the German U-boat and airplane attacks on Atlantic convoys. But the British blockade it is claimed, is even more serious for Germany.

Similarly with the production war. According to the British version, damage to Germany's industrial machine has been much heavier and far more concentrated than anything the Luftwaffe has been able to accomplish in England. Both suffered heavily, but England has the advantage of Canadian and other Empire production and a growing stream of new planes, guns and shells from the United States.

utes without a protest, highlighted a day in which more regard was urged for the rights and patriotic sincerity of Canadians of non-Anglo-Saxon stock, in the interests of national unity.

The wheat situation was reviewed, but not with alarm, by Western members who submitted that the prime business of the moment was to prepare storage space for next year's crop. The present surplus might yet prove an invaluable wartime asset, especially if Canada was stricken with another year or two of drought.

Regarding Canada's financial aid to Britain, Mr. Tucker noted with satisfaction that Canada was about to grant short-term credits to the United Kingdom pending disposal here of British-held Canadian securities.

But this was merely loaning, "quite a bit different" from what Britain did for France before France's downfall. Britain had placed at France's disposal all the sterling France needed for purchases in Britain and France had done similarly, on the understand- there would be a settlement after the war.

A Financial Limit?

"That meant that money did not stand in the way of Britain helping France or France helping Britain," he emphasized. "And I ask that consideration be given by our government to some similar policy. Are we to be told that the limit of our assistance to Great Britain is what Great Britain is able to buy with her goods and her securities?"

He asked how these British-held securities were being sold, to what extent the British investor or British Government was being protected.

The Bank of Canada, he proposed, should grant the British Government a credit representing a fair price for these securities. If the resulting output of Canadian dollars threatened to result in inflation, when Canadian securities were being revested in the people of Canada, reserve requirements of Canadian banks might be increased.

The law required the banks to have $1 in Bank of Canada notes or deposits for every $20 owed to their depositors, but in practice the Bank of Canada required $1 for every $10 or twice as much as the law required. Similarly, the Bank of Canada could require them to have $1.10 or $1.15 for every $10, since it absolutely controlled the situation.

"When a great refunding transaction like this is going on, if we are going to do our duty by the Canadian people, it is incumbent on us as members of Parliament to have a right to ask the financiers what is going on and ask them why it cannot be done," he submitted.

No Room for Grumblers

Anthony Hlynke (N.D., Vegreville) raised the national unity issue by declaring there was "no room in Canada for these who would seek to create disunity in our midst." The Defence of Canada regulations should be made to apply to those deliberately making statements which caused dissension among the people of Canada.

Mr. Tucker endorsed Mr. Hlynka's stand, pointing to the danger of making enemies by discrimination against those in Canada who wanted to be loyal and friendly. The overwhelming majority of those of foreign origin in Western Canada was completely loyal to Canada and the British Empire.

At the same time, he noted a tendency on the part of many English-speaking Canadians to admit "only grudgingly outside of Quebec" the rights of French-speaking Canadians.

By the pact of Confederation Canada was a bi-lingual country. There would be no real unity if attempts were made to whittle down an agreement or to back out of it.

"Sometimes I have marvelled at the toleration and the willingness of French-speaking Canadians to forgive and forget the continual attempt on the part of some English-speaking Canadians to whittle down the rights they obtained at Confederation," he said.

W. G. Weir (Lib-Prog. Macdonald), agreeing with Mr. Tucker's petition for more committee activity, said the function of parliament as a medium for the feelings of the people was "fundamentally unchanged," though possibly less important than before the development of modern communications.

An Agricultural Rally

He proposed a conference of all agricultural leaders to help advise a wheat policy. An increase in feed production was necessary to care for expanding livestock needs, he said. He suggested the production of enough supplies to last two or three years in advance, as insurance against drought.

Hon. Grote Stirling (Con. Yale) mildly criticized the government for its tardiness in reaching maximum war production. He urged recognition of several women's auxiliary organizations, especially in view of their prospective place in industry as the war proceeds.

With Ralph Maybank (Lib. Winnipeg South Centre), he foresaw a shortage of skilled labor if the government failed to do something about training workers at once.

The Forgotten Man.

Gordon Fraser, Conservative-Peterborough West, joined with the previous speakers in urging that free transportation privileges be given to soldiers on leave. The government should give this at least on government-owned railways.

The Ontario farmer was "the forgotten man," Mr. Fraser said. Markets had been lost and protection taen away.

"East and west get all the grease but Ontario provides it," he said, referring to assistance given to agriculture by the Federal government.

Higginbotham graduated from Princeton University in 1939 after playing varsity football and soccer. He captained the lacrosse team and was a Phi Betta Kappa fraternity member. A few weeks after France capitulated he gave up his position as assistant sales manager of the Packard Motor Company's eastern branch office at Philadelphia and joined the R.C.A.F. in Montreal.

Miss Each Other In Sun

A court of inquiry has been ordered into the accident, which occurred at sundown. One of the pilots was believed to have lost sight of the other in the setting sun and descended in a rapid glide to land. The machines locked together after the collision and as they fell to the ground wreckage was strewn over a wide area.

John Howe, a farmer near here, was an eye-witness. "The planes were both going south and turning east, some distance apart," he said. "They had turned into the flightway when one of them appeared to haveo verflown the flightway and turned right back into the other plane."

The two men had come to the training school near here from Toronto, Nov. 5.

It was the first fatal accident at the training school since it was opened in June.

Dr. A. R. Routledge, chief coroner, released the bodies to the R.C.A.F. after an examination, and said no civil investigation will be held unless requested by Air Force officials.

L.A.C. Duff, born in Renfrew, Ont. was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duff of Montreal West, Montreal suburb. Three brothers, Alex, Cameron and James, and a sister, Marjorie, also survive.

L.A.C. Higginbotham was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Edward Higginbotham of South Orange, and nephew of Edward D. Duffield, late president of the Prudential Insurance Company of America. He also leaves two sisters, Christina and Janet.

Overshoot One City

A Greek spokesman declared Greek advance units "overshot Pogradetz," 25 miles north of fallen Koritza and 30 miles inside Albania, but dispatches from the Yugoslav-Albanian frontier only a few miles away said Italians, recently heavily reinforced, still held the town.

The reports from the frontier said 250 truckloads of fresh Fascist troops arrived at the supply route town recently to bolster the tired regiments which fell back there after two weeks fighting in Koritza.

The Greek high command communique mentioned no specific gains, but said "our troops, continuing their advance, occupied some new positions."

Italian planes struck behind Greek lines yesterday in raids which a communique said caused civilian casualties at Arta, a town on the Island of Corfu, Lixuri and Argostoli, on the island of Cephalonia, and several town in Epirus.

Reports from Salonika indicated Albanians, disarmed months ago by the Italians, had adopted "passive resistance" to hamper military operations in their country.

A wounded Albanian was quoted as saying "open revolt is impossible" because of lack of arms, but many Albanians were doing whatever they could "to sabotage the Italian war machine."

In the west end more taxis were abroad than usual and a few more tables were occupied in all-night restaurants.

Most folk, however, stayed indoors to relish their second consecutive night of sound sleep—having taken advantage Sunday night also of the early end of two short alarms.

Regular patrons of the popular shelters still used them, and many of those asleep below ground did not know there was no raid.

Rooftop "spotters" had a night's rest, too, but stayed on duty, just in case.

London's only previous alarm-free night was on Oct. 6, but other parts of Britain were attacked.

GATHER REGISTRATION CARDS

It has been announced that licensed funeral directors in Ontario will be instructed to collect National registration cards of deceased persons, and to forward them to the Dominion Statistician in Ottawa. The step has been taken by the authorities because of a request made by the Federal Department of War Services to prevent misuse of the registration cards. Peterborough directors have not been notified as yet, nor has the city clerk.

THREE DRUNKS IN LINE

Three men faced drunk charges before Magistrate Langley this morning and one of them succeeded, with the approval of the police, in wangling a week's adjournment for the prpose of obtaining money to pay his fine. Two others pleaded guilty promptly and just as promptly were fined $10 and $3 costs. John A. Bradshaw appeared for them.

BIYCLES STOLEN.

Two Otonabee boys, Ed Hogg and Bruce Wakeford, pupils at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, had their bicycles stolen at noon today. The two had left their machines outside a drug-store while they made a purchase, and when they went out discovered that the bicycles had been taken. The boys have been riding into school along Highway 7 every day, one of them having eight miles to travel.

SERVICE OF CHIMES

Dick Ford, carilloneur at St. John's offered his services to the county council in the event of some celebration of the centenary of the Court House. Johnston's motion, and it was placed on record for future reference.

SWEEPER SOLD

Alderman McCannan, chairman of the property committee of the council, made a last salute on Tuesday to the old dustless sweeper in reporting that it had been sold for $80 to T. G. Hughes, auto wrecker. The council recently instructed the chairman to dig it out of the discard, the big iron box of a machine, crack it up and refurnace it for sheel casings. Alderman McCannan decided to sell it at once, got three bids, accepted the highest, and the money is going somewhere for patriotic purposes.

New British Plane To Make Junkers That Beat French, Look Obsolete

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(CP Cable)—Britain is developing a new type of army co-operation plane which air experts said Monday will make the German dive bombers that pulverized resistance in France and Flanders look obsolete.

Taking a leaf from the German book, Britain has made elaborate plans for co-ordinating the work of the Air Force and Army in land operations, looking forward to the day when the offensive can be taken.

The new army co-operation command will be under Air Marshal A. S. Barratt who commanded the R.A.F. in France last winter and spring.

Working on the theory that joint action between land forces and air forces is here to stay, the new command will have an elaborate set up. In its essence it will be a joint force of airmen and soldiers subject to the Royal Air Force for training but under the operational control of the army during battle.

One Central Control

The object of the new command is to bring into harmonious co-operation the land and air forces so that one central authority will control them during battle. It is axiomatic under modern war conditions that control of the air, even if local, must be obtained before land forces can advance.

Using the Junkers-87 plane developed in 1933 the Germans smashed French resistance by co-ordinating the tank and dive bomber. British authorities, realizing the JU-87 was extremely vulnerable to ground defences and fighter planes, are developing an army co-operation plane of their own which they claim is the most modern type in the world, combining speed and manoeuvrability with adequate armor.

One of the reasons for the success of the JU-87 was inadequate ground defences of the French army and lack of training to cope with this form of sky artillery. Military experts here say the Germans never would have the same success against the British army because of its defences and training.

It will be the duty of the army co-operation command to train two forces in joint operations. Not only will each corps commander as at present have his own army co-operation squadron for artillery spotting and general observation, but he will be able to whistle up fighters and bombers to co-operate with his forces as the battle progresses.

It will be the duty of the fighters to clear the skies of enemy machines and of the bombers to blast obstacles from the path of tanks and infantry. The bombers will be regarded in terms of artillery as long as the battle is one of movement. When the battle becomes stable and static, guns will supply the barrage.

Behind this general set up will be Air Marshal Barratt and the army officers working with him. He will be acting under the general orders of the army commander who alone will have complete control of the joint forces.

One-Day School In Accounting

A one-day school in municipal accounting will be held at the Court House Thursday December 17. At least that was the date accepted by the county council after hearing the explanation made by A. L. Elliott, M.P.P., Saturday.

The list of the subjects to be discussed is not yet available, but they will be related to cost accounting of roads and other details of municipal expenditure for the purpose, it is understood, of establishing through Ontario a standardized system of bookkeeping to facilitate provincial auditing and generally smooth out financial relations between the province and the municipalities.

Township and village employees and possibly some of their elected representatives will attend this school.

Irish McGroarty Pays Visit To City

Members of the 93rd Battalion residing in Peterborough will be interested in learning that E. P. ("Irish") McGroarty was a week-end visitor to the city. McGroarty was the only American-born member of the 93rd, so far as is known and was a favorite with the whole Peterborough County unit. Before the First Great War, "Irish," a mere youngster, lived in Milwaukee and he came over to Peterborough with two former Canadians, Ev. and Doug. Laing, to enlist in the 93rd. Going overseas with Lieut. Col. Johnston's battalion McGroarty was transferred to the 1st Battalion at the front and was wounded in the arm of May 1, 1917, while fighting with that unit.

After the war McGroarty returned to Peterborough and was employed for over a year with a local bank. Then he decided to go back to the United States and for over twenty years he has been a resident of Detroit. "I walked all over the downtown streets yesterday and failed to see one of the old battalion," "Irish" told The Examiner.

Trainees Out On Parade With Greatcoats

Officers from Eastern Ontario stationed at the Exhibition Grounds camp and who have recently returned after a few days' leave, brought back glowing reports of the excellent entertainment staged in Brockville and Cornwall Centres by the citizens of those two places.

In Brockville the commissioned officers were given the opportunity of meeting the leading business men at a dinner given by the Better Business Association of Brockville. Later they were guests of the Brockville Theatre Guild at a preview presentation of the war play "Carry-On." On the two following evenings the entire body of recruits in the training centre were guests of the same organization.

Further east in the Cornwall centre the citizens of that city are making plans to entertain the officers at a dinner, as the men, most of them newcomers to the place, will be stationed there for many months, and miss the social atmosphere that exists in their homes or in their home town.

Cold Out On Parade.

Frigid weather made it necessary for the trainees to turn out on parade to-day wearing greatcoats, but the boys did little grousing, and are taking to the day's routine with a willingness that encourages the officers.

Training on a routine getting stiffer and stiffer with the passing of the days, starts in earnest this week with rifle drill, anti-gas instruction and route marching. By the time the trainees leave camp, three days before Christmas they will have learned how to shoot reasonably accurately, how to defend themselves against low-flying machine gunning planes, how to cope with gas, string up barbed wire entanglements, and will have toted the pack equipment weighing about 50 pounds over a ten-mile route march.

"The spirit of the boys is remarkable," Col. Keeler, the officer commanding said today. "They are a great bunch, full of enthusiasm for the work and with an intelligent willingness to learn."

Some time during the training period each recruit will be asked to express his willingness or otherwise of going into active service with the regular army, the air force or the navy. His answer will be recorded. Those who do not join are attached to Non-Permanent Active Militia units on leaving the camp.

From the Exhibition Grounds training centre, about 15 men went into active service and during the training period several others were called up for the Air Force, having applied for enlistment some time previous.

Woman Suffers Injuries To Hip

Mrs. Angus Brunton, 29, of R.R. 3, Havelock, received injuries to her side, hip and leg and several other persons were shaken up as the result of a collision between two out-of-town automobiles at King and Rubidge streets Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Brunton was a passenger in a car that was driven south on Rubidge street by Robert Jennings, Havelock. As the Havelock car reached the King street intersection it came into collision with an automobile driven east on King street by Harold Brennan, 18, of 68 Glenelg street, Lindsay.

Brennan was arrested on a charge of dangerous driving by Constables C. J. McGillen and John Moyes who investigated the accident. He was released on bail this morning to appear December 4 for trial.

Passengers in Jenning's car, in addition to Mrs. Brunton, were his wife and daughter and Harold, the nine-year-old son of Mrs. Brunton. They were all shaken up but not hurt very much. Donald McEvoy, 29 Glenelg street, Lindsay, was in Brennan's car.

Mrs. Brunton was taken to the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic for treatment and afterward was removed to her home near Havelock.

Rural Schools To Aid Navy League Drive

Children of the rural schools are being asked to contribute to the Canadian Navy League's fund in an appeal that is being focused on the week from December 2 to December 6. A booklet entitled "The bonds of Empire" with a foreword by Hon. D. McArthur, Minister of Education, is being distributed among the school children, with a returnable envelope in which they are asked for a gift of money to provide Christmas cheer for Canadian soldiers.

The importance of the Empire's life lines upon the seas is understood more today by the Canadian people than ever before, and the place of the Canadian Navy has become more prominent in the thoughts of the people than was ever expected in the careless years of peace.

The children of the county schools will turn their envelopes over to their teachers who will hand them to the school inspector, and it is hoped that a substantial sum will be given by the young people for this great cause.

Minister Learns To Tap Wireless Keys

Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of National Defence for Air, shows a keen interest in radio instruction while on a visit to No. 1 wireless school of the Royal Air Force at Montreal. Aircraftman Allen Anderson, of Peterborough, Ont., shows the Minister how to tap a wireless key.

Early Customer Gets His Morning Paper But Fails To Leave Coppers To Pay For It

The Alparka front has been quiet of late, its community affairs almost silenced and obscured by the rumbling expansion of the big steel shop across the way. The corner has been messed about of late by Fred Board and his city workers putting in a big new drain, Christmas lights are getting ready to burn up the street a little way, but not for the general public, and back at the corner the coffee urn is giving off its aromatic fumes especially toward the end of these longer days since the first chill of winter has put frost in the air. That scene is all very pleasant, but there are odd mornings of other kind of rumblings, when the corner's supply of morning papers has vanished before sun-up without any quid-pro-quo, or in plain terms the three cents that should be left somewhere around to pay the people who print the sheet. This is not a proprietor grouse, it is customer, when other folks of the neighborhood arrive later, the prints are gone, and no one knows exactly who takes them; but the average of payment is said to be decidedly low. This isn't casting a suspicion on any employees of the big mills, because there is no evidence pointing directly across the way. The only comment on the part of customers is that if the supply is being paid for by the early birds nothing can be said about the missing sheets, but otherwise there is the possibility of the boss himself cutting out the corner service if it is going to be regarded as merely a handout.

Debert's Red Mud

Many reports have come from the boys of the 3rd Field Park Company, Royal Canadian Engineers now stationed at Debert in Nova Scotia, concerning the mud. It seems the paramount grievance which the boys have is the muddy terrain.

Today Art Hunter, former well known boxer sends along a piece of poetry composed by Sgt. McIlwraith of the Royal Winnipeg Rifles, a unit also stationed at Debert, and as the letter indicates "it describes Debert much better than I can."

The poetry was published in the Truro News, as Truro is just 12 miles from Debert and the largest centre.

DEBERT'S RED MUD

Our first billets had bugs, and Shilo had sand,
The Scots have their kilts, and the Rifles a band,
The Irish have wit and of blarney a store,
The ocean its waves which dash on the shore,
The days have their light which at night fades away,
But the RED MUD OF DEBERT forever will stay.
It clings to the boots from the heels to the toes,
And from where it was pushed by the Bulldosers nose,
It is carried to the huts and over the floor spread,
'Tis in clothing and blankets and under the bed.
In choosing their colors the painters were wise,
On the floor the RED MUD is not clear to the eyes.

It clings to the boards where it falls from our feet,
It clings to the blanket I use for a sheet,
How it got there, I cannot find one who will tell,
Thank goodness the horrible stuff doesn't smell,
For in darkness that night of the day we arrived,
Into DEBERT'S RED MUD our Pay Sergeant dived.
In the camp is a network of channels dug deep,
On the edges of which mud is piled in a heap.
Narrow boards as footbridges the best we can get,
They were the undoing of Q.M. Burdette.
His clothes were a mess, and his hands and his face
Showed the RED MUD OF DEBERT, his form did embrace.

Not on Harry alone does she favors bestow,
Q.M. Besteck and Sgt. McBride ought to know,
She each to her bosom with smoothness did charm,
And the warmth of their protest near caused an alarm,
When from under our Rodwell she skidded the feet,
The DEBERT RED MUD almost baked with the heat.

Down to it's low level the highest they fall,
Majors or Colonels respond to its call.
N.C.O.'s, quickly succumb to it's lure,
Ask Sgts. McReady, Smith, Larmon or Moore.
And to prove the Red Menace treats all ranks alike,
Down on DEBERT'S RED MUD slithered Mr. Van Dyke.

And Bandmaster Stanford has felt it's caress,
Believe me it made him one hell of a mess,
In his nose and his eyes, down his neck, up his sleeve,
And the high notes he sounded you'd never believe.
Such discordant sounds from the head of the band,
When by RED MUD inspired, one can understand.

As tight folds the bark to the trunk of the trees,
As close cling wild women to Staff Sgt. Gee,
As firm as a Provost at Detention Camp,
As sticky as gum on the back of a stamp,
As fast as the thorns to the bush of a rose,
The RED MUD OF DEBERT it clings to my clothes.

But old Johnny Frost will soon do his part,
And make you as hard as a C.S.M.'s. heart.
And before the spring comes and he loosens his grip.
We all should be walking the deck of a ship.
Or perhaps may be landed on old England's shore,
And the RED MUD OF DEBERT will foul us no more.

Party In Peterboro Lumber Co's Yards Is Quickly Broken Up When Police Arrive

This was not exactly the kind of day most people would select for an open-air party nor is the lumber yard behind the Peterborough Canoe Company the sort of place that is generally preferred for that kind of thing. Nevertheless two local men and a transient, kindred spirits so far as thirst was concerned, gathered in the lumber piles at noon today with a large bottle of native wine and the party was just nicely under way when a sight as unwelcome as the east wind that was blowing greeted the eyes of the merry-makers. The vision was that of Constables John Naples and C. J. McGillen, who gathered in the guests and confiscated what was left of the ob-be-joyful. The three were escorted to the hoosegow and they will make a personal appearance in police court tomorrow.

Careful Balkan Plans Slip Badly For Axis

There must be much wailing and gnashing of teeth in Berlin and Rome over the unexpectedly unpleasant fruits which have been so far garnered by the Axis powers for their carefully planned moves and machinations for the complete control of the Balkan peninsula. The Greeks, with valuable assistance from the Royal Air Force, seem to have not only expelled the invading Italians from Epirus, but they have pushed across the border and captured important strategic centres in Albania like Koritza, and the Italian retreat has all the appearance of a panic-stricken rout. However, the mountainous terrain of Southern Albania makes any rapid advance difficult and the Italians may be able to form somewhere a defensive line. But, if the demoralization of the Italian Army is as serious as is suggested there may be maturing for Mussolini a major military disaster, especially as the British Navy and Air Force can now make extremely difficult the transportation of reinforcements and supplies from Italy to Albania.

British Plan Offensive

The British, moreover, anxious to give the Italians no respite, are apparently planning an immediate attack upon the islands in the Aegean Sea which Italy seized during the last war and was allowed to keep. Of these the most important is the Island of Rhodes, famed in classical story; it is heavily fortified at certain points and has a strong Italian garrison, but it need not be impregnable to an attack by seasoned British troops landing under the cover of the guns of the navy and backed by numerous planes. Its capture would certainly be followed by the conquest of the adjacent Italian islands and, with the hostile submarine bases on them eliminated, the British Fleet would become master of the Aegean and could effectually, with the co-operation of the Turks, prevent any German Army from crossing the Dardanelles or Bosporus into Asia Minor in order to march upon Syria, Palestine and Iraq.

Contending Forces in Bulgaria

The Greek victories also seem to have stiffened opposition in Bulgaria to the Italo-German demand that it follow the example of Hungary and Rumania and give formal adhesion to the "new European order." The youthful King Boris is no lover of the two dictators, and he has several time reiterated the desire for genuine neutrality, which he proclaimed in a Speech from the Throne, delivered soon after the outbreak of the war. On the other hand, the Axis powers are favored by a group of influential politicians, of whom the most important are M. Grabowski whose name would betoken a spiritual affinity with Hitler, and General Jekoff. The former genuinely believes in the superiority of German economic organization, and General Jekoff is a militarist firebrand who was one of the chief promoters of the second Balkan war and the leading backer of King Ferdinand when the latter's German blood induced him to bring Bulgaria into the last war on Germany's side in 1915. The Italians, also, operating from Albania, have been promoting by subsidies and propaganda the revival of the body known as "The Macedonian Revolutionary Internal Organization," which was banned by the Bulgarian Government in 1935. Its leaders are mostly lawless gangsters, but they have been stirring up the substantial Macedonian element in Bulgaria and making promises that Germany and Italy will help to establish an autonomous Macedonian State at the expense of Greece, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, with Salonika as its capital.

Italian Defeat Has Reactions.

But these promises, while they may make the Macedonians favorable to the Axis, alarm many Bulgarians, and therefore tend to accumulate support for King Boris' policy of neutrality. The argument of the Germanophiles is that the Axis powers are certain to win the war, and that, since they will be supreme in Europe when peace is made, countries which throw in their lot with them will be rewarded. But the Italian debacle in Albania about which the news would travel rapidly through Bulgaria, must be creating grave doubts about the soundness of this thesis and the attitude adopted by Russia, which is regarded by the mass of the Bulgarian peasantry as their country's traditional protector, must be making a strong impression upon their minds.

Russians Won't Help Hitler.

It could almost be taken for granted that, if during the recent conference at Berlin Hitler had been able to extract from Molotoff, the Russian Premier, any definite commitments for closer co-operation on the part of Russia in his designs, the Nazi press would have lost no time in trumpeting this news triumphantly to the world, and the assumption that Molotoff firmly resisted all pressure to give any fresh undertakings is confirmed by recent pronouncements from Moscow. Not only do the intermittent eulogies of British skill in warfare continue in the official Soviet press, but there has only been published a blunt denial of the story that Hungary's entry to the totalitarian circle had the blessing of the Russian Government and an equally frank intimation that the latter would fain see Bulgaria stick to her neutrality. So the Bulgarian Government, fortified by the tacit backing of Russia, has evidently refused to sign the totalitarian pact and the inspired Nazi press, which last week gleefully announced that everything was in train for Bulgaria's adherence to it, is now trying to save its face by asserting with its normal brazenness that Bulgaria was never expected to sign the pact.

REMOTE CONTROL

A stock-broker's office in Peterborough was the scene of an attempt at impersonation yesterday, and the attempt would seem to have been attended by success.

The inter-office communication system is a most intriguing arrangement. It has only one disadvantage: there are usually more than two offices connected, and a message sent out on one of the tickers will appear in the other offices on the same line.

Between Toronto and Belleville yesterday afternoon the wires were hot with romance, the operator in Toronto, a girl, and the new man in the Belleville office were becoming rather chummy, and John V. Baird, in the Peterborough office was an interested on-looker.

Before long, Peets, the new man in Belleville seemed to be at a loss for words, so to speak, and the willing Mr. Baird ticked some out for him. The operator in Toronto, Margie by name, thinking it came from Peets, answered, and it was no time until Cupid in the Peterborough office had them calling one another by their first names; he'd speak for both.

The story ends rather happily, for after talking about dates, Mr. Baird finally conveyed the idea to Mr. Peets, and Peets and Margie are the victims of Mr. Baird to all intents and purposes, for they have a dinner engagement for the week-end. The only complication, Peets, up to the end seemed to be confused, and one could tell from the tone of his messages that he hadn't a clear idea of how the whole thing happened . . but the date still stands.—J.W.H.

Child Lost Life When Fire Burned Cottage

LINDSAY, Ont., Nov. 26.—(CP)—The body of five-year-old Mary Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Warren, Thorah Island, Lake Simcoe, was brought to the main land at Beaverton by rowboat yesterday. The child's father reported that she had burned to death when their home was destroyed late Sunday.

The father told Provincial Constable George Yule the child was alone in the house when the fire broke out. He was repairing boats on the shore of the lake when he saw the fire in his house, he said.

He ran to the house, broke a window, pulled the child from its bed and ran to the lake in an attempt to revive her, he told police.

McIntyre Hood Becomes Teacher

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND. — A Canadian Legion war services supervisor with the 2nd Division overseas is wondering if it has taken all these years to discover he has misled his calling. M. McIntyre Hood of Toronto, secretary to the Attorney-General of Ontario, on loan to the Legion's overseas establishment, now is appearing in the role of schoolmaster.

This is the way it happened: A request was received recently from a group of Canadian soldiers of European birth and extraction for tuition in the English language. They had a fairly good speaking knowledge of English, but were stumped when they tried to write it. Mr. Hood agreed to begin a small class to meet for instruction for one hour three nights a week. Books were supplied by the Overseas Education Division of the Legion War Services.

Since launching this venture the class has grown considerably by the addition of several French-Canadian soldiers who are anxious to improve their knowledge of English, and prospects for greater enrolment seem bright.

Mr. Hood isn't sure, but he has the suspicion his pupils have dubbed him "Mr. Pipps."

Adjournment Granted Hit-and-Run Driver

George Van Every was charged in police court this morning with failing to remain at the scene of an accident and the request of his counsel, John A. Bradshaw, the case was adjourned for a week.

"I am asking for a week's adjournment with plea," Mr. Bradshaw stated when the case was called.

"I am not objecting," Crown Attorney McElderry stated and the adjournment was ordered.

Van Every was arrested early Sunday morning after a parked car belonging to Fred Cripps had been damaged on George by being struck by a hit-and-run machine.

Italian Officer Shoots Men To Force Fight

ATHENS, Nov. 26 — (AP). — A captured Italian lieutenant's story that two men in his unit were shot by their colonel after the group retreated before the Greeks was told yesterday to an Associated Press correspondent at the front.

The correspondent, sitting in the Greek trenches, watched the lieutenant and twenty-one other Italians surrender. This minor action took place ten miles east of Argyrokastron, Albania, toward which the Greeks are driving.

Here is the correspondent's story:

All during the day artillery and machine-gun fire echoed through numerous valleys in this region and Italian planes flew high overhead.

The twenty-two prisoners were remnants of a sixty-man unit. All others had been killed.

Three more Italian companies were holding out on adjoining hills.

The prisoners I saw taken were driven from their cover by artillery fire originating in the place where I sat. They came out of the bushes, holding their hands above their heads.

They were a sorry sight, ragged and hungry. The lieutenant said they had not eaten in three days.

"I had to surrender to prevent pure slaughter," he said. "Two days ago I asked for reinforcements. They said they would send me some but they never did. Finally I had to abandon the position. We retreated. The colonel in command a little behind the line shot two of us for it—just put them up against a tree and shot them. He turned us back with hand grenades and guns. We had no automatic weapons. We were outnumbered and lost."

What I have seen to-day confirms that the Greeks are fighting like lions, while the Italians, unwilling to give battle, are fleeing or surrendering all along the front.

Stories of booty left behind are not exaggerated. The amount is so great it literally clogs the roads. I counted as many as twenty-three Italian trucks, seven or eight tanks and motorcycles and bicycles by the hunderds over a distance of thirty miles.

There is no regular front. The soldiers stay at their posts night and day. They eat and sleep where they are.

Month In Jail Theft Of Watch

A month in jail was the sentence imposed upon Frank Bond in police court this morning on a charge of having stolen a watch from James Healey, valued at less than $25.

Bond, who was arrested by city police just as he was about to take a train for Toronto, pleaded guilty to the charge last week and was before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., to-day for sentence.

He asked the court for leniency, but after Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C., had produced the man's record which included several convictions in the United States, Magistrate Langley said a month in jail.

"Will you date that back to the day of my arrest?" asked Bond.

"I'll make it to date from November 21," replied the Magistrate. "That will let you out in time for Christmas."

DOROTHY DIX

LACK OF DATES SHOULD NOT WORRY GIRLS TOO GREATLY.

If You Are Unfortunate in That You Do Not Attract Boys, Then Forget Them and Find Other Things to Interest You.

Probably the riddle that the Sphinx has brooded over for centuries on her desert sand and that she has never been able to guess is: Why do I never have a date when girls no prettier, no more intelligent, and who have no more manging Mammas than I have are simply swamped with boy friends? This is one of the major problems of life and one that affects the happiness and destiny of millions of human beings, yet no one has been able to solve it or even to throw any light upon it. It just remains a stark fact that some women have no attraction for men, and to say that they lack sex appeal doesn't explain it. It just substitutes one conundrum for another. To the middle-aged who have forgotten their own youth, it may seem of small importance whether Mary Jane, who is still in High School, is dated weeks ahead for the school prom or whether when she is invited to a party Father has to take her in the family car or Jacky Jones escorts her or whether her hostess virtually has to shanghai boys into dancing with her or she is out in on every three minutes.

But to the girl herself these things are tragedies that bite into her very soul. If no boy calls her up on the telephone, or camps on her doorstep, or comes by in his rickety jalopy and honks for her, there is no balm in Gilead for her, no matter how many trips to Europe or how many sport model roadsters her father gives her.

She feels herself disgraced if she is not popular with the boys. No humiliation is so great as having to spend her time in the dressing-room pretending she has torn her frock as an excuse for not being on the ballroom floor, and she feels that death itself is preferable to being a wallflower.

It's a Calamity.

The terrible thing about this heartbreaking situation is that nobody knows how it happens or what to do about it. For it is true these girls that boys pass over are just as pretty, just as bright and entertaining, just as good dancers, just as anxious to please, just as attractive in every way so far as an observer can tell, as their sisters around whom boys swarm like bees about a honeypot. And their mothers do their bits by writing welcome on the doormat, and giving parties and doing their best to make their daughters belles.

But all to no avail. If a girl hasn't got sex appeal, she hasn't got it, and that's that. If she hasn't the come-hither look in her eye, no oculist can supply her with a synthetic one that will do the work.

The boy will come and eat her mother's good food and drink her father's champagne, and then waltz off with some little nitwit flossy and leave her sitting on the sidelines twiddling her thumbs.

And there you are. Helpless. Older people can buy popularity with their money, with their social position, or with the power they have to give jobs, but the favor of boys is not for sale. It is the thing about the girl herself that attracts them, not what she is, or has. If she hits their fancies, they rush her. If she doesn't, she is stranded. And that's final.

A Suggested Remedy.

To the girl who never has any dates I would offer this advice: Don't waste your time or energy running after boys that you can never catch. Put them out of your mind and fix your ambitions on something else.

Make a plan of life in which boy friends and dates are not included. Go into some occupation that has a future to it and keep you so busy and so interested in trying to make a success of that, that you will not have to worry over not being popular with boys.

After all, the world is full of a number of things beside school girl and boy frolics. You don't have to be shut up in a jail because you haven't a man to take you around. You can go to every sort of place of amusement. You can travel. You can have pretty clothes and your own apartment with a girl friend, and you will find that an intelligent woman is a mighty good companion.

And I would offer the girl who has no dates this consolation: You need not feel that you are doomed to old maidenhood because you are not popular with the pipsqueaks when you are 16. A boy's taste and a man's taste in women are not the same, and many a woman who made no appeal to boys in her youth marries the catch of the season in her 20's.

So don't break your little heart over not being popular. You can always espouse either a career or a man.

stead, he held up his hand to a passing taxi, and guided her toward the curb. Once inside the car he sent the driver off toward the city park, and took her in his arms.

"Why must we wait until tomorrow, girl?" he asked, his lips against her hair. "Why do you want me to leave you again, ever?"

"Jim—"

"I love you, girl, love you! And you want to waste a whole day!"

"Jim, what do you mean?" She pulled back a little.

"Let's get married now, tonight. There's still time to get into the license office. I'll hire a car and we can drive out into the country and find a preacher somewhere. Can't you do it, girl?"

For a moment Lona clung to him, her heart beating hard. After all, why not? There was no real reason to wait.

"Yes, Jim," she murmured, so low he had to bend close to catch the words. "I'll do it."

"Girl!"

He kissed her before he called out an order to the taxi driver to turn downtown and go to the marriage license bureau. It was a gentle kiss, but the promise of it left her trembling and shy.

Make Lovely Terrariums Using Odd Glass Dishes

Did you guess you could have a lovely little glass garden as easily as this?

Yes, by such simple tricks as putting a fish bowl over a bulb bowl you can make a smug little greenhouse in which beautiful plants and flowers will thrive. Or you may use any covered clear glass dish such as a candy jar.

In the terrarium pictured, flowering strawberry geranium hugs a mossy rock colcus with foliage of purple and green makes a brilliant splash of color; the long-leaved pandanus dips gracefully. And there are many other plant combinations as enchanting.

To prepare a terrarium for planting, put in about an inch of pebbles or other drainage material, then add soil. You can start with seeds, cuttings or tiny rooted plants. Moisten soil well before planting, but cover on immediately afterward and little watering is needed.

When you see how your first terrarium flourishes, you'll want to venture to grow rare flowers, gardenias, even orchids.

You can, easily, following the directions given in our 32-page booklet. Tells how to plant and care for dish gardens and terrariums of all kinds, including bottle and landscaped types. Has directions for a kitchen-window herb garden.

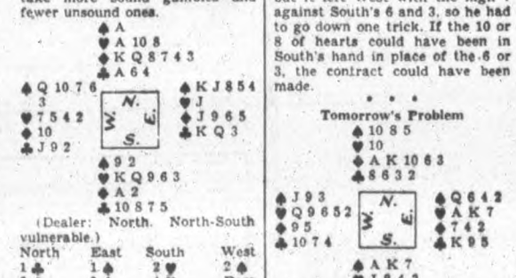
"The Authority on Authorities"

THE BIG LITTLE SEVEN

ONE OF the most interesting things about the game is the way that the exact size of little cards can sometimes decide the fate of a contract. Bidding can never become so exact that it can show whether a defender holding four trumps has them topped by a seven-spot or a six-spot, yet the result of your endeavor can depend upon such an apparent trifle. In brief, you never can eliminate the uncertainty and gamble from the game, and if you could, your intelligence would make you quit playing it. What you strive for always is to become so that you take more sound gambles and fewer unsound ones.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♥	2 ♠
3 ♦	3 ♠	4 ♥	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♦	Pass
6 ♥	Pass	7 ♥

North and South were using the Vanderbilt club system, also the Blackwood slam convention. When West made the unorthodox lead of the diamond 10, South promptly figured it as a probable singleton and planned accordingly. He cashed the spade A. Then, probing trumps, he led the 8 to the heart K and was chagrined to see the J drop, marking West with four trumps. At that stage South did not realize how important West's 7 was at the top of those four cards, but he soon found out.

Seeing that he must ruff one diamond to set up that suit, enabling him then to get only three discards, in clubs, he also had to get rid of a losing spade. So he ruffed the spade 9 with the heart A and returned to his hand with the heart 10 to the Q. The heart 9 made a third round of trumps, but it left West with the high 7 against South's 6 and 3, so he had to go down one trick. If the 10 or 8 of hearts could have been in South's hand in place of the 6 or 3, the contract could have been made.

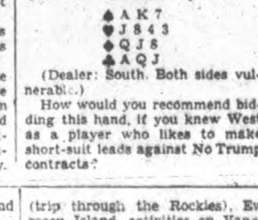
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

How would you recommend bidding this hand, if you knew West as a player who likes to make short-suit leads against No Trump contracts?

Regiment Enjoys Hot Lunch At Trent River

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 26—(ENS)—Members of B Company, First Midland Regiment, one hundred and ten strong, under command of Captain T. W. Quinn, left their training quarters at Campbellford Friday at 9.10 a.m. (DST) for an eighteen mile route march to Trent River, arriving here at noon hour, where they formed a line-up, upon entering Whitehall Gardens pavilion and were catered to by members of the War Service Workers, serving hot tea and home-made pies.

News of the route march was broadcast around the community at an early hour, with the request for two pies from every household, and every woman in Trent River responded whole-heartedly, and the work of 'speeding up' the pie-making of various kinds was soon under way.

Mr. George Johnston placed Whitehall Gardens pavilion at the disposal of the company, who all spoke in high terms of the culinary arts of Trent River ladies.

Members of the war workers provided cigarettes to members of the company and Captain T. W. Quinn on behalf of B Midland Regiment expressed deep appreciation of the war workers for their efforts to provide a treat and the company voiced three rousing cheers.

Lieut. J. Bygott led in community singing. Vocal duets were given by Private Fraser and Private Lane, 'South of the Border' and 'Be Nobody's Darling But Mine,' followed by the last number of community singing, "There's Always Be An England," after which the company gave their 'B' Co. yell and left the hall to line up for a short exhibition drill, parading up Main street to the United church before their return march to Campbellford.

Capt. T. W. Quinn, who saw active service in the First Great War, has been appointed Acting Company Commander following the transfer of Major Willis to Kingston.

Need Tractor Drivers

OTTAWA, Nov. 26—(CP). — The Royal Canadian Air Force is in immediate need of a large number of experienced tractor operators for maintenance of some 100 airdromes of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, it was announced today.

Their first task will be to keep snow-covered airdromes well rolled for winter flying and to keep them free from snow drifts. Applicants must be between the ages of 18 and 50, physically fit.

Fighters Under Three Flags

These men are members of a Polish air squadron that first fought the Germans over their native land. When Poland was gobbled up, they joined up with the French Armee de L'Air. France went down, but these Poles fought on, transferring to the British Royal Air Force. In September the squadron was credited with shooting down 109 enemy aircraft. The squadron is led by British flight commanders and a major of the Polish air force.

The Coming Year Will Be Challenge To Canadians

Institutions, whether business or service clubs, depended for their success upon the spirit behind them, Jame F. Scruton, vice-president and general manager of H. J. Heinz Company of Canada, Limited, told members of the Peterborough Rotary Club at their regular luncheon Monday, in an inspirational address.

Mr. Scruton pointed out that the intangible but basic motivations in such institutions were all important.

The speaker, who was introduced by Rotarian H. L. Garner, began by telling some instances he had come across in Montreal of the work that was being done by Rotary and other service clubs in that city for the benefit of the underprivileged.

The coming year, he said, was going to be a challenge to Canadians but he was satisfied that this country would meet the test. More faith, more courage, higher ideals, these were things that would be needed, Mr. Scruton dclared. He emphasized the fact that great business institutions were founded on quality of commodities and services, and where there was an honest pride and faith in those things and the proper spirit existed such business institutions succeeded. Service clubs, too, were successful according to the spirit behind them.

Rugged Individualism

"This country," said Mr. Scruton, "has been developed by rugged individualism, by men who have climbed from the bottom because the opportunity was there for them. It is necessary to maintain that spirit, and to remember that governments are not our masters but our servants."

People were continually seeking, the speaker said for the secret of life. They had failed to realize that the secret of life was within themselves. They looked for help, and security and wealth and all the time the secret of those things was within them. They never looked in the one place where what they sought was to be found.

Rotarian Mac Gordon, who presided, expressed the thanks of Rotary to Mr. Scruton for his enjoyable address.

John Fowler entertained the gathering with two very much appreciated songs as part of the musical portion of the program.

Rotarian James Dutton appealed to Rotarians to support the movement to establish the Victorian Order of Nurses here. He stressed the fact that Peterborough had fallen down in the matter of infantile mortality and expressed the hope that the services of the Victorian nurses would help to remedy that conditions. The Order was financed, he pointed out, by payments for those who could afford to pay for the service of the nurses, by grants from municipalities and service clubs, and by the fees of members. Rotarian Dutton asked the Rotary Club to consider voting a grant to the Victorian Order and also asked that every Rotarian should become a member. The yearly fees was $1.00, payable to F. S. Potter of the Bank of Toronto.

St. John's, Lakefield Marks Anniversary

LAKEFIELD ,Nov. 25—(ENS).—Portions of the service used on the occasion of St. John's Anglican Church opening in Lakefield in 1866 were used by the rector, Rev. H. R. Howden at the Sunday morning service which marked the anniversary of the church.

In his sermon, Mr. Howden issued a call to the members of the congregation to recognize the power of God in human life and to use that power to further the extension of the church and to make God's Kingdom real here on earth.

Several hymns in use at that early period were used on Sunday, "Unto the hills around," "O God of Bethel" and "On our Way Rejoicing."

The evening service was in charge of the young people, with H. F. Ketchum, B.A., of Lakefield Preparatory School, as guest speaker. Others assisting in the service were: Gordon Hampton, who read the first lesson, and Harold Tilly, prefect of the Preparatory School who read the second lesson.

Mr. Ketchum chose as his topic, "Christian Democracy." "Democracy is when every member has the right to have his voice heard. It is a way of life, tried and tested and gradually built up during many years. A recruiting call has gone out to enlist as builders of the Kingdom of God. Then and then only will our Christian democracy be proved against all enemies that may be arrayed."

During the evening service, the beautiful and appropriate hymn, "Youth of the World Arise," was sung during the offertory.

Their lives may depend upon the move, but these little fellows obviously do not want to leave London. All labelled, they are shown about to depart for a safer sanctuary in the country. They are but two of the thousands of children who have been evacuated from the bomb-wracked capital.

Pedron Attacked By Ontario Unit

OSHAWA, Nov. 26.—Members of the Second Battalion, Ontario Regiment, took part in their most strenuous exercises since returning from militia camp at Niagara Falls, when the unit today staged "attack" manoeuvres. The Kiwanis camp at Pedron, five miles north of Oshawa was the objective.

With one company leading off as advance guard, and others supplying scouts and connecting files, the battalion moved off shortly after 9 o'clock this morning. On the march to Pedron the column was separated into small sections posted at intervals with the view of impressing the men with the need of spreading out because of possible enemy aircraft action.

Once again the Second Battalion was taking part in a mythical defense of Oshawa, similar to that employed when the First Battalion visited the city some weeks ago. The "enemy" was supposedly advancing from Ottawa by way of Kawartha Lakes, with the battalion taking up positions at Pedron to hold up the advance.

Col. R. B. Smith, O.C., expressed satisfaction with the result of the day's operations.

Texas Panhandle Sleet Storm Ties Up State

DALLAS, Nov. 26 — (AP). — Amarillo and parts of the Texas panhandle were isolated today by a storm which snapped communication lines littering highways and streets with poles, wire and trees. Amarillo, without power or water, sent and received its news through amateur radio stations operated by gasoline-driven generators.

No reports had been received from Borger and Pampa.

Panhandle highways were strewn with trees, wires and poles which snapped like straws beneath a five-inch coat of frozen mist which had been gathering for 24 hours. The Southwestern Bell Telephone Company rushed 32 crews from all over Texas with 12,000 new poles.

In Central East Texas rains continued to send flood waters over thousands of acres of rich farming land.

R. L. Rolfe and Henry Nelson, operating amateur radio station W5DAM, transmitted Associated Press despatches from Dallas to Station W5CYX in the office of the Amarillo News Globe. Reports that fires, started by broken power lines, were burning in several parts of Amarillo were denied by W5CYX.

The ice-bound area extended from Amarillo 25 miles south and east and northwest into Colorado and New Mexico.

The rains, which blanketed virtually the entire state, ranged as high as 14 inches in some places over the week-end.

At least seven Texans were killed in traffic accidents on mist-shrouded highways.

The Danger of Coughs Among the Children

In young children a cold or cough is not a thing to be disregarded, as it is often of a grave matter, and unless attended to immediately may, eventually, cause serious trouble.

On the first sign of a cough or cold the mother will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to help get rid of the trouble.

Its promptness and effectiveness in loosening the phlegm, and stimulating the bronchial organs is such that the cough may be checked before anything of a serious nature sets in.

Price 35c a bottle; the large family size, about 3 times as much, 60c, at all drug counters.

On the outskirts of an R.A.F. airfield, somewhere on the African desert, an armorer prepares bombs for an attack upon Italian bases. He is shown cleaning sand from the missle before placing in the fuse without which it is harmless. The bombs on the ground, marked by the warning signs, are already fused and all set to do their stuff.

64 RUMANIANS EXECUTED

Iron Guards Take Revenge

Ex-Premier, Police Head Among Victims Lined Up And Shot

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Nov. 27—(AP).—The Rumanian Iron Guard was reported to have taken a bloody revenge on the regime of former King Carol early today by executing 64 political prisoners near the grave of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, found of the Guard.

They fell under the rifle fire of a troop of Iron Guardists at Bucharest's Jilava Prison according to the Hungarian News Agency and other corroborative sources which penetrated the censorship imposed in Rumania by the Iron Guard Government of Gen. Ion Antonescu.

This censorship virtually isolated the turbulent Balkan nation from neighboring countries from midnight on, but German and Hungarian sources managed to send the story out of Bucharest by using legation telephones.

All judges and gendarmes alleged to have had a part in the mass killing of Iron Guardists when Carol was on the throne were reported shot.

The firing squad purge was said to have been carried out in the same manner that many hundreds of Guardists were executed before the Nazi-inclined Guard seized power in Rumania, forced Carol to abdicate in September, and began a close alignment of Rumania with Germany.

Greenwood Says Canada's Aid Tops 1914-18–U.S. Flood Rising

LONDON, Nov. 27—(CP Cable). — Arthur Greenwood, Minister without portfolio in the War Cabinet told the House of Commons today that Canada's help in the war will far outweigh anything she did in the last war "because we have taken the bold step of trying to convert her into an industrial country."

He declared the flow of supplies from Canada is "valuable in quality and quantity and will continue to increase as new units of production come into operation."

The minister said, "It is folly to deny" that German air raids have damaged British production, but asserted that "Britain's resources and capacity and the growing help of North America will outmatch the industrial resources and capacity of the enemy."

He expressed the opinion that before long North America would be a second arsenal from which Britain could obtain increasing supplies to supplement those produced in the United Kingdom and to make good the deficiencies here.

"Recent enemy air attacks have retarded our expanding program," the minister said. "Beyond that I do not go. With close knowledge of the industrial damage that we have suffered, I say unhesitatingly that it has not eaten to any serious extent into our productive capacity."

He replied to vigorous labor charges of government over-optimism, timidity and failure to mobilize the unemployed for a part in war production.

"At the risk of being accused of wishful thinking and of again being charged with belittling Hitler's resources, I still assert that our increasing production, in both quality and weight, will finally crush the might of the dictators," Mr. Greenwood declared.

He acknowledged that the increase in the output of war equipment "is not enough," but added that the flow of material from the United States "increasing, even if it is tardy."

"We are now co-operating with the United States in order that our joint needs shall be met with the least possible delay and in order to ensure that we shall get that high priority that we undoubtedly need," he continued.

"I have made a clean breast of our difficulties to them in order that they could profit by our experience and that, I believe, they are doing.

"I think that before very long, if the cordial relations between this country and the United States continue—and I imagine they will become increasingly cordial—North America will be a second arsenal

TORONTO, Nov. 27—(CP). — If present conditions continue, Ontario farmers will be forced out of production of some essential products such as bacon, D. E. Stauffer of Bright, Ont., president of the United Farmers of Ontario, said in an address prepared for delivery at the oganization's annual convention here today.

"We cannot produce it (bacon) at present prices and meet our financial obligations," he said. "Some people are saying 'I hope the farmers will be loyal enough to keep on producing pork products in spite of the price.' This attitude is economically unsound and absurd."

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—(CP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King gave notice in today's votes and proceedings of a motion he will propose in the House of Commons whereby parliament will adjourn at conclusion of the current Throne Speech debate until February 17, 1941.

The feeling among observers on Parliament Hill is that the debate might end this week.

THE Mediterranean Fleet reported that it had engaged a strong Italian sea force at "extreme range" today and that it pursued as the Italians "retired at high speed" toward their base.

The Admiralty, which has announced repeatedly that the Italian navy has refused to come to grips with the British fleet said no information was available immediately on the outcome of the latest brush.

A statement reported that British units encountered two Italian battleships accompanied by a large force of cruisers and destroyers shortly before noon.

Italian Lines Stiffen Along Coast

Wealth Of Material Lost In North; Allies Bomb Valona

ATHENS, Nov. 27—(AP).—Re-inforcements of troops and planes were reported today to have stiffened the resistance of Italian forces in the southern Albanian sector, but Greek dispatches said the Fascist retreat in northern and centra zones was continuing.

Besides the newly arrived troops, said information from the front, Italy sent additional planes at the urgent request of Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, the new Italian commander in Albania, in an attempt to halt the Greeks.

In the north and centre the Italians were said to be retiring in disorder and abandoning a wealth of material.

Striking at one of the chief points of entry for Italian supplies and reinforcements, British bombers aiding the Greeks made "highly successful raids" on Valona, sheltered Albanian port near the mouth of the Adriatic Sea opposite the Italian port of Otranto.

A Royal Air Force communique asserted that heavy bombs made direct hits in the harbor on "a big ship which seemed to be in a sinking condition before our aircraft set off." Damage also was registered on quays, the dock area and airport buildings, and a hangar and one defending plane were destroyed.

Capture Six Planes.

A terse army communique merely reported that Greek operations "continue with success in Albanian territory," and listed six abandoned Italian aircraft as part of the Greeks booty in the Koritza area.

A government spokesman, however, said Italian reinforcements had failed to brace the Fascists' receding battle line, and that even the fresh troops were yielding ground to the bayonet-thrusting Greeks.

That they are leaving behind almost all of their vehicles, he saidi is a sign of their "broken morale" and the disorganization of their retreat.

Fresh troops are covering the Italian withdrawal, "making desperate efforts to delay our advance," he said. But "the broken morale of the other Italians had been imparted to these troops."

He said they "have been overthrown," and the Greek troops are pressing "steadily" forward.

The woman was struck and thrown toward the edge of the pavement. Her injuries included two broken legs and a possible fracture of the neck and death was instantaneous.

The accident happened a short distance west of Downer's Corners. Mrs. McKinlay was walking west, and the car which struck her was travelling in the same direction.

Duce's Great Royal Arsenal Major War Plant City Left Mass Of Raging Fires

British Bombers Also Batter At Cologne With Its Huge Arms Factories, And Dumps Some In Berlin—England Quiet

LONDON, Nov. 27—(CP).—A rapid-fire attack by British heavy bombers on the very centre of Italian war production was announced by the Air Ministry today to have lighted fires in the factory city of Turin and set it shaking with bursts of its own explosives.

As the Royal Air Force lunged at both Turin and Berlin last night, the Axis assaults on Britain lagged for a second successive night, and recurring raid warnings today brought only scattered, mild attacks to the British Isles.

London had its third, brief alarm in mid-afternoon, but no incidents were reported immediately.

The raiders over Turin attacked the Royal Arsenal and "greatly increased" damage done to the city on Saturday night.

The main bombing attack on Germany last night was aimed at the armament factories of Cologne, the Ministry added, but railways in Berlin also were attacked.

A communique stated five Royal Air Force planes were missing after the night's operations, including the raid on Turin.

The Air Ministry news service said two direct bomb hits were made on a Cologne armaments factory and that the resulting fire was seen 50 miles away.

In two night attacks on the Rhineland cathedral city, the news service said, R.A.F. bombers directed their missiles at power plants, freight yards and stations on both sides of the river.

Twelve big explosions along the river's docks were reported by R. A.F. pilots who participated in the attack.

(Damage to buildings in the centre and outskirts of Turin, Italy's leading industrial city, was acknowledged by the Italian communique today).

Roaring over Turin in "quick succession," the Air Ministry bulletin said, the British bombers found no clouds obstructing their view and "were able to pick out their objectives by various landmarks."

The first aircraft arrived just after 11 p.m., the ministry said, and dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs "which immediately started a number of fires."

"Pilots of the next bombers," the ministry said, "described how they saw on their arrival one of the larger factory buildings, 200 yards long by 50 yards wide, already well alight. Not only was it burning fiercely, but, as the flames reached explosive material, there were frequent eruptions in the middle of the blaze.

"New fires were started and about half an hour later, when our bombers had reached the Alps and none was over the city, observers looked back over the plain and saw that Turin was still being disturbed by a number of explosions."

Turin sprawls on the Piedmont plains, a city of more than 500,000.

Aid In Norway

Stockholm, Nov. 27 (AP)

AVALANCHES described as apparently the work of saboteurs were reported to have cut in 10 places a key railway across the southern part of German-occupied Norway.

The Oslo correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter wrote that the avalanches roared down mountain slopes yesterday in the Westlandet (west land) area to cut the Bergen-Oslo railway and block highways.

A state of emergency has been declared in the area, he said, and troops have been posted at strategic points to guard the transportation systems. Several weeks of work will be required to repair the railway, he said.

Blizzard Clogs All Ontario

3-Foot Drifts Pile Up Over Night, Slowing Traffic–3 Deaths

TORONTO, Nov. 27 (CP)—Snow-clogged highways, stalled cars, delayed transportation schedules and frosty air gave evidence today that real winter finally had settled over the southern areas of Ontario after it had been experienced in northern sections for more than two weeks.

The snow arrived yesterday to the accompaniment of terrific gales which lashed waters of the Great Lakes into churning waves similar to those of the disastrous Nov. 11 storm when several vessels foundered.

At least three deaths were attributed to the storm—two in western Ontario where the force of the blizzard first was felt. Near Norwich Mrs. Robert Fletcher of Newark, Ont., was killed when her car was forced out of control by the gale. Near Windsor another fatality occurred when William O'Shea's truck crashed into the rear of a Highways Department sanding truck and O'Shea was killed. A woman was hit on the highway near Peterborough.

Storm signals were hoisted after midday in all Lake Erie and Lake Ontario ports and vessels clung to their safe havens. A number of vessels started from Toronto for Rochester but after three hours of buffeting they scurried back to harbor.

After sweeping through Western Ontario the storm proceeded Eastward until at midnight the whole of the southern section was enveloped in the blizzard. More than three inches of snow fell in Western Ontario and it was badly drifted in most sections. In Toronto where the first snow fell around 6 p.m., three-foot drifts were piled up within six hours.

By late night the storm had reached Ottawa and farther south, at Belleville, traffic was practically at a standstill. A number of military transports on a service movement had to be tied up there for the night.

Storm warnings were heeded in

First Hack at War Orders

British Calls To U.S. Through Canadian Hands Purvis Says

LONDON, Nov. 27—(CP Cable).—Arthur B. Purvis, chairman of the British Purchasing Commission in the United States, told The Canadian Press today that Canada gets first chance to meet requests for war orders received by the commission in New York.

A representative of the Canadian Ministry of Supply "sees all incoming cables and decides whether Canada can have a hack at them," he said.

Britain's biggest buyer added that he was "very satisfied" with Canada's participation.

Mr. Purvis spoke after a press conference where he was given a severe grilling, mostly by American reporters, on questions of United States supplies.

The man who left a big Canadian enterprise last November to head the purchasing commission impressed British reporters with the directness of his replies and his able parrying to prevent disclosure of vital information.

Indicating heavy increase in United States aid to Britain in 1941, Mr. Purvis told the press conference:

"Next year, if I were sitting in Germany, I would be very worried at what is going to flow out of the United States."

He said American plants for construction of war materials, in many cases, have been built "from the ground up," and that they will be getting into full operation next year.

He declined to disclose any statistics on production of airplanes or other war materials in the United States on the grounds that it would be giving information to Britain's enemies.

Commenting on release of United States bomb sights to Britain, Mr. Purvis described the supply situation for them as "fully satisfactory."

Airplanes and ships, first of all, are needed from America, he said,

Second Key Industrial Centre Of Britain, A Shambles; Debris Blocks Unhit Stores

Raiders Concentrate Fury On Certain Areas Blasting Them To Rubble As In Rotterdam; Bristol Barrage Saves Much Of Dock District

LONDON, Nov. 27—(CP).—While German bombers ranged anew far and wide over Britain last night and early today, authorities, lifting the veil of censorship, disclosed that Birmingham, Bristol and Southampton have been bombed severely by "chain raiders" since the concentrated raid on Coventry two weeks ago.

A number of British planes dropped bombs in the suburbs of Berlin last night, German authorities admitted. The planes failed to reach the centre of the city, they said. No other details were announced.

They indicated that proud Birmingham, second industrial city of Britain, was a shambles, its undamaged stores unable to open because the debris is piled so high in the streets.

A correspondent who visited Bristol described sections of it as lying in ruin, twisted girders tortured as if by great heat into deformed skeletons of buildings.

Tuesday, last night and early today the raiders were reported attacking anew a "West England city" which it was stated had been under attack Sunday, and through Monday. Since authorities admitted that Bristol had been battered Sunday night, observers wondered whether the same port, through which supplies have been arriving from the United States, was under bombardment again.

Bigger Than Toronto

(The 1931 census shows the population of Birmingham to be 1,002,413, which exceeds the Toronto metropolitan area population; Bristol, 396,918; and Southampton, 176,025, about the size of Hamilton.)

Birmingham's famous Art Gallery and the Empire Music Hall have been damaged; a large arcade is wrecked.

At Bristol, where large houses were destroyed, the Hall of the University and some churches as well as the Art Gallery suffered bomb hits.

The correspondent who visited Bristol said the streets are piled high and blocked by masses of brick and stone. Shattered stores and apartment houses were to be seen on all sides. Some structures several stories high are empty shells.

A denuded, twisted steel building, its girders tortured as though by fire of tremendous heat, stood in one street.

Schools and cinemas were extensively damaged in the Bristol raid. There were many fires.

The Press Association said, however: "Although it was a severe raid, the 'blitz' on Bristol was nowhere as heavy as that on Coventry and the city and port, to which the Germans referred in the past tense, still have a very active future."

Likened to Rotterdam

Six firemen were killed any many injured in Southampton, where thousands of incendiary bombs were dropped. Two of several cinemas hit were burned out, but the audiences escaped.

decisive victory over Germany unless the United States dropped its neutral status and joined Britain as a belligerent.

Stoneman said the war could be won by "tens of thousands of aircraft, hundreds of destroyers and millions of tons of fresh shipping," and he doubted that the United States could bring itself to produce war materials on this scale unless she was prepared to go to war.

Meanwhile, two noted American correspondents in London cabled dispatches that were highly critical of the British censorship, blaming it for keeping Britons and the world in the dark about the true situation—and the need for United States assistance.

In The New York Times, correspondent Raymond Daniell was critical Monday of the British censorship. He said London newspapers printed a German communique claiming damage to specified towns in the Midlands, while British communiques did not name the towns.

Daniell commented:—

"This is defeating its own purpose because in trying to fool their enemies the British are succeeding only in fooling their best friends. They want greater supplies of war materials and financial help from the United States, and their best hope of getting it is letting the people of the United States know the extremity of their need...."

In a note to editors preceding the Middleton story yesterday, The Associated Press described it as "significant because it passed through a censorship which heretofore has frowned on such statements."

The note added: "It may mean that the British have changed their attitude and believe that a dark picture of their danger would arouse more sympathy in the United States than the confident optimism displayed so far by the Government."

Western Ontario early in the day and practically all aircraft was grounded. A Royal Canadian Air Force Avro-Anson bomber, on a flight from Toronto to Brantford, ran into the blizzard in the vicinity of Hamilton and was driven off its course. The pilots, flying within 50 feet of the ground, found the Hamilton airport and made a safe landing, admitting they had been lost.

At Kincardine four new R.C.A.F. training planes, being flown to the training centre at Sky Harbor Airport, Goderich, were forced down when they ran into the storm. Each one was brought down in a perfect landing on open fields.

Trans-Canada Airlines Services into Western Ontario were cancelled during the day and planes leaving on transcontinental flights from Toronto were grounded.

Bus schedules were retarded as drifted and slippery pavement prevented speed. Railway trains for the most part ran on time.

The Ontario Highways Department made early plans to keep the highways open and departmental ploughs and sanding trucks were out soon after the storm broke.

The wind velocity reached 55 to 60 miles an hour in many places—nearly the velocity during the Remembrance Day storms.

The Ontario storm was the tail end of snowstorms across the United States.

off commented that Bulgaria seldom has been "in such a favorable position and with so many friends as now," and said the mighty precautionary blackouts would be terminated, beginning to-night.

Observers said Berlin apparently was avoiding for the present pressing the delicate questions of Bulgaria's position in the new Europe.

Diplomats, as a result, looked to renewal of the Danube control conference at Bucharest this week for fresh indications of the extent to which either Germany or Russia might give ground where their interests clash.

Diplomats also took note of the return to Sofia yesterday of Parvan Draganoff, minister to Berlin, who has been mentioned as the next Bulgarian premier, if Bulgaria should join the Axis.

Questions of Turkey's future position and whether Yugoslavia also would resist possible pressure to join the Axis alliance are believed by Sofia observers to be involved in diplomatic maoneuvring by Russia.

The Russian position, during the weeks of Bucharest Danube conference has been dragging on, has been that she should have the sole or at least controlling power over the Danube mouth.

Italian delegates have been the spokesmen for Axis refusal to agree in closed sessions to anything except Axis control from Braila, Rumania, to the Black Sea. (It is at Braila that the river, flowing north, suddenly swing almost due east to the Black Sea.)

When the Danube conference resumes later this week, Russia is believed prepared to renew her argument that she has the greater right to control this section.

"It is true as the Prime Minister said recently that we are far from being fully armed and so long as that remains the case there will be increasing calls for further effort."

The Minister went on to say that while shipping losses are "much like April, 1917....The position is not so bad as it might have been but for the actual increase in merchant tonnage built here....

"It is a heavy responsibility that rests on the Admiralty to see that we get some reasonable measure of security for our shipping, for if we do not our plight is going to become very serious.

"The loss of war material in transit is not sufficient to cause alarm.

"I do not believe we are at the end of our difficulties; I think these difficulties will increase; there may be some of a new kind to grapple with."

Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, had accused the Government of overoptimism and "failure to face the fact that the dice of war are heavily loaded against us.

"...Production over the whole field of industry is not increasing and there is far too much unemployment," Mr. Shinwell declared. "The Government are too much afraid of using their powers."

He urged that parliament "spur the Government onward in the colossal task that faces the nation."

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Secretary and a Conservative, declared that Mr. Greenwood had "offered us no remedy" and declared that "unemployment at the most critical moment of our whole history appears to be increasing."

Shipbuilding is behind schedule, Mr. Hore-Belisha charged, and the Shipping Minister has "offered us no hope except for accession of tonnage from the United States which "is not a mercantile shipbuilding nation and has many pre-occupations with its own naval difficulties both in the Atlantic and the Pacific."

Mr. Hore-Belisha declared that "the real remedy" would be "to knock Italy out of the war. The Greeks have opened the way...this is our great opportunity."

Asking why a part of the Italian fleet was permitted to flee Taranto for "safer refuge" after Britain's November 11 air attack, the former War Secetay asked:

a centre of automobile and airplane manufacturing.

While the British bombers struck at Turin, as well as Berlin, the air attack on Britain lagged for the second successive night.

Back With Daylight.

Although Nazi bombers laid off completely after midnight, they were bac kearly this morning and put London under a one-hour daylight alarm at about 7 a.m. The raiders came up the Thames estuary and bombed two places on the capital's outskirts.

(Air raid alarms sounded during the night in Switzerland, usually a sign that British planes are on their way to or from targets in Italy's industrial north. The Swiss high command said anti-aircraft guns opened fire on planes flying toward Italy and back over Switzerland's neutral borders.)

Authorities now permit the identification of three cities which have borne the brunt of recent Nazi raids on provincial England as Birmingham, great industrial centre of the Midlands; Bristol, west coast port, and Southampton, on the English Channel.

"Although it was a severe raid on Bristol," the press association said, "it was nowhere as heavy as on Coventry, and the city and port to which the Germans referred in the past tense still has a very active future."

Shops and old buildings were the chief places to suffer, it said, and "within a short time life was almost back to normal; transport was running to schedule, although some was diverted, and accommodation was being found for the homeless."

There were no details on the Sunday night assault on Bristol—merely permission to name the city and describe some of the damage.

When the midnight let-up came in last night's attacks, there had been only slight damage and few casualties, the air and home security ministries reported in a communique.

In London, many East-enders forsook the crowded, uncomfortable shelter to sleep in their own beds once again. There was a noticeable drop in the numbers sleeping in subways after the all-clear in the capital shortly before midnight.

Commenting on the shipping situation, he emphasized that next to airplanes, ships are Britain's most urgent need. As to American aid in shipping, he said he hoped "every means" would be considered.

He would not comment on the possibility of repeal of the United States' cash-and-carry law.

"Deliveries of airplanes are very satisfactory, bearing in mind that the United States has been building up a new industry," Mr. Purvis said.

He remarked that he had "come home to learn the position" and planned to return to the United States about the middle of December.

Iron Guards

Berlin where he signed the Axis pact for Rumania, were former Premier George Argesanu; Gen. Gabriel Marinescu, a former cabinet minister and Prefect of Police in Bucharest, and Ion Morusow, former chief of the Rumanian secret service.

"Rumanian justice" also was reported to have dealt with a former gendarme commander, General Bengliu, and 14 gendarmes who were directly accused of garroting Codreanu and 13 other guardists at Jilava prison in 1938.

The arrest of former Premiers Ion Gigurtu and Constantine Argetoianu also reported by the Hungarian News Agency.

Information was lacking as to whether Antonescu approved the mass executions. Until now he has been understood to oppose violent methods, preferring to use his personal influence to reconcile and unite dissident elements in the nation.

The brief dispatches said it was not learned who issued the death order, nor was it known publicly whether any of the condemned had been given secret trials.

For weeks the iron guard commission questioned former officials regarding responsibility for anti-guard measures, but the communiques indicated this was merely a preliminary inquiry.

Honor Codreanu

The firing squads went to work, it was reported, after the bones of Codreanu and his lieutenants were exhumed preparatory to a ceremonial re-interment in the Green House, Bucharest iron guard headquarters.

The Green House was the scene of gun fighting a few days ago when right wing guardists attempted a revolt under Codreanu's [illegible] against the leadership of [illegible] Sima.

It was officially announced that two men were wounded. Subsequent unconfirmed reports said several of the right wing guards were executed as traitors.

Reign of Terror

The Iron Guard, now in the saddle in Rumania with German support, made terrorism an instrument of policy in its struggle for power.

Rumania's recent history has been marked by a connected series of assassinations and executions, outgrowth of the fierce struggle between the Iron Guard and the now deposed regime of King Carol.

Late in November, 1938, Flory Goanga, rector of Cluj University, was wounded in an attack authoritatively attributed to the Iron Guard. A 22-year-old extremist was said to have confessed that he "won the commission to shoot Goanga in a guard lot-drawing.

Goanga was not fatally injured, but suppressive measures took the stern turn of mass killing, for the attack was said to have been intended as the spark for a rebellion.

The founder of the Iron Guard, Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, and 13 colleagues were in prison at the time, serving sentences on charges of treason growing out of assassinations of Premier Ion Duca, in 1933, and Mihail Stelescue, an Iron Guardist accuses of betraying the movement, in 1936.

Codreanu promptly was accused of directing the "rebellion" from his prison cell.

On November 30 Codreanu and the others were killed. The official story at the time was that, while they were being taken to Bucharest from Rumnik-Sarat prison for questioning in the Goanga shooting, they attempted to escape and all were fatally shot by the guard detail.

Strangled In Prison.

As indicated in today's dispatch, the common story in the Rumanian capital is that Codreanu and his fellows were strangled to death in prison.

The next major stroke attributed to the Iron Guard was the assassination September 21, 1939, of Premier Calinescu, relentless foe of the Guardists. This, too, was classed as part of a rebellion attempt.

In retaliation, Iron Guardists were marched into streets and alleys or stood against prison walls and shot. The number so executed was officially given as 320, but other figures ran to nearly 2,000.

Carol appointed Gen. Argesanu to succeed the slain Calinescu in the Premiership and the purge was directed by Argesanu. The Guard had its vengeance today on Argesanu and others.

Private M.P. Clamor Gains Way

Claim Dollar-Year Men Have Too Little Tie Ask More Committees

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—(CP).—The rising clamor of private members of Parliament for a more direct share in guiding this nation's war program gained momentum today with the outspoken support of two Western members, one from Government ranks.

They wanted committees of parliament appointed to look into and advise upon various phases of war activity, so the ordinary member would know in more detail what was going on.

There was, for instance, the matter of several hundred million dollars worth of war contracts which the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons might study, G. H. Castleden (CCF, Yorkton) suggested.

The Government's voluminous reports contained little more than totals, aside from revealing numerous new corporations of doubtful parentage, he complained. He wanted to know something of prices paid and for what quantities.

"Many of the mistakes that have been made could be eliminated if more attention was paid to the elected members of parliament, rather than to the so-called dollar-a-year men who are cluttering up the streets of Ottawa," asserted George Cruickshank (Lib., Fraser Valley).

"We have been elected, rightly or wrongly, by the popular vote. We should be taken more into the confidence of the Government."

Ask More Advice Sought.

Advice of the members should be sought more often, instead of that of some of the dollar-a-year men who couldn't be elected pound-keeper in British Columbia, he contended.

"They are responsible to no one, and in many cases they are not responsible at all," Cruickshank added.

As the Throne Speech debate moved along, speeches ranged from enforced saving, as a way of avoiding inflation, to the financing of Canadian-American joint defence works with American credits.

Gray Turgeon (Lib. Cariboo), on the latter point, set forth the idea of persuading the United States to advance enough gold from its huge reserves to cover the cost of Canada's part of these defence works.

the inland war zone, border observers in the Yugoslav frontier town of Ochrida said a battle line had been established along the Verovia River.

(This is about eight miles south of Fogradetz, which apparently still is in Italian hands, although Fascists are reported moving equipment out of it in the face of heavy Greek reinforcements said to be moving into that area.)

Landing on the Coast

The government spokesman confirmed reports that Greek forces had landed on the Albanian coast opposite the island of Corfu. He denied, however, yesterday's Italian high command claim that they had been cut to pieces or captured.

"The truth is this," he said. "A detachment of Greek troops landed somewhere on the coastal sector and has been able to carry out its mission without being in the least bothered."

Italians were said to have loosed heavy air blows on villages and communications along the southern battlefront sector, where Argirocastro, the Italians' last major "invasion" base, and their path to the Adriatic Sea are threatened.

Aid raids on Lixuri, on the island of Cephalonia; on a number of villages in Epirus and on Corfu were reported by the ministry of home security. It gave no details of damage or casualties.

Italian Flyers Resort To Bombing Open Greek Villages

(By PETER TOMPKINS.)

WITH THE GREEK ARMY, Nov. 27—(AP).—The Italians opened a furious air attack upon villages and communication lines all along the southern battlefront sector Tuesday in a desperate effort to halt the Greek advance.

It was a clear day and the Fascist bombers started coming over in early morning.

I helped dig some of the civilian victims out of their smashed homes. One of these was an American citizen of Greek origin, a woman who was mortally wounded when three Italian bombers dropped more than a dozen bombs on the little village of Delvinakion, two miles from the front. Her mother, and her two children, were killed outright. Her husband, whose name was censored, is now in the United States.

I arrived at the village two minutes after the bombs had fallen, about 1 p.m. I could see the planes clearly as they flew over the mountain tops. In the village I found a young Greek lieutenant who had just pulled himself out of the remains of his house. The only language we had in common was Italian, so we talked his enemy's tongue.

In the debris of the town we found a Greek officer with his head blown off. Beside him, a soldier lay dead. Two wounded men were moaning in a house nearby. Two small boys lay dead under a heap of splinters and plaster.

Telephone communications were interrupted by the bombing, but by fortunate chance an ambulance passed and was put into service. While we were loading it with wounded, two Italian prisoners emerged from the surrounding woods escorted by two Greek soldiers with rifles. Both the Italians were wounded; one rode a small mountain horse. We helped him down. He was too sick to talk and his eyes were wide in terror. He gasped, "Fratello . . . fratello" — "Brother, brother."

He had been riding, wounded, for two days and two nights in the mountains.

In the village, captured six days ago by the Greeks, the bicycles of Italian Bersaglieri were strewn everywhere, along with all kinds of ammunition and other war materials. Here and there Italian uniforms hung from the trees.

It's So Easy! Makes a Big Saving. No Cooking.

To get quick relief from a distressing cough, mix your own remedy at home. Once tried, you'll say it's your favorite cough medicine, and it's so simple and easy.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well known for its prompt action on throat membranes.

Put the Pinex into a 16-ounce bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make 16 ounces of very efficient remedy, and you get four times as much cough medicine for your money. It tastes fine and never spoils.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is splendid. You can feel it penetrating the air passages in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

Urge Union Curb In Defence Work

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—(AP).—Legislation designed to prevent labor unions from requiring membership of workers engaged in United States defence production was proposed Tuesday by Clare E. Hoffman (Rep-Michigan).

For violations, Hoffman would provide fines up to $1,000 or imprisonment to a year. Preliminary paragraphs of the measure said a strike at the Vultee Aircraft Company, Downey, Calif., was delaying an $84,000,000 defence order.

"We know," the Bill said, "from what happened in Michigan in the sit-down strikes of 1937 that it will be impossible for this nation to effectively prepare to defend itself if the activities which then prevailed in Michigan are repeated at the Ford plant and at the plants of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation."

The Bill would make it unlawful for any person or organization to require membership in a union as a condition precedent to employment on National defence work.

Recognizing a Handicap

Ronald Cross, British Minister of Shipping, talked plainly when he discussed the present losses in shipping. He considered them serious and said so, and that is exactly the course he should have followed.

The resources of the Empire are not sufficient to make up for the losses, and that is understandable. In times of peace British shipyards have been sufficient to supply the need. We have shipyards in Canada; their capacity is being increased, but at best our output it limited when placed against the present need. For that reason Britain looks to United States with its immense possibilities.

There is something in geography which makes manufacturing in Britain more difficult than before, and when Mr. Cross placed his finger on it there was not the least difficulty in recognizing the strength of his contention.

It was just this: In former years British shipyards and industrialists in general could import iron ore from Sweden or steel from Norway, Belgium or France. All such imports could come quickly on account of the relatively short haul and there were no limits placed on quantities. Today all those importing possibilities are shut off, and to secure such materials Britain has to find supplies the world over and cross seas in order to have them delivered. It is a handicap and a serious one, and none are more aware of it than the British people themselves.

What's The Reason?

For the moment it looks as though Italy will have to make the best of it against the Greeks and what assistance Greece is receiving from Britain. Bulgaria refused to line up with the Axis powers and that ended the idea of marching German troops through that country to attack the Greeks. How long that situation will remain no one knows.

Military critics are spending part of their time in making sincere wishes that the Greeks do not extend their communication lines too far in pursuing the Italians in Albania. For the moment no one is inclined to worry much about that. The principal feature is that the Italian retreat has not been stemmed, and Mussolini would stem it if he could.

Benito is undoubtedly losing caste in the eyes of Berlin. He has not been able to do what he planned and promised. Every move he has attempted has done nothing more than publicly expose his weakness.

If ever there was a time when Mussolini needed the Germans to come and save him from flat and utter failure it is right now. But Germany has shown no disposition to go in. Admittedly it is strange, but it may be Hitler feels it is time Mussolini came to the point of fighting his own battles and taking the consequences of defeat.

More Speed Needed

A staff correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor at Washington writes that "on an increasingly large scale, the United States is linking its own defence with that of Britain's." He was referring to the completion of 26 of the world's most powerful bombers—flying fortresses they are called—and the plans for 20 more, making 46 in all.

Each of these bombers will be accompanied by an American military observer who will be allowed to fly over England and over the Channel. His business is to make notes and recommend any needed changes. Machines of this type have never before been in action. They carry four motors, each developing 1,200 horsepower, and within there is more heavy armament than has ever been placed in a plane. The crew numbers nine.

Reading in other American papers one finds the feeling expressed that these new bombers should have been delivered earlier. It is commented on that they have been well paid for and have been seriously needed in action for weeks. One finds running through much of the comment that the need at the battle front is much in excess of the defensive need of United States, and therefore all facility of manufacture should be turned toward the centre of the greatest need.

One comes to the conclusion that many of the writers in United States recognize that while their country is not actively engaged as a combatant, it is not far removed from the war. The one chance to maintain that rather ticklish position is to send all possible assistance to Great Britain as quickly as it can be turned out and not to do too much bothering and dickering about the immediate payment of the bills.

Brought No Happiness

Another despatch from Detroit telling of something new in connection with the efforts to break the will of the late John F. Dodge can hardly arrest much attention. It is just one of a series.

The latest announcement is that a grant of $2,500,000 to the widow of Daniel Dodge has been upheld, and after that comes the announcement that a suit by John Duval Dodge, attempting to break his father's will which set up a trust fund of $40,000,000 for the other Dodge children still is pending.

If it had been the hope and desire of the father that this enormous trust fund was going to bring happiness to his children then that hope has failed. It has demonstrated that $40,000,000 can purchase no happiness at all.

Instead it has brought battles in courts; it has caused a reaching out of those who have much in the hope of attaining more.

Much better had the father given most of his $40,000,000 away while he could still have heard some appreciative person say "Thank you."

It Seems Strange

When Hon. Eric Cross resigned as Minister of Municipal Affairs and Public Welfare it was decided to have the duties of that department spread elsewhere.

There was always the high hope that this department, while attending to the business of putting municipal finances right, might possibly see the wisdom of imposing at least one section of municipal financing upon the province itself. And that one section would be the matter of borrowing money and making provision to pay it back within a definite period.

The restrictions and regulations under which municipalities operate were conferred by the Legislature in the Municipal Act, and they are superior to those under which the province itself operates. The province can borrow money in the form of a loan, but it is not provided that in twenty years that loan must be paid off, and that each year a certain amount of it must be set aside for that purpose.

When a municipality borrows through the debenture plan it has to receive sanction of the Municipal Board; it has to comply with the rulings of that Board regarding the length of the period required for repayment. No one objects to that form of supervision, and it means that when the period of the debenture has expired the loan has expired with it.

While the Legislature has for years had the power to tell the muncipalities how to borrow and what plan to follow it has never inflicted upon itself a debt retirement policy which is as good as the one it insisted should be followed by the municipalities.

We Elect These Members

Walter Tucker, Liberal M.P. for Rosthern, Sask., spoke in the House of Commons and went 20 minutes over the 40-minute limit without objection being raised. That's unusual. Mr. Tucker is a product of the West; he was born in Manitoba and educated there and in Saskatchewan; can put B.A., LL.B., K.C. after his name.

The part of his address which would claim attention on the part of the members of the House was his plea that the members of Parliament—call them private members or back benchers or what you will—should have more to do with the business of governing the country.

Mr. Tucker claimed that members of Parliament are elected to run the country. They go before the people, make their appeals, and the people make their decision. They look to the elected members for results, and they hold them responsible for failures. But these members felt they were actually there with too little to do.

True enough they are named on committees of the House, and they often enough have opportunity to do good work in that way, but in times of war they feel that others who were not elected are being brought in and they are actually the ones who are making the decisions, and they were never elected. Therefore they have no mandate from the people.

Mr. Tucker is not the first to feel that way about it, and the same feeling has existed long before there was war in the land. The average man going to Parliament is keen to do something. He feels that he has been told by the majority of the people in his riding to go and represent them. So he goes and when he arrives in Ottawa he has that feeling within him. He wants to do something; he desires to come to grips with real problems and satisfy himself that he is actually in the midst of things.

According to Mr. Tucker the member of Parliament was having that feeling of usefulness taken from him because there were so many experts in various lines being called in by Ottawa today to run the war effort. Mr. Tucker, who is a thorough-going Liberal, did not object to experts, but he did hold they had no mandate from the people, and for that reason the elected representatives should have greater approach and entrance to what these people have been doing.

When it came to a question of financing and providing credits he was certain the members should come into full knowledge and full voice, otherwise they could not carry out their responsibilities to the people who had elected them. It was quite a point which this Westerners raised, and he developed it to full stature. It carried added weight because it came from a Government member, and indicates that there is positive need for the fullest information being placed at the disposal of members. Parliament is supreme in this country, and no expert, no matter how valuable his assistance, can possibly have the power which is vested in our members of Parliament.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Albanians are reported joining with the Greeks to chase the Italians out of their country. The Italians had made no friends in the little nation which they conquered.

Rear-Admiral Leahy has been named as United States ambassador to France and we were wondering if a man with such a name could possibly know anything of the German language.

We noticed where a team of horses had been used to pull out a plow and tractor, and if horses have a sense of humor that team probably giggled a little as they tugged.

There are too many explosions in industrial plants of United States to allow of the word "accident" being used to cover them all. The national housecleaners should do the corners and look under the beds as well.

Suggestion is made that all papers be banned in Canada during the war unless they are printed in English or French. But why? The one thing which should decide that is what the paper says, and not the language in which it is said.

Russian inventor has a new gadget which turns on parking lights at dusk and turns them off at dawn. There is actually more need for a new dohickey which will inject some common sense into the folk who sit behind the steering wheel.

Man in Boston had his car stolen, and later on got a ticket because the thief parked it in the wrong place. Even in such a centre of culture and classics we believe such a process would be looked upon as rubbing it in.

At a dinner given by the staff of the College Review, the student paper of the O.A.C., we noticed ten editors were in attendance and they all belonged to the Review. What chance would there be for any others present to get anything to eat?

It has been suggested, now that the Government has gone in for rent control, that a committee should be named to find out what rentals the Government pays for properties it has occasion to use. Why not? Surely there should be no secrecy about the spending of public money for that purpose.

ESCAPED

(By A.R.K.)

¶ The salesman talked so smooth to me, with what he said I should agree, he rather liked my looks; I was a thinker so he said, he knew by looking at my head, I revelled in good books.

¶ He said at once he put me down, among the leading men in town, I smiled in sweet content; he said that brainy men like me, are just the kind he'd like to see, sent to our parliament.

¶ And after that he started in, to try and part me from my tin, his books he said were rare; the places where he called were few, he sold to people that he knew, just touched now here and there.

¶ It was a favor that he'd done, he counted me a lucky one, to have him make a call; he'd spread the payments out quite thin, if I would nod my head at him, he'd stretch them till next fall.

¶ I weakened when he said his piece, feared that his honeyed words would cease, such things I seldom hear; distinguished chap, a brainy jay, he almost swept me clean away, so pleasant to the ear.

¶ But then I thought about the rent, the bills the butcher man had sent, thought much before I signed; I knew my Sunday shoes had holes, they needed mending in the soles—and so I changed my mind.

Polish Women Appeal to World Against the Hun

We reprint below an appeal from the women of Warsaw, which was brought to the United States by a secret and circuitous route. In this appeal the women of Warsaw address themselves to women all over the world and, in particular, to women in the United States to raise a powerful voice in America in the name of martyred Poland which, fettered and strangled by the military might of two enemies, is unable to speak for herself.

"THE WORLD, in the course of its existence, has witnessed many atrocities and crimes; the history of mankind is saturated with blood and tears. But history fails to record a Calvary equal to that, which we, the women of Poland, are living through now. We are suffering—as Catholics, as Poles, as mothers, as wives, as sisters and as daughters. We are suffering with every emotion of our hearts. There is no chord in our souls which has not been torn and trampled upon; there is no thought which is not a tormenting and heart-rending grief.

"Our husbands—our brothers and fathers—perished in mass murders which wiped out tens of thousands. They die slowly in dungeons or perish from starvation and cold in war prisoners' camps.

"Our sons—the future and pride of the nation—either perish like their fathers (as boys of 12 and 14 years of age were by no means lacking among those who were shot), or are registered and taken away to alleged labor camps in Germany whence there is no return.

"Our daughters — our little girls the dearest joy of our lives,—are being apprehended on the streets or abducted from their homes under cover of night, imprisoned in company with prostitutes and deported to German brothels. And there are among us mothers who, no longer able to shed tears, ask God for one thing only,—that their daughters might die.'

"Our babes—those innocents who first saw the light of day in refugee shelters, in freight cars or prison cells, are slowly dying in our arms—(no longer able give them warmth)—without even once having had a warm bath or sufficient food.

"Our churches are burned, closed or else doomed to destruction. Our priests have been imprisoned. Statues of Our Savior and of the Blessed Virgin, the wayside shrines, are overthrown, chopped down and destroyed. No religious services are permitted in the churches.

"Our schools are closed, our young generation cannot obtain education. In the opinion of the German governing authorities the ability to read and write is sufficient for the Polish 'nation of serfs' (Knechtevolk). They need no other knowledge.

NO CHANCE TO WORK

"OUR opportunities for gainful employment no longer exist. We have no means of earning a living. Everything has been taken away from us. We can only beg and die.

"Our homes, once cozy firesides, stand empty—no longer sheltering anyone. Their walls ceased to be a protection, since every German has a right to enter at any time the abode of any Pole and take therefrom anything that might look worthwhile to him; furniture, linens and the last remnants of supplies.

"Crime, ruin and misery have plowed through the length and breadth of our land. Poland has forgotten laughter, forgotten words other than those of despair.

"Locked within a vicious circle of misfortune and unable to communicate with the rest of the world, we listen with stupefaction to the official pronouncements of the German masters. For instance, the infamous executioner, Greiser, pays tribute to German justice, assuring his listeners that in the territories occupied by Germany there has been no single act of terror or brutality; Adolf Hitler pledges his word of honor that not a single Pole has been deprived of his opportunity to work; Dr. Frank, 'the only lawful representative of the Polish nation,' informs neutral newspapermen that Poland under German administration, prospers freely, that the majority of the Polish people cheerfully co-operate with the German administration, satisfied with having been delivered by the German government from playing the part of England's flunkey, and that the rumors of terror were but a figment of Allied propaganda.

"Listening to the cynical lies brazenly uttered, we tremble lest the world might believe them. For who could possibly fathom such an abyss of falsehood and hypocrisy? Who could possibly believe that at the very moment when 'the only lawful representative of the Polish nation' assured the world of the cheerful co-operation of the Polish people with the German administration,—thousands of human beings all over Poland were perishing amidst tortures, and all over Poland there was but one voice of execration of the Germans?

LIVING IN HELL

"IT IS, therefore, from the depths of our martyred souls that we cry to you, sisters throughout the world, that all this is not true! Do not believe what the Germans say. Before God Almighty we swear that our words are true and that our accusations are not exaggerated. We are living in hell. There is no Pole who would abide by this hell or who would co-operate with the Germans, unless it be under threat of a gun aimed at his children's heads. This hell is all around us—it is smothering us and we are its helpless victims.

"We endeavor, however, not to abandon ourselves to despair. We believe in Divine Justice, in the justice of history and in the victory of good over evil. We have faith in the victory of the allies and we wait for the day of their triumph. Should this day be slow in arriving there will be no Pole left to see it; Poland may be free but there will be no Poles. The objective and the endeavor of the Germans is to exterminate and to destroy our entire nation. Three million of us have perished already. This figure increases from day to day because famine grows apace."

CHALLENGE

"I'd like to see any of them come down in our field."
—Humorist.

• Member of Parliament In Jail

A STOCK argument, shared by appeasers, pacifists, Hitler sympathizers and opponents of aid to Britain, is that, if we annoy the Nazis by helping the British too much, they will force us into war with them. And then, the argument goes, we shall have to sacrifice our own democracy, "just as the British have done."

It is often taken for granted; everyone is expected to admit without further discussion that the British actually have lost every vestige of democracy since they went to war. But the time when this argument falls flattest is when one of its users, in a fit of supererogatory enthusiasm, sets out to prove it. Then it collapses. For it is difficult to show, by specific examples how a democratic war effort, entered into with the fullest popular consent for the express purpose of saving democracy, becomes, by some strange alchemy of political wrong-headedness, an assault on democracy itself! Nevertheless, the sorry effort continues. It was made again, only this week, here in Chicago.

The instrument, this time, was a cable from London, devoted to the case of Capt. A. H. M. Ramsay, M.P. Formerly an ornament of Parliament, the captain now adorns a convenient gaol.

Poor Capt. Ramsay, wailed the despatch-sender! They tossed him in the can, and they won't let him out. They won't make public the charges. His "parliamentary privileges" are denied him. Now, from his cell, he lodges a complaint. He says the country is going to the demnition bow-wows. It is "in danger of becoming almost a police state."

Isn't that a shame.

What is Capt. Ramsay in the coop for, anyway?

Espionage and treason, that's all!

He was pinched last May, in the wholesale cleanup that got Blackshirt Ozzie Mosley and a lot of lesser lights. But Ramsay was not charged merely with illegal Fascist activity, though he had certainly been active along that line. The British were careful to put this case in a separate category. He was not, they said, the garden variety of Fifth Columnist.

It happens to be well known in state circles and among news correspondents, both here and in London, that what Ramsay was actually arrested for was his connection with what shortly became public as the American embassy spy case. In this episode, Tyler Kent, young attache of the American embassy in London, was caught in the act of transmitting confidential code messages to Nazi agents. Ramsay, one learns upon high authority, was arrested as one of the agents whereby this information—extremely damaging to the British cause — was transmitted to Berlin. The only reason the British have never told the whole story is, apparently, their shamefaced unwillingness to make public such treachery on the part of a member of Parliament.

And this is the man whose incarceration constitutes in eyes unfriendly to Britain, evidence that Britain has gone totalitarian!

Why, in any country less democratic than Britain—less blindly and unrepentantly democratic — would not a man of this kind have been stood promptly against the nearest wall, and shot, in the circumstances, for a traitorous dog?—Chicago Daily News.

• These Two People Just Vanished

TORONTO'S famous "Ambrose Small case" of some years ago—the case in which the wealthy theatre owner completely disappeared and which has not yet been satisfactorily explained—has nothing on the baffling disappearance of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kirk, of North Bay. If anything, the disapearance of the North Bay couple is a greater mystery than was the tale which unfolded when Ambrose Small vanished. Police announced and worked on a number of clues at the time of the Small case, but the disappearance of Mr. and Mrs. Kirk is so completely a mystery that there is not one single shred of evidence to provide even a hint as to what might have happened.

It is more than seven weeks ago since Mr. and Mrs. Kirk left their home in North Bay for a motor trip to Winnipeg. They were traced as far as Sudbury, where they had lunch with friends before starting off on the next lap of their long auto trip. But nothing whatsoever has been heard of them since they pulled out of Sudbury.

How two persons and an automobile could apparently disappear from the face of the earth without leaving any clue whatsoever as to what fate befell them, is amazing. It surpasses any mystery story for its completely baffling lack of evidence.

Police and friends of the couple have thoroughly checked every imaginable place which the Kirks might have visited after leaving Sudbury, but they have encountered failure at every turn.

Needless to say, their numerous friends are greatly alarmed. The possibility that they have met with a tragedy which, somehow, has escaped all notice, is very strong and must be faced.—North Bay Nugget.

To The Editor

MUST ADVANCE TOGETHER

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Last Saturday's editorial reference to "A Farmer and his Hogs," based on the decision of the Elgin County Council "to ask the Federal Government to take over the production of export bacon as a war measure, and to guarantee to the farmers a fair return on their hogs," were interesting to this primary producer.

Despite the fact that your editorial largely disclosed the reason why a government cannot do this in a free economy, within about a dozen words: "....so he went in for breeding and added eleven sows to his stock"; the suggestion is interesting and also, somehow, reminiscent of the finding of the conciliation board, given out by Hon. Norman McLarty, minister of labor (Ottawa) also on November 23: "If great confusion is not to result, there must be enforced at once a strict stabilization of wages throughout the country...."

Now this reader does not believe that it will be either practicable or desirable to stabilize (i.e. "freeze") certain sections of the nation's economy, while leaving others to range to and fro—but, by the character of these times, mostly upward.

For the past couple of years my wheat revenues from the Canadian Wheat Board have not varied a hair's breadth—although every authority in the country is aware that in stabilizing said revenues, on the basis of 70c for a bushel of No. 1 grade of the grain, the price was frozen without any reference to today's conditions of a war background. Moreover, the fact that we growers have done our job well (too well, some think!) is hardly a justification for "freezing" our income at more than 25 per cent below "parity"—which is the farm expression for a fair relationship between the price of wheat (or any other commodity we produce or grow) and the cost of the things the rural dollar must buy.

I realize that this whole business of "stabilization" is a large order; but, when all's said and done, so are the issues of life and death which are involved in Canada's war effort. I notice that the above conciliation board makes reference to the stabilization of "rents" and "commodity prices"; yet this is only a beginning. So long as we all go forward together, all's well; but otherwise, we create more ills than we get rid of.

Some Odd Sights Of Brave London

By D. E. BURRITT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 27 — (CP). — Seen or heard in London:

Hawkers doing a roaring business in the subway shelters...."chocolates, sweets, ices"....automatic vending machines emptied within a few minutes of arrival of first shelter refugees....the city in pitch blackness but radios still blare into the night and provide a ghost-like background for lone travellers....

A tiny motor car with its nose buried in a bomb crater still flaunted its important red-lettered notice across th rear window, "priority"....Chinese laundryman, an odd sight in West London, shuffling along with huge bag over his shoulder and a tinhat hiding most of his facial features....doorman in brilliant livery polishing hotel nameplates with usual vigor though bomb debris piled waist-high on either side of door....

But Going Strong.

"Ladies Only" said the sign hanging drunkenly over a broken gas main over which 14 men were laboring...."No Depression in This House" said the sign hanging in a doorway....the doorway was all that was left of the house...."Established 1628 and STILL open" said the sign over a damaged warehouse....

A new boy brings the groceries now...."Oh, the other bloke, 'e collected a packet on 'is bike".....(he meant his predecessor had been killed by a bomb)....

Climb over the debris to read a "warning" tacked on the wreckage of a building....in letters so small you can't read them five feet away it says "keep away, as there is danger of injury from falling masonry."

Love Goes Merrily On

WHAT this country needs is more bicycles built for two.

German authorities complain that military traffic is congested by various cycling traffic law violators, principally couples who hold hands while pedalling down the road.

In addition to cash fines, one form of punishment inaugurated since the German occupation is to deflate the offenders' bicycle tires and remove the valves.

But such deflation, although working a hardship on love, adds little to the traffic problem's solution, because there are some 4,000,000 bicycles in this country of 8,000,000 persons.

Sect Members Case Is Adjourned Again

MILLBROOK, Nov. 27.—Daniel Brown, of Cobden, Ontario, allegedly a member of the sect known as Jehovah's Witneses, arrested here recently by Chief Constable E. C. Richards, under the Defence of Canada Act, came up for trial before Magistrate Campbell at Cobourg on Monday, and was remanded until Thursday of this week.

This was the second remand in the trial, the first having been granted one week ago at the prisoner's own request, neither side, however, being ready with their witnesses. Brown is being held without bail, and there is apparently no likelihood that the case will be completed Thursday.

Hon. M. O'Brien, Dies In Renfrew

RENFREW, Ont., Nov. 27.—(CP).—Hon. M. J. O'Brien, prominent Canadian industrialist, president of O'Brien Gold Mines Ltd., and former member of the Senate, died here Tuesday. He was born in 1851 in Lochaber, N.S.

He died at his home in Renfrew after a lengthy illness.

He was educated in schools at Lochaber and was connected with railways in one capacity or another from the age of 14 on, serving successively as a foreman, sub-contractor and contractor.

As a railway contractor Mr. O'Brien either built or assisted in building the Kingston and Pembroke railway, the Northern and Pacific Junction railway, the Baie de Chaleurs railway, the Central Counties railway in Eastern Ontario, the Crow's Nest Pass branch of the Canadian Pacific railway; the Midland, the Richmond and Inverness railway, part of the Halifax and Southwestern railways in Nova Scotia, the La Tuque branch of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway Co., a section of the Canadian Northern railway and an 800 mile leg of the National Transcontinental railway.

He was a Royal Commissioner for the building of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario railway and resigned from that position in 1906.

In 1918 he was summoned to the Senate as a Liberal member, but resigned in 1925.

He became a large holder of mines and timber limits, water power and many other industries in the United States and Canada.

Forced Saving Seen Ahead For Canadians

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—Enforced saving as a matter of Government policy reared its shadow over Parliament today. It was advanced by a new member, still a back-bencher, but in Parliamentary corridors there was the suggestion that Douglas C. Abbott, Montreal Liberal lawyer, may have been doing some opinion pioneering for the front - bench financial experts.

Mr. Abbott said: "I cannot help feeling that if this war lasts as long as I believe it will, we may have to resort to a system of enforced saving such as that suggested by the well-known economist, J. M. Keynes. If we do, I hope and believe that the people of the country will accept it, and accept it willingly, as a part of the sacrifice and the contribution which we must make in order to win this war."

Mr. Abbott backed Finance Minister Ilsley in his call for civilian belt tightening.

"Our war effort should never be described as a maximum effort so long as we are taking it easy on the civilian side," he said.

Something for Nothing

"Every man and woman in this country must realize that he is receiving part of his salary in the form of armaments and national defense. And the man who does not reduce his purchasing power, or who increases it, is simply obtaining something for nothing at the expense of some one else in the community," Mr. Abbott said.

The Montreal member, considered one of the best informed financial critics on the Government benches, pressed hard for civilian sacrifices. Taxation should see to it that no corporation or no individual became wealthier during this war. Compulsory saving on the part of the mass of the people would be preferable to inflation, he said.

Norman Lockhart (Con., Lincoln) warned National War Services Minister J. G. Gardiner against casting slurs on the war ability of industry, in referring to the Minister's broadcast of a week ago Sunday.

Mr. Lockhart asked Mr. Gardiner "not to discredit in any way the ability of our workers to do their share in this conflict. There is an inference throughout the country regarding the pegging of wages. I urge that prices be pegged before wages are pegged."

Seeks Chance to Serve

Paul Martin (Lib., Essex East) added his voice to the chorus urging free transportation for soldiers. He urged on the Government the need of putting private members "to more advantageous use than we seem to be at the present time."

He suggested setting up committees and giving the members a chance to serve.

Mr. Lockhart said there was a general impression in Canada that the war effort was being retarded for reasons which it was impossible to ascertain because the Government would not give information to the House.

He declared that when the time came that the United Kingdom could not pay for commodities required from Canada a way should be found to give what was needed.

An echo of Mr. Hanson's criticism of the Ogdensburg meeting last August between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King was heard from Mr. Martin.

Mr. Hanson was quoted as having said the Ogdensburg conversations were "blatant publicity," for conversations on joint defense had been opened by the Conservative Administration prior to 1935, but had been kept secret.

If Mr. Hanson's remarks represented his real views, it was evident that he failed to grasp the true significance of the efforts being made to erect a "bulwark" against dictatorship aggression on the American continent, Mr. Martin said.

Turning to the forthcoming Dominion-Provincial conference on the Rowell-Sirois report, Mr. Martin said Ontario seemed to be singled out for special reference, for reasons not clear to him. There was the suggestion that Ontario was unwilling to co-operate.

Would Mean Greater Unity

He said he believed he spoke for the vast majority of the people of Ontario, certainly of Southwestern Ontario, when he asserted they were anxious that the conference would result in a common understanding, as a result of which Canada could go on with greater unity.

He trusted the men attending the Dominion-Provincial conference would place themselves in the position of those who framed Confederation. Ontario, the largest Province in Canada, was as interested as any Province in seeing that Confederation was not to be destroyed or disunited.

From G. H. Castleden (C.C.F., Yorkton) came a warning to the Government that its system of setting up numerous boards headed by big business men to direct the war effort, he said.

"The personnel of those boards is like a 'Who's Who' of Canada's big industrial interests," he continued. "Man is naturally a creature of his own environment, and these men belong to a group that have become a law unto themselves."

Corporal Mooted For Provincials

TORONTO, Nov. 27—(CP)—Creation of the rank of Corporal in the Ontario Provincial Police is under consideration, Attorney - General Gordon Conant announced today. Such a rank would be given on merit and seniority to officers in posts where more than two provincial constables are located.

At present the provincial force has sergeants and inspectors but no intermediate rank between the constables and sergeants. Mr. Conant said this system is not very satisfactory, citing the example of the post at Kirkland Lake which has four men who are required to report to headquarters at Haileybury. "In police or military work there should always be a commanding officer when there are more than two men concerned," he added.

BIG FOUR PLAYERS CLAIM ELEVEN SPOTS IN EASTERN ALL-STARS

Reynolds Given Spot Among Eastern Stars

TORONTO, Nov. 27 — (CP). — The Interprovincial Union, long the dominant force in Eastern football, retains that position easily in the balloting for The Canadian Press All-Eastern teams which were announced today.

With a lone exception, Syd Reynolds of Toronto Balmy Beach, the Big Four players who previously had been selected for that union's mythical squad make up the All-Eastern first team. The second team is made up of 10 from the O.R.F.U. All-Stars with two outsides from the Interprovincial.

There was opportunity for the writers and coaches to move outside the previous selections in marking their ballots for the All-Eastern clubs. They gave scattered votes to many, but only Ottawa's Tony McCarthy got enough to oust one of the men picked before. Jim Butler of Sarnia was dropped.

With this exception, the voters were almost as one in agreement that the men good enough for the union teams were good enough for the All-Eastern. They were just as firm in their decision that only Reynolds, the "Old Professor" who came out of retirement this season, should break into the Big Four lineup.

Test On Saturday

There is an immediate test of the experts' wisdom at hand. In Toronto Saturday, Balmy Beach, which has six men on the second team and Reynolds on the first, plays Ottawa Rough Riders in the opener of a two-game series for the Eastern championship. Six riders are on the first team.

Little Andy Tommy, leader of the Riders in their drive to the Big Four championship, got another overwhelming tribute to his great work in the All-Eastern voting. All the 15 selectors of the first team marked his name, and 14 of them put him at flying wing.

His teammate, Sam Sward, got the other vote and 10 more, seven of them for the secondary-half position, with Tony Golab receiving 14, Bobby Coulter of Toronto 12, and Gord Noseworthy of Montreal five for the other backfield position. Balmy's Frank Seymour, ranking plunger in the O.R.F.U., got five votes for secondary half, but Sward had this position tied up.

Reynolds, who was lost to Beaches for the remainder of the season because of a sudden appendectomy last week, was given 10 votes for one of the outside jobs, a total exceeded on the line only by Dave Sprague of Ottawa and tied by Hamilton's great centre, Doug Turner. But on the line, too, there was no question of who the selectors wanted and where they wanted them to play.

The Line-ups

Canadian Press All-Eastern football teams:

FIRST TEAM—Andy Tommy, Ottawa, flying wing; Tony Golab, Ottawa, half; Gord. Noseworthy, Montreal, half; Sam Sward, Ottawa, half; (Secondary Defence) Bobby Coulter, Argos, quarterback; Doug. Turner, Hamilton, snap; George Fraser, Ottawa, inside; Len Staughton, Argos, inside; Dave Sprague, Ottawa, middle; Bunny Wadsworth, Ottawa, middle; Syd Reynolds, Balmy Beach, outside; Bernie Thornton, Argos, outside.

Fritzie Zivic Whips Beaudin

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 27—(AP).—Welterweight champion Fritzie Zivic scored a technical knockout over Ronnie (Frenchy) Beaudin of Vancouver and Montreal after two minutes and 18 seconds of the third round in their scheduled 10-round, non-title bout in Buffalo's New Memorial Auditorium last night. Zivic weighed 149 pounds, Beaudin 140½.

Referee Emmet Ryan of Albany stopped the bout as Zivic rushed his opponent for the kill.

Zivic carried the fight all the way, punishing the Western Canada champion with vicious lefts to the head and rights to the body.

In the final round, the youngest of the five fighting Zivic brothers crushed his opponet with a two-fisted barrage that had the French-Canadian practically out on his feet.

In stopping the fight, Ryan said Beaudin was in no condition to continue.

"He might have been hurt seriously," Ryan commented.

Although still on his feet, Beaudin showed the effects of the title-holder's vicious attack. His nose was bleeding freely, and he had several cuts about the head.

Zivic escaped without a mark.

There were no knockdowns. Beaudin appeared far outclassed as he covered his head with both hands as the champion flailed with lefts and rights. Zivic's most devastating blows came in the third round when he backed Beaudin into his own corner and blasted away with lefts and rights.

The champion started blood flowing from the Canadian's nose in the first minute of the fight, flicking accurately with his left hand. From then on, it was simply a matter of pounding his way to victory.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Many of the experts are inclined to discount the chances of Balmy Beach in the championship series with Ottawa Rough Riders on the ground that Alex Ponton's team had no real opposition in their own group and therefore their string of eight wins in a row can be written off as unimportant. That line of reasoning overlooks the fact that the Bammies cleaned up the Argos in an exhibition game and that in the first exhibition tilt of the season they were only beaten 10 to 0 by Riders at the Capital. Ottawa are not much better than they were then; in fact their record since has been marred by two or three sloppy games. On the other hand the Beach club has unmistakably improved. The addition of Don Crowe to their lineup added strength and such players as Drinkwater and Tunnicliffe, comparatively unknowns in early September have developed into stars.

* * * * * *

Our advice is not to sell the Beaches short. They are a stronger football machine than any fans imagine. Unless they develop stagefright, their tackling brigade is going to prove about the toughest Andy Tommy and Company have encountered. Eddie Thompson, one of the best runners in the game has found it difficult to make much progress against the Beaches this season and fleet and shifty as they are Tommy and Daley will not find the going easy. The Beach line has been stubborn too in stopping plunges and as far as forward passing goes Ottawa will probably discover that the Bammies' pass interception is about as effective as anything they have encountered this season. In addition the Beach kicking is better than the Argos brand of booting and Frankie Seymour is a better line plunger than the Oarsmen had to throw against the Ottawa tanks. In brief, Ponton's club should prove harder all around to knock off than were the in-and-out Argonauts.

* * * * * *

Ottawa supporters should remember that history has a habit of repeating itself and recall that ten years ago this Saturday Balmy Beach were in exactly the same spot. As O.R.F.U. winners they were matched with Hamilton Tigers and the 1930 critics did not give them a chance to beat the famous Bengals. Incidentally the same reasoning was followed by the experts. "Balmy Beach has not played a tough team all season," one sports writer pointed out and his colleagues all agreed that the O.R.F.U. title holders were out of their class. Yet the Bammies whose lineup included the well known Ted Reeve and Ab Box who was just a youngster went out on the Saturday and surprised the sporting world by defeating the Tigers 8 to 5. Hamilton were sparked by Pep Leadley and had such stars as Sprague, Timmins, Denman and Cap Fear on the line but the Beach club treated them as if they were just a bunch of fellows named Joe.

The Big Game Is Off—Permanently

The football public will be more disappointed than surprised at the announcement that there will be no West vs. East clash this season. Technically the Western winners had forfeited their right to play for the C.R.U. championship when the Western conference decided to adhere to its own code of rules. That attitude put Winnipeg definitely out of the running so far as an official Canadian championship series was concerned. An unofficial clash between the Bombers and the Eastern winners would have been an interesting spectacle but it would have had no other standing than that and with the C.R.U. authorities frowning on the proposed exhibition game the refusal of both Ottawa Rough Riders and Balmy Beach to participate in the event of their winning the Eastern honors has been expected by many fans.

Ned Vitarelli and Don Coughlin, Peterborough's gifts to the 1940-41 Baltimore Orioles are doing quite nicely according to newspapers in the Maryland city. Vitarelli was out of the lineup for a few games with an injured knee but is back in action now and is going great guns. New York Times says that he sparked the Baltimore attack, getting two goals in a recent game in which the Orioles defeated the New York Rovers 5 to 3, although it was a trifle surprising to have the peppery Peterborough lad referred to as a "veteran right winger." A Baltimore paper says of Vitarelli: "He has been an important man with the Orioles' squad for two years and is one of the best skaters and stickhandlers in camp." As for Coughlin who is making his debut in the Eastern League, a Baltimore sports writer says: "One of the outstanding Oriole rookies is Don Coughlin, a forward sent here for seasoning by the Hershey Bears. Coughlin is showing his mettle on a front line with Carl Ripley and Ken Partis, two Eastern League stars."

up with the sports writers when there is an argument on, but at that candor compels the statement that 'Red' Foster, radio sports commentator made a good job last night of taking the hide off Andy Lytle, sports columnist. Lytle had printed something that the red-topped airwaves man thought was disparaging about Eastern football and especially about the Argos and Foster was hot under the collar. He quoted some of Andy's raves about professional hockey especially as played by the Leafs and then sarcastically told the sports writer that some of his hockey heroes could actually play three minutes at a time without looking over to the bench for relief. The first round goes to Mister Foster, folks.

Predictions Turn Sour

Outside of the fact that both games went directly opposite to the way this column called them our predictions as to the outcome of Tuesday night's N.H.L. clashes were about perfect. There is an old story about the ball fan who died and didn't go to heaven. When he was told there was a ball game every day in the place in which he landed he said: "This can't be hell" and he was told that it certainly was because the home team lost every game. That has been Boston's expefience so far this season and the Bruin fans have yet to see Art Ross's mighty club win a game. They were beaten last night by 3 to 2 by the Canadiens and big Jack Portland, who once played for the Bruins had the satisfaction of potting the goal that defeated his old teammates.

* * * * * *

Toronto Maple Leafs took a firmer grip on first place and got a lot of satisfaction as well in defeating Lester Patrick's Rangers 4 to 2 at Madison Square Gardens. That win wipes out the slap in the eye the Leafs took from the classy Rangers in the opening game of the season. Leafs, with Apps and Drillon going great guns and accounting for three of the four goals were always in front; in fact they scored the first three counters, and held off the New Yorkers' frantic efforts to even up the argument later on. As was the case last season, the Rangers are slow in hitting the top of their form and the absence of Coulter isn't assisting them very much. Meanwhile Detroit and Chicago, counted on to finish behind the first three have been making hay.

A Mothers' Gestapo?

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(AP)—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, 81-year-old veteran of the women's suffrage movement, said Monday night that "perhaps what we most need is an international mothers' gestapo whose business it will be to hunt out the world empire dreamers in infancy" and use a spanking machine on them.

She urged women attending the Women's Centennial Congress which commemorates a century of organized effort to end discrimination against women, "to make the aim of the next 100 years' plan the abolition of war."

Leafs Defeat Hawks To Retain Top Position

The high-geared Toronto Maple Leafs maintained their hold on first place in the National Hockey League by defeating the Chicago Black Hawks 4 to 2 in a fast and rough game at the Chicago stadium. Picture shows Goalie Paul Goodman of the Black Hawks making a save in the second period.

Roger Peckinpaugh Decrees Curfew For Indians

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—All good Indians will be in their tepees by midnight next summer. Those who aren't will feel the heavy hand of Roger Peckinpaugh, the new chief of the club, on their wallets and maybe elsewhere.

That's one rule I'm going to be really tough about," Peck says in talking of how he means to manage the complaining Clevelands next year. 'I figure that if the players are in by 12 they're pretty sure not to get into trouble."

Poker Permitted

Peck means to enforce the non-drinking law, too, but says he will permit poker, something Oscar Vitt wouldn't.

Friends who insist no Indian will pour plenty of firewater, rowdy around all night, or otherwise disturb the peace of the club with Peck in charge, recall how he cracked down on Wes Ferrell when the big pitcher kicked over the traces of 1932. Ferrell was suspended for 10 days and fined $1,000.

Of course, the front office force didn't rub out the punishment of Ferrell then the way it did when Vitt sought to fine and suspend some of his most troublesome performers last summer.

Appointment Praised

Peck is being praised, incidentally, for reappointing Luke Sewell, as coach, and hiring Earl Whitehill, the former pitcher, as his other aide. He might have picked friends for the job, as managers often do, but made the selections entirely because he thought Sewell and Whitehill were best fitted to help the team.

"I know what Sewell can do because I've seen him do it; there isn't a better coach of pitchers around," he says. "I know Whitehill hasn't had any experience as a coach, but he's one of the smartest baseball men in the business. I know he's hot-tempered, but there's nothing wrong with that—when he's working on our side."

Peck doesn't want to be reminded of what did and didn't happen last year, but he will be —by the fans in foreign towns as well as the opposition once the season starts. The Indians took a terrible riding last year from the moment they rebelled against Vitt, and the words will be even warmer next season because of the way they flopped and because of what happened to Vitt.

Two-Game Playoff Has Cut Beach Squads' Chances

TORONTO, Nov. 27 — (CP). — Coach Alex Ponton thinks the chances of his Toronto Balmy Beach club, Ontario Rugby Football Union champions, against Ottawa, Interprovincial Union champions, in the Eastern Rugby Football Final are lessened by a recent Canadian Rugby Union edict extending the playoff to two games instead of the usual one. But last night he said, "If we get a dry field we'll show 'em some football."

Sitting in the Beach dressing room brushing snow from his shoulders and knocking slush from his boots after a workout cut short by a blizzard, Ponton said he thought his club would have a better chance is the final was one game because the weather is likely to be better November 30 than December 7.

The first game of the two-game total-points series will be played here next Saturday, the second in Ottawa December 7.

"No telling what kind of weather we'll get in Ottawa for the second game," he said. "And I'm not sure how my club would go under bad playing conditions."

Three Reasons Why

He has an interest in this Ottawa series stronger than the natural will to win. Firstly, of course, he'd like to see his team proven the best. That's expected, in a coach.

Secondly, if Beaches beat Ottawa Ponton will be one of the select few coaches whose teams have won a Canadian Rugby Union championship twice. For with the west barred because it didn't play C.R.U. rules this season, the C.R.U. crown and the Grey Cup goes to the winner of the Eastern title.

Thirdly, Ross Trimble, Ottawa coach, is an old Balmy Beacher. He played on Ponton's Dominion champion Beaches in 1930. In 1927 Ponton was quarterback for Beaches, Trimble a middle wing.

"The trouble with me right now is that I don't know exactly what this club of mine can do. We were unbeaten and untied in the O.R.F.U. this year and we didn't have to open up.

"But I'll tell you this. After beating Sarnia, this outfit of mine won't be stampeded by the Ottawa line. That Sarnia line was tougher than we'll see in Ottawa. And as for backfields, well"...he hesitated..."I wouldn't trade Frank Seymour for Tony Golab!"

Just An Owl

CASSVILLE, Mo., Nov. 27—(AP)—A weird nightly screech chilled residents of the Oak Ridge community. Hunting parties beat the hills. Some hunters claimed they saw a huge beast — possibly a panther. Mothers kept children indoors at night and men carried guns. Then they found the screecher—an unusually large owl.

Beginning December 1, Spaniards must be through with lunch by 2.30 and with dinner by 9.30. Theatres must close by midnight and bars and night spots by 1 a.m. Private home parties cannot continue past 1.

The Hon. Vincent Massey Trophy, donated by the Canadian High Commissioner to London, was presented to the winners by Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, Commander of the 1st Division.

Plaques also were presented to the players on the winning team and to the runners up. The plaques were donated jointly by the Auxiliary Services organizations—the Canadian Legion, the Salvation Army, Y.M.-C.A., and Knights of Columbus.

After the presentation ceremony, a five-inning exhibition game was played and the Troop Carrying Company trimmed the R.C.A. team 18-1.

The Sports Round-Up

A Boston paper had this to say about the coming Louis-McCoy fight at the Boston Garden: "It would be more sporting and even sholer if Louis and McCoy would stage a three-round exhibition with the large pillows. That way Bostonians would have a chance to see Louis in action."

Along golf's winter circuit they're wondering whether Ben Hogan will be as tough to talk to as he was after leading last winter's money winners.

Jack Portland, Canadiens, whose unassisted goal gave Montreal a 3-2 victory over Boston Bruins.

Roy Conacher, Boston, who scored his fifth goal of the season in the game against Canadiens, earning a tie with four other players for goal-getting honors in the N.H.L.

Gordie Drillon and Syl Apps, Toronto, who continued their great two-man combination as Maple Leafs triumphed 4-2 over New York Rangers. Drillon marked up two goals, his fourth and fifth of the season, while Apps got one goal, his fifth, and an assist.

Bryan Hextall, Rangers, who tallied once and helped in another goal against Maple Leafs.

Canadiens Beat Bruins Out Of Cellar

TORONTO, Nov. 27—(CP). — It isn't worth any money in the bank in itself, nor does it mean that the Stanley Cup is stowed away safely, but Toronto Maple Leafs' feat of defeating every other team in the National Hockey League in such rapid order must rate today as the outstanding bit of work in the still-young season.

Here it is just 25 days after the start of the schedule and the Leafs have toppled all six other clubs in a drive that has brought seven victories in nine games. Only two teams, Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers, have been able to set down the Leafs and they have been the last two victims of the Torontonians.

The Leafs filled out their victory-over-everybody hand last night by defeating Rangers 4-2 at New York in the second meeting of the season between the two teams. The victory was sweet because Rangers had opened the league schedule on November 2 with a 4-1 victory in Toronto over the Leafs.

As Leafs shot out into a four-point lead over the second-place Detroit Red Wings, who were idle last night, Montreal Canadiens bounced out of the league cellar and into a fifth place tie with Rangers by defeating Boston Bruins, 3-2. Rangers, however, have played three games less than Canadiens.

Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon, probably as good a two-man combination as can be found in the N.H.L., set the pace for the Leafs. Drillon fired two goals while Apps counted one and helped in one of Drillon's. The other Toronto goal went to the veteran Gus Marker, oldest man on the team at 33.

They Go To Town.

The Leafs had to wait until the second period before they broke into the scoring column, but then they went to town with Apps, Marker and Drillon counting in order before Bryan Hextall fired the first Ranger goal late in the session. Drillon got his second goal shortly after the start of the third period and Alf Pike scored for Rangers near the end of the game.

Canadiens, who always seem to be able to fare well against the Bruins, won on goals by Hector (Toe) Blake, Johnny Quilty and Jack Portland, big defenceman obtained recently from Chicago Black Hawks and once a Bruin. Roy Conacher and Eddie Wiseman scored for the Bruins.

Portland's goal was only the ninth of his N.H.L career, now going into its seventh year, but it proved an important one as it won the game for the Flying Frenchmen. Portland had his best goal-getting season in 1938-39 with the Bruins when he scored four times.

Apps, with his goal and assist, drew into a first-place tie with Syd Howe of Detroit among N.H.L. point-makers. Both have 10 points, Apps from five goals and an equal number of assists, and Howe from four goals and six assists.

Apps also is tied with four other player, including Drillon, for the lead among goal-getters. Others with five tallies for the season are Tony Demers of Canadiens, George Allen of Chicago and Roy Conacher of Boston.

East-West Battle Hopes Fail To Go Through

TORONTO, Nov. 27—(CP) — The general public had accepted today the fact that there will be no East-West football game this year, as announced by Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, here last night. Earlier yesterday he said he would try to organize an all-star team to meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Western champions, here December 14 but finally that idea was dropped also.

He said, "It is with bitter disappointment that I make this announcement. We found enough patriotic players in Eastern Canada ready and willing to co-operate by meeting the Bombers. However, we felt in justice to ourselves and the public that nothing short of a game between the Bombers and the Eastern champions would do."

His announcement ended weeks of speculation regarding the possibilities of the game. Originally, teams had been asked to agree to a meeting of Eastern and Western champions, with the proceeds to go to war charities in the East and West. The S.S.L. president believed the game would contribute $10,000 to the war effort at home.

But Eastern clubs and the Canadian Rugby Union refused to play the game. Balmy Beach said a few weeks ago it would play, but withdrew the offer Tuesday. Ottawa held out for C.R.U. jurisdiction over the game, and the C.R.U. voted in refusal.

Winnipeg Cleared.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 27 — (CP). — Manager Joe Ryan of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, commenting today on abandonment of negotiations for an East-West football game, said the Winnipeg club "can retire from the scene with a clear conscience."

Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, announced in Toronto last night that "the Canadian Rugby Union has most thoroughly and most successfully tossed every obstacle in the path" of his efforts to arrange a game in Toronto December 7 between Eastern and Western champions, net proceeds to go toward purchase of sports equipment for Canadian troops.

Ryan, speaking on behalf of the Winnipeg club, said:

"The officers, executive and players of the club can retire from the scene with a clear conscience.

"One thing we would have made clear is that at no time has the Winnipeg club endeavored to put anyone on the spot. It was our original intention, if we won in the West, to challenge the Eastern winner to settle the issue as to which was the best football club in Canada.

"The course of events has taken that out of our hands. We were approached to play an Eastern team, preferably the Eastern champions, the proceeds to go to auxiliary war services. We agreed, have assumed a lot of unnecessary expense in keeping the team in training, and we were willing to play any club on a bare expense basis."

Ryan referred to the C.R.U. ruling which prevented the Western champions from participating in an official Dominion final because Western rules differ from the C.R.U. code. The C.R.U. also refused to sanction the unofficial game.

Havelock Ladies Spend Busy Day On Sewing

HAVELOCK, Nov. 27 — (ENS).—The Red Cross Society met on Monday afternoon in the Council Chamber at 2.30 o'clock, with an attendance of 30 members, and the president, Mrs. M. McLauchlin, in the chair.

In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Charles Taylor, Mrs. Clare Price acted in that capacity.

The following committee, to take charge of cutting, was re-appointed for another year: Mesdames Easterbrook, Roberts, Green, McCutcheon and Anderson, with Mrs. Easterbrook and Mrs. Colquohoun as a buying committee.

The afternoon was spent in quilting, labelling socks, pyjamas and refugee articles, and making bandages and compresses.

The secretary was asked to write for more Red Cross labels.

On Friday night, Nov. 29, the Ladies of Belmont Women's Institute are putting on a concert in the Havelock town hall, in aid of the Red Cross. The members of the Red Cross here will take charge of selling tickets and will also look after the selling of candy.

The following article was read from a Red Cross paper:

"From September, 1939 to October 31, 1940, the Canadian Red Cross has issued 102,667 articles to the army, navy, air forces and merchant marine, at an Eastern Canadian port. These supplies included 8,306 leather and wool caps, 2,640 caps and Balaclava helmets, 15,597 leather and wool mitts, 10,463 scarves, 31,167 pair socks, 16,591 suits of underwear, 8,394 sweaters, 9,104 windbreakers, as well as blankets, hospital sheets and pyjamas."

The next meeting will be held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday, instead of Monday, of next week.

on a non-interest basis. The debt, he suggested, would be liquidated after the war from a sinking fund established by taking a percentage of Canada annual gold production.

Inflation, dealt with by D. C. Abbott (Lib. Montreal-St. Antoine-Westmount), was depicted as the most confused way to meeting the cost of war, since neither its results not its incidence could be calculated. The cost of war, after all, was determined by the extent and intensity of the war, not by the method of its financing.

In a speech which had the House alternately rocking with laughter and deeply serious, Mr. Cruickshank criticized the Opposition and Government alike. He declared members of parliament should be ashamed of themselves for allowing the Government to hire boys and girls for the Civil Service at $55 a month.

Can't Live On $55 A Month

Because he lived in a room—"because every apartment is taken by these dollar-a-year men"—he ate in restaurants and saw girls who worked for the government breakfasting on a cigarette and coffee and having a "coke" and cigarette for supper. Some of the $30,000 treasury officials should be told people could not live on $55 a month.

Opposition speakers objected to the 30-day military training period, he said, but no one had ever claimed he could make a soldier in 30 days. From his experience overseas he knew there were some men who couldn't be made into soldiers in four years.

There had been complaints, too, of lack of personal equipment for the army. After being in the army for years and out of the army for years, he said he still had only two shirts.

More seriously, he advocated Parliament being held in almost continuous session for the duration of the war, to perform its democratic duty of giving guidance to the nation, as had been suggested by Prime Minister Winston Churchill, "probably the greatest living statesman, present company excepted."

Mr. Cruickshank advised the government to consider the military value of a good trans-Canada highway, which the country lacked at present. If "a certain country" went to war with Canada, the two railroads through the Rocky Mountains would be put out of action in short order—and there was no alternative highway by which supplies could be taken to the Pacific Coast. A few million dollars might well be spent on that.

Returning to military training, he said he was "tired of hearing about these poor boys in the factory," many of whom were making more money than they had ever made before while the boys who enlisted got $1.30 a day.

That Oil Pipe Line

Another item which might be given active attention was an oil pipeline from Turner Valley to the Pacific coast, he said.

In his speech, Mr. Castleden deplored the "gearing of big business into government officialdom" in the various controllers enlisted from finance and industry.

"The same tactics were followed in Great Britain and they failed," he warned. He wondered whether big business had repented since last year when "it refused to touch our contracts."

"Has it suddenly decided that profits are to be only secondary from now on?" he asked.

"We do not believe in these sudden conversions; they never last. But we will have to remember that that (profit) motive must go, if we are going to be successful."

Canada ultimately would have to do as Britain has done—take over the essential industries and place them under efficient control.

An echo of Conservative Leader Hanson's criticism of the Ogdensburg meeting last August between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King was heard from Paul Martin (Lib., Essex East).

Mr. Hanson was quoted as having said the Ogdensburg conversations were "blatant publicity" for conversations on joint defence which had been opened by the Conservative administration prior to 1935 but had been kept secret.

If Mr. Hanson's remarks represented his real views, it was evident that he failed to grasp the true significance of the efforts being made to erect a "bulwark" against dictatorship aggression on the American continent, Mr. Martin said.

Ontario Singled Out.

Turning to the forthcoming Dominion-Provincial conference on the Rowell-Sirois report, Mr. Martin said Ontario seemed to be singled out for special reference, for reasons not clear to him. There was the suggestion that Ontario was unwilling to co-operate.

He said he believed he spoke for the vast majority of the people of Ontario, certainly of southwestern Ontario, when he asserted they were anxious that the conference would result in a common understanding, as a result of which Canada could go on with greater unity.

He trusted the men attending the Dominion - Provincial Conference would place themselves in the position of those who framed Confederation.

Ontario, the largest province in Canada, was as interested as any province in seeing that Confederation was not to be destroyed or disunited.

He trusted that the conference at least would carry out the essentials of some of the Rowell-Sirois Commission's recommendations.

Three Main Keys

Three factors were essential to effective war activity:—

1. National unity.
2. Reduction of the money cost of ordinary government function to a minimum.
3. Opportunity to create conditions for industrial production to serve war needs.

The recommendations of the Rowell-Sirois Commission largely met these essentials, he submitted Above the interests of the provinces came the interests of Canada. He was confident the country at large wanted to see the collection of income, corporation and inheritance taxes and unemployment relief handled by a single authority.

"As much as we love our province, we love Canada much more," he said.

Mr. Martin said those questioned Canada's war and peace aims should realize that the first task of the democracies was to destroy the power of Hitler and Mussolini. After that would come the task of building a world system that would ensure the rights of the common people and make it impossible for any one person to plunge an innocent nation into misery and death.

Robinson, of Lismore, New South Wales, a kangaroo as a memento when he and a number of other Australian students received their pilot's wings at No. 2 service flying training school, Ottawa.

Builders Unable To Match Losses Cross Reveals In Call For U.S. Ships

LONDON, Nov. 27.—(CP)—Ronald Cross, minister of shipping, said in a broadcast last night that "the rate at which we are building ships now does not make up for our losses."

He said that while Britain's shipyards were working at capacity on merchant vessels, part of the nation's facilities must be devoted to naval construction and repairs.

"We are therefore anxious," he said, "to get more ships built overseas and we are looking primarily to the shipyards of the United States, since by themselves the resources of the Empire are not enough.

"We must have ships—our life here and the issues which hang on our having enough ships are so tremendous that we cannot make too sure of our shipping position in the months and years which may pass before we have made victory secure. We must have a safety margin."

Mr. Cross said losses since the start of the war had averaged those of the last war. They were 20,000 tons weekly until June, afterwards 60,000 tons weekly due to the enemy's control of the coasts of France, the Low Countries, and Norway.

While the number of merchantmen flying the British flag was the same as at the outbreak of war, largely thanks to the acquisition of 8,000,000 tons of Allied vessels, Mr. Cross said "the power of import goods is much reduced" "because we can no longer import iron ore from Sweden or steel from Norway, Belgium and France, or food from Holland."

"All these things have to be fetched from across the world," he said.

Second Key City

The Germans apparently concentrated on certain areas and blasted them to rubble, as they did to a large area of Rotterdam in their now-historic attack on that city last Spring.

Last night as the raiders came over the West England city they were met with the shock of a fierce barrage. They unloaded hundreds of incendiaries on a golf course, where the bombs flared and sputtered out. Extent of the high-explosive damage was thought to have been small.

The London area got the welcome "Raiders passed" signal before midnight. Hostile planes were over the Northeast, Southwest, Northwest and East Midlands, but not in great numbers. It was suggested that many northern French airdromes were waterlogged, bogging down German air takeoffs.

Come One a Minute

In their attack on the western city the raiders came for a while at the rate of one a minute in a chain attack.

In London itself, soon after the regular night alert sounded last night, the approaching raiders were fixed momentarily in the glare of the searchlights; a heavy barrage went up, and the first wave turned back.

Later, a single plane glided over the city and several houses tumbled under a salvo of five high-explosive bombs, while incendiaries fell in clusters. Before 11 p.m. the all-clear sounded here.

During the daylight hours London had but one alarm—and that a brief one in the afternoon. In the series of dogfights in which British fighter planes defended the air lanes leading to the capital, four German planes were shot down. No British losses were reported.

Obituary

HARRY SMITH.

MARMORA, Nov. 27 — (ENS)—Attended by a large number of relatives, the funeral of the late Harry Smith of Deloro was held at St. Paul's Church on Tuesday afternoon. The rector, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell officiated.

The pall-bearers were: R. A. Elliott, A. V. Yates, C. H. Buskard, H. A. McNally, N. A. Kilpatrick, and H. O. Loveless. There was a profusion of floral emblems which bespoke the esteem in which the late Mr. Smith was held.

Unoccupied Zone Pleads For Grain

LYON, France, Nov. 27.—(AP)—An appeal for 50,000 carloads of wheat to be sent from the German-occupied zone of France into the unoccupied zone was made yesterday by Pierre Caziot, Minister of Agriculture.

Addressing a meeting of the Federation of Agricultural Syndicates, he said the unoccupied zone was hardest hit by the low 1940 harvest and was short 8,000,000 quintals (about 29,328,000 bushels) of wheat.

The unoccupied zones also is threatened with a stock feed shortage of 30,000,000 quintals, he said because of reduced production of oats and barley and the loss of normal imports.

Although the lack of motor fuel "aggravates the need for horses," Caziot said, the number of horses has been diminished from 623,000 in 1938 to less than 500,000 now.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

TWO ON A BICYCLE

Neil Stanley was reminded in police court this morning that carrying two persons on a bicycle built for one is against the law. A written plea of guilty to that offence resulted in a fine of $2 and 75 cents costs.

NEW GUN ARRIVES.

Members of the 4th Field Battery, R.C.A., have a 75 millimetre artillery piece for training purposes now. The gun of British make was obtained from the States and is similar in design to the British field piece, the 18-pounder. It is new, never having been fired.

NOT YET.

Skating enthusiasts in Peterborough will be none too pleased at the snow present. This week they were heard speaking of the possibility of hockey on the Canal at an early date, but with the coming of so much snow, their chances will become less promising.

COULDN'T GET THROUGH

A traffic charge laid by Provincial Traffic Officer L. A. McClure against Charles Nash of Toronto had to be enlarged for a week when called this morning. Nash telephoned that he was unable to get through from Toronto for the hearing.

ILLEGAL PARKING

Illegal parking, either in a bus stop or too near a fire hydrant or too long in prohibited areas caused fines of $2 and 75 cents costs to a number of motorists in police court this morning. John A. Northey, W. Middleton, J. K. Dawson and L. Anderson were among the victims.

KNOCKED DOWN BY CAR

Miss K. Vincent, of the office staff of the Ontario Marble Company received contusions on the lips and nose when she was struck and knocked down by a car driven by W. Pollard of 47½ Hunter street, while crossing Hunter street at Water street at 10 o'clock today Miss Vincent, who was not badly hurt, was taken to her home by the driver involved.

FULL-TIME DENTIST.

Dr. S. J. Graham, who for the past two months has been acting as part-time dentist for the Board of Education, was on Tuesday afternoon appointed to the full-time post by the Committee on Appointments. Dr. Graham will start as full-time dental officer on January 2. His salary was set at $3,000, with the dental office being open five days a week and Saturday morning and during the Christmas and Easter vacations.

AND IT'S WINTER.

Members of the Prince of Wales Rangers are hot under the collar to-day, they have learned that "Canada's Young Defenders" have been issued two-button oversnoes and winter headgear. The volunteers in the Rangers are looking within their own ranks, and see that more than a few of their own numbers are still dressed in the light summer, cotton drill battledress.

CRUEL WORLD.

Peterborough stock brokers are marvelling today at the heartlessness of an investment conscious world. With the death of the man whose name it bears, shares of O'Brien stock have become more and more valuable since the market opened this morning. Selling first at around 81c, at the time of writing it was selling at $1.00, with prospects for the afternoon bright from the point of view of the shareholder.

SPEEDERS FINED

Driving too fast on Water street proved a rather expensive operation for a number of motorists who entered written pleas of guilty in traffic court this morning to speeding on that thoroughfare and were fined $5 and costs each. They included George L. Pitt-Smith of Peterborough, accused of driving at 46 miles an hour, R. Stewart, Peterborough, charged with a 42-mile-an-hour clip, Harold Trethewey, Peterborough, clocked according to police at 48 miles and John Elliott, R. R. 4, doing a neat 46 miles, according to the indictment.

SWIMMING EXHIBITION

This will be a gala night in the swimming pool of the Y.W.C.A. when the Silver Pinettes will put on an exhibition of swimming and the Y.M.C.A. will send a swimming team to take part in the affair. The proceeds will be devoted to assisting British victims of the Nazi bombing raids and a big crowd is expected.

A LONG ADJOURNMENT

Because the woman who was hurt in the accident is still unable to appear in court a charge of careless driving against Raymond Marks, of Peterborough, 17, was again adjourned in police court this morning. On Crown Attorney McElderry's suggestion and with the consent of the accused the hearing was postponed for three weeks until December 18.

ONE LOT LEFT.

Manning Avenue near the Normal School has shown great building activity during the past two years, and now there is only one building lot left on the street, while two years ago there was only one house. Six new homes are being built on the street now, and four or five went up last year or early this year. Walter Mortlock, O. J. Hayward, and Fred Rowan have contracts under way there now.

PUTTING IT ACROSS.

Talk about results and doing the job, and all that sort, seeing that in the adopted ways of men's affairs there must be talk about such things—look what the Examiner did down at the Alparka corner, according to this morning's observations. A piece was published yesterday about a little developing custom down in that salient section of the city, men being in such a hurry to work that in helping themselves to a morning paper that they were overlooking the item of equivalence end equation, the dropping of three cents in the place of the paper. In that east wind this morning the outdoor self-serve business, just a chance affair that cropped up some how, showed three cents receipts for every paper that had been taken away, an exact balance of things, and presumably, at the very least, an indication that the Examiner's note of the previous circumstances had been read with resulting reminder of the little item of the three cents. And so the service is bound to continue, and things are as they should be.

Midnight Train Two Hours Late

The familiar wares of winter; this oncoming winter of 1941, were exhibited in a preview and also a preblow last night as snow swirled in from the east, scampered about the landscape and the street corners and even the back verandahs, wherever there are such things as surviving back verandahs, by way of celebrating its arrival, and then settled down to the earnest business of making this Peterboro corner of the world look like the night before Christmas.

And not that it was any matter of consequence, that is of cause and effect, several of the local trains kicked over their schedules as if their lines into Peterboro were barred with drifts.

The midnight train from Toronto to Ottawa, due here around 2.30 o'clock, did not arrive until 4.35, a full two hours late, and the morning C.N.R. train from Belleville was an hour late.

At both local stations it was said that the delays were caused by dislocation of the service, elsewhere, chiefly Toronto and to the west of it.

The midnight train carries Ottawa mail from the west. In fact it is the only one from the west heading for the capital during the night, and because of its mail job it has to wait at every connecting point from Toronto westerly. No definite information was received here as to what caused the disturbing of the usual exactness of the rail service.

Delayed Two Hours.

Down at Stocks Bread this morning, the truck to Belleville was at least two hours overdue on its return from the trip which it began last night about eleven o'clock, going first to Lindsay, and then south by way of Port Hope, Cobourg, Trenton, Belleville, Madoc, Marmora and arriving back in Peterboro. The driver is usually back by seven o'clock, but he missed that mark this morning. His chief cause of delay was a condition of holes or ruts in the road, which he said might break springs if if the customary speed was maintained.

Sandy Whitney Retires

Alexander (Sandy) Whitney, well-known Bell Telephone employee in Peterborough, has retired after a lifetime of service with the company.

"Sandy," as he is popularly known, was born in Walkerton and joined the telephone company at Owen Sound under Foreman W. H. Lytle. During World War I he served overseas with the Royal Engineers for four years. That he acquitted himself with distinction his Military Medal bears witness.

Snow For Eskimo Baby

DUBUQUE, Ia., Nov. 27 (AP)—Nature laid down its first heavy snow blanket of the season when an Eskimo baby was born at a hospital here. The baby is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Percy Ipalook, of Point Barrow, Alaska, who are enrolled in the University of Dubuque Theological Seminary.

Bylaw Is Ready To Be Given Final Reading

Approval of the by-law to provide $10,000 for an extension to Nicholls Hospital was intimated to its trustees by members of the Ontario Municipal Board after its session here Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of hearing any representations for and against the project.

The members of the Board were R. S. Colter, K.C., chairman, W. P. Near and Alan Van Every.

Trustees of Nicholls Hospital had applied to the council to borrow $10,000 for a proposed addition to the institution, and the council had given the authorizing by-law two readings, suspending the third until the assent of the Ontario Municipal Board had been received. The meeting here yesterday afternoon followed the usual formality of hearing reasons for the application of the trustees and also any opposition that might arise.

No person appeared in dissent to the expenditure, and the hospital board was represented by C. Frank Kitney, vice-president, E. Bruce Fowler, treasurer, Rev. C. C. Boyter, Harold Baptie, Vincent Eastwood, T. A. Mackay, Dr. J. M. McCulloch, Dr. H. M. Yelland, Chas. Lacheur and others.

The need of additional accommodation was reviewed by Mr. Kitney and other members of the Board, as previously related to the city council, and at the conclusion of the hearing Mr. Colter said that the Board would make its report by letter.

The council was represented by City Clerk Outram and City Solicitor W. F. Huycke, K.C.

Members of the Board expressed a wish to visit the hospital to see the institution for themselves. After that inspection Mr. Colter congratulated the trustees on the general appearance of the institution and the care shown in its maintenance. Their recognition of the need of enlargement was also expresed, and in that connection as a final word of encouragement it was stated that the report to the city council would be in favor of the by-law.

Ald. McCannan Is Retiring?

Alderman McCannan told the Examiner this morning that he had "just about" made up his mind to retire from the municipal service at the end of the year.

"My doctor has been advising me that I would be better out of it from a health standpoint," the chairman of the property committee said. "I feel that I have done my bit as an alderman, and there may be others would want to come along and do likewise. One thing you learn from being an alderman of Peterboro is that a great deal of work, responsibility, attention or whatever it should be called has to be done, far more than the average citizen realizes. I never thought the chairmanship of the property committee made such a demand on a man's time as it does. The work at the incinerator and the maintenance of the city hall requires a lot more time than one would think. I haven't shirked anything as chairman. One job that we did, authorized by the whole council, was fixing up the basement at the city hall, putting in a new stoker furnace and a lot of other work down there, and then finishing it off with the fine job Fred Tuggey did in the chimney.

The public simply cannot know what that means. It is just one of those things the council gets done, but it is only part of the housekeeping and perhaps everybody takes it for granted.. I'll bet you won't see any soot nuisance around the Simcoe street corner this winter."

Pair Are Fined $20 For Disorderly House

Peter Kearns and Mrs. Ada Blackwood who on Monday had pleaded guilty to allowing the upper apartment at 301 King street to be operated as a disorderly house were each fined $20 and 75 cents costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

Charles P. Glover who appeared for Mrs. Blackwood urged leniency in her behalf. "She is the victim of circumstances," defence counsel said. He told the court that she had visitors on Sunday and to entertain them had obtained beer illegally. The party had been drinking beer when the officers entered.

Mrs. Lillian Smith, Norwood, who had pleaded guilty to being found-in was fined $10 and 75 cents costs. Michael Gannon, also charged with being found-in was acquitted when the police offered no evidence in his case.

Women of Germany have been asked to donate their hair, which will be made into socks and clothing for the army.

Rambling Reporter

AN OPTIMIST.

Mike Martino, window cleaner, whose brother Joe was the first war casualty from this city, was doing a bit of philosophising this morning. It was cold, and Mike was washing windows on George street when a friend asked if it wasn't a tough job on a cold day. "It could be a lot worse," said Mike, "for instance I could be working at this in London, England, and if I were I'd know the depression had hit my business" ....at least our windows are still intact in the morning."—McG.

Can You Tell Sailor's Rank By His Coat?

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 27 — (CP). — Canadians are slowly becoming navy-conscious as the nation's fighting fleet expands in numbers of ships and men to meet the needs of war and are learning something of the uniforms and insignia of the service.

Three types of uniforms are worn in the Navy respectively by commissioned officers, petty officers, and ratings having special trade qualifications and by seamen. Ratings are all naval personnel who are not commissioned officers.

The commissioned officers wear a suit of dark blue with double-white collar and black tie. Their rank is indicated by gold bands on the sleeve near the cuff.

If the band is plain and straight it indicates the officer is a permanent Navy man. A wavy band indicates the wearer is a member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve who does full-time naval duty in war but pursues some civilian activity in peacetime. A criss-cross band denotes a member of the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, who works in the merchant marine in peacetime.

Matter of Buttons.

Petty officers and certain other ratings with specialist qualifications wear a uniform somewhat similar to commissioned officers except that their coat has three buttons instead of four.

Their rank and trade qualification is indicated by badges on the cap above the peak, on the sleeve, or on the collar. Signalmen, telegraphists, motor mechanics, engine-men, artificers, shipwrights, writers, victualling assistants, cooks and sick berth hands all rate this uniform.

Finally there is the familiar outfit of wide trousers, jumpers and round cap, worn by all other naval personnel, the seaman. Wearers of this outfit are buglers, ordinary seamen, able seamen, and leading seamen. The next step up from a leading seaman is a petty officer, and the next after that, chief petty officer.

All seamen wearing this uniform wear hat bands stamped with the name of the ship to which they are attached, if they were members of the ship's complement before war started. Since the war hatbands carry only the initials H.M.C.S., and when the old name-bearing hatbands wear out they will be replaced by those not giving the name of the ship.

In summer the Navy changes from blues to whites if the climate warrants it. The commissioned officer's uniform has a coat with a high tight-fitting collar and on it the marks of rank are worn on the shoulder strap instead of on the sleeve as in the case of the standard blue uniform.

During six months of the year, whether in whites or blue, the officer wears a white top to his cap. The dates for wearing it vary in the northern and southern hemispheres. At the same period ratings change from blue to white caps.

An officer's winter greatcoat carries his rank on the shoulder as on his summer whites, instead of on the sleeve, as on the service dress.

Saluting The Flag

TORONTO, Nov. 27 (CP) — School pupils will not be required to salute the flag, the school management committee decided yesterday. The ceremony is not stipulated in department of education regulations and the committee agreed that the school board has no power to add to these.

"There is one proper patriotic demonstration and that is the singing of the National Anthem," said Dr. C. C. Goldring, superintendent of schools.

"I would rather see the flag saluted at some real ceremony once a week than have it perfunctorily done as a matter of form every day, if it is to be done."

Can Drive Miles Without Seeing Anything Amiss In London

C. B. Symonds has received the following letter from a relatives in Surrey: Despite the efforts of our continental friends all our family is still in tact and not very much the worse for our experiences. As I write this we are enjoying our 130th air raid. "Moaning Minnie," as we call it gave four raid alarms today. German raiders have passed overhead and our anti-aircraft guns have been going it trying to stop them getting at the city and the West End. Occasionally an extra big sound means a bomb has been dropped but not necessarily in our vicinity as sound travels a long way at night. We have had bombs within 150 yards of the house but so far not even a broken window. The present attack will last until dawn when we will turn out and be ready for a normal day's work.

A lot of people spend all their evenings and nights in the public shelters. We keep on the ground floor and should things get too noisy we go to our refuge room which is better protected. The alarms go as soon as the enemy has crossed the coast in the daytime and this is taken as the "alert," but work is continued. A look-out man takes up his post and if he sees danger he warns the workers through a loud-speaker system and they go to the shelter. Then the "all-clear" is sounded and you work until another warning comes.

You must not imagine that London is all a heap of ruins. A great deal of damage has been done but you can go for miles without seeing anything amiss. The south and southeast and east have received the worst treatment, but some parts of the West End have been rather badly hit. Our people are taking it very well, and as my sister Daisy says "every bomb dropped makes it more necessary to go on to the end."

Food is quite plentiful and we are not experiencing any hardship on that score although certain commodities are rationed. Transport is difficult at times and letters and parcels may be delayed. The possibility of invasion is more remote than it was a month ago thanks to the R.A.F.

I have joined the Home Guard, a kind of second line of defence, composed of voluntary part-time individuals who feel they ought to be doing something to help the work along. There are two types of home guards, those recruited by the towns and cities and counties, and those recruited by the larger factories to guard the premises. Both are attached to the county regiments and are liable to military discipline. Air raid wardens, first aid workers, demolition squads and firemen are doing wonderful work. Red tape is kept at a minimum and the rapidity with which they arrive at the scene of a bombing is remarkable.

My stamp collection is still my leading hobby and unless it is blown to bits I should get some interesting extensions to it when the war is over and Europe settles down again.

(The writer of the letter served in the last war as a photographer with the Royal Air Force.)

Bombs Sway Shelter Like Waves Rock Ship In Stormy Sea

CENTRETON, Nov. 27 (ENS) — From the bomb area comes a letter filled with what might be called splinters, for it is laden with some of the most descriptive paragraphs to come out of England and the war.

The writer tells of an air raid, during which ten bombs fell on the street on which he lives. "Flame, blast and brick dust was all around us; five bombs fell near us, one in front of our house, and another next door."

"The stones were forced through the door like machine gun bullets, hitting my wife in the face." The writer's two sons were lifted from the floor, and one of them was hurled against the wall. The house next door had been almost completely destroyed, and chaos was all around. Houses and shops were demolished.

The next few days saw more destruction, and refering to Saturday, September 7th, the writer says, "Five hundred bombers, in perfect formation came over and peppered us. Our shelter swayed like a boat in an angry sea, and after the raid there was fire, volumes of smoke, and ruins all around".... "But take it from me, London's ordinary life is continuing, and the best is being made of everything."

With a tribute to the men of the Royal Air Force, the writer tells of the wonderful work being done by them. The London policemen have a tough time too.."but they can take it."

The mother country is drawing comfort from the fact that Canada is behind her, and that the sympathy of the United States is with her.

The qualities of the well known time-bomb, are described in another letter in the same mail, and the fact that the people in England are splendidly bearing up under the extreme pressure being exerted is evident.

The writer tells of an air raid during which a time-bomb fell in the yard next door to her. Residents nearby came to look at the bomb, and thought, from the damage it had done in landing, that it had exploded; soon they were warned to get away from the district; the bomb did explode, it flattened to the ground four houses beside the place where it had fallen. As the letter was written another time-bomb was at the back of the writer's house, and the writer and her relatives had been moved.

In spite of the fact that they are being billeted away from home, and in many cases separated from their loved ones, the people in England are keeping chins up, and as one of the writers puts it: "If Hitler is relying on our being beaten in that way, he is himself beaten 100 per cent."

Fox Is Pulled Out Of Hole By The Tail Bites Hunter As Man Swings It Over His Head

The story is being told of two Ashburnham fox hunters and the peculiar way in which they operate on their expeditions.

The dog was a good one, and he had well performed his duties in the hunt; he had "holed" the fox, and there stood barking until his masters came to find it.

It seems that the fox was not the only occupant of the hole, for in a few minutes he was seen backing out of the hole he had been so anxious to enter, but not motivated by that force usually called free will. A skunk, it is said, was in the hole, and his presence made it untenable from the viewpoint of the fox.

Upon seeing the tail of the animal emerge, one of the men seized it and pulled. It wasn't difficult to extricate the fox, but a tail with a fox on the end of it is a hard thing to manage even under the best of conditions, and with a real live fox, the situation becomes most critical.

The hunter decided that the only way to kill the fox, without giving it a chance to escape, would be to slam it again the ground. This he tried, whirling the fox above and around his head, but-he overlooked the presence of his companion. The fox didn't. On his way around, the fox made a grab at the hunter, who was, so to speak, standing at ease, and made contact. He bit part of the hunter's pants away, and a goodly sized piece of flesh went with it.

Well, the story could have only one ending; the fox was killed after such a mammoth battle, defeat was inevitable, and foxes shouldn't bite people anyway.

New Drill Hall Being Rushed To Completion

Slightly more than four inches of snow and a high wind that piled drifts everywhere failed to interfere to any particular extent with the syllabus of training at the Exhibition Grounds Camp.

Every company was given at least one period of drill out of doors, and one of the three companies, carrying web equipment and rifles knocked off a three-mile route march. The trainees were issued two-buckle goloshes and winter caps this morning and this along with the warm battle dress and greatcoats gave the boys plenty of comfort.

The program includes many lectures and instruction on the care and cleaning of rifles and equipment which can be carried out conveniently in the large lecture huts on the grounds. Company commanders are satisfied that the men can continue th program without interruption unless there is an excessive fall of snow or weather well below the zero mark.

About 30 men reported on sick parade this morning, but a dozen of them wanted treatment for blistered heels, caused from wearing the heavy army boots, which they have not become accustomed to as yet. More than a dozen others had an attack of the common colds, and a few had tonsilitis.

One of the permanent staff of the camp has been taken to the Isolation Hospital and is being treated for measles.

A large group of mechanics and builders are busy raising the superstructure of the large drill hall and when this is completed the routine of the camp will progress even more smoothly. It will take at least ten days before the building is sheeted in, as the superstructure is not completed as yet. The indoor rifle range still need a few finishing touches also.

Trainees Given YMCA Card

With citizens of Peterborough being made familiar with the work of the Y.M.C.A. in foreign fields, it is possible that they will be inclined to overlook the efforts of the Association in Canada. G. H. Hoper of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. has acquainted the Examiner with the nature of the work being done by the "Y" to make life more pleasant for the trainees at the Military Camp for compulsory training here.

Each trainee is given a membership card to the Y.M.C.A. by the Association when he enters his 30-day training period. The ticket he receives is valid until the expiration of his training period. The card gives the trainee full membership privileges, and the reception given the gesture has been extremely gratifying.

Over 150 young men from the Military Training Centre literally invaded the Y.M.C.A. last night, swarming all over the building, lobby, bowling alleys, billiard room and swimming pool. To many of the young men the swimming pool was the big attraction, coming as many of them do from centres where swimming in the winter time is usually "not done." Evidently the advance guard who had explored the "Y" on Saturday and Monday had spread the news that the Y.M.C.A. was worth looking over.

A numebr of the fellows displayed an interest in volleyball which they had never played, and they were invited to come up on Saturday afternoon at 1.30 to try out the game and to see the league games starting at 2.30. Others expressed a desire to learn to swim. Instruction by Gordon Minty will be available on Tuesday and Friday evenings from 7 o'clock to 8.15 p.m.

A basketball team is being talked of amongst those who have played the game in Collegiates in their various home towns. It is hoped that a few games may be arranged with local teams.

Died In England

TORONTO, Nov. 27 — (CP). — Signalman John Booton of the 2nd Candian Division Corps of Signallers who was "injured by enemy action," died on November 19, his brother here, Charles Booton, was informed to-day by a cable from England. Signalman Booton for some years was a Hydro-Electric engineer at Lachute, Que., where he is survived by his widow.

Fish Hatchery At Deer Lake Has Great Year

Quantities of fish distributed in this district from the Deer Lake Hatchery in 1940 reached a staggering total, and the list obtained to-day from Alex. L. Elliott, M.P.P., indicates much of the new stock was fingerling or yearling size.

Pickerel topped the list with 30,200,000 being placed in the waters. This fish tops all others as a table delicacy, and recently there has been a clamor from several sections asking that the bass and maskinonge restocking be supplemented with a generous amount of pickerel fry. The hatchery officials have met the demands of all sections of the country, and the fry was placed out during the proper season.

Maskinonge Fry.

There were 2,345,000 maskinonge fry sent out along with 2,223 maskinonge fingerlings, and this latter quantity represents a big step in the realm of fish culture. There were 99,200 speckled trout yearlings distributed, 245,000 small-mouthed black bass fry, 32,600 fingerlings, and 200 adult bass.

The speckled trout yearlings averaged six inches in length and the 200 black bass set loose in Belmont Lake averaged 3½ pounds in weight.

The hatchery continued to make splendid progress in the propagation of maskinonge to yearling size, despite numerous handicaps which exists because of the carnivorous tendencies of this fish. There were 500 fingerlings, five inches long, placed in Lake Chemong, and the balance of the 2,223 were held at the hatchery until they attained a size of from 9 to 11 inches. These were placed out in different lakes where there is natural protection and ample amount of feed.

Fish culturists and officials of angling associations all over the continent are following with considerable interest the successful experiments in producing maskinonge to fingerling size, when they can be placed in the natural habitat at a time when they can protect themselves. The Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries pioneering this project has advanced far beyond the progress point reached by other fish culture experts. If it can continue to propagate the muskies at the Deer Lake hatchery with the same degree of success and with an increased output, it is likely that fish culturists from all parts of the United States will visit the hatchery to watch the experiments.

The Government started the building of the hatchery in 1938, and it was finished in 1939 and opened in time for the lunge spawning season. The results obtained so far have exceeded the hopes of Government officials.

Maskinonge fingerling five inches long from the Deer Lake Hatchery yhich were placed on exhibit at the Toronto Exhibition attracted considerable interest. Last spring two medium sized Kawartha muskies weighing 20 pounds each from near Lakefield were taken to Brantford and kept in a sanctuary there until the time of the Toronto Exhibition, then they were placed on exhibition.

The greatest of care is used in the rearing of maskinonge fingerlings and more knowledge is being acquired all the time. If the program could be enlarged it would be of even greater value to the entire district.

Tax Inquiry Probe Is Approved

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(Special to The Examiner).—At a luncheon held yesterday in the National Arts Club, attended by a distinguished group of business men, municipal authorities, economists, and others interested in public affairs it was unanimously decided that a United States committee should be set up to co-operate with like committees representing Canada and the United Kingdom, to make a detailed investigation of the system of municipal taxation that has been in extensive use in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa for many years. Under this system, buildings are exempt from taxation, necessary revenues being obtained from an increased tax on socially-created land values. It was further agreed that H. Bronson Cowan, a journalist of Peterborough, Ontario, should be engaged to conduct the investigation. Mr. Cowan's writings on this subject have attracted international attention.

The luncheon was arranged by Harold S. Buttenheim, editor of The American City and president of the Tax Reform League. Those present included George H. Hallett, Jr., Secretary New York Citizens' Union; Dr. Harry W. Laidler, New York City Councilman and Director of the League for Industrial Democracy; Walter McC. Maitland, Citizens' Housing Council; William Allen White, the internationally-known publisher from Kansas, and Chairman of the National League to Help Great Britain Now; Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the Presidency of the United States; Dr. Edwin H. Spengler, Professor of Economics, Brooklyn College; Walter Fairchild, chairman, Graded Tax Committee, City of New York; Albert Playdell, Deputy Commissioner, Department of Purchases, City of New York; Frederick D. Bird, of Dun & Bradstreet; Shelby M. Harrison, Director, Russel Sage Foundation; Miss V. G. Peterson, Secretary, Robert Schalkenbach Foundation, New York; John R. Ellingston, Public Relations, New York, and other representative people.

The luncheon was addressed by Mr. Cowan, whose account of his preliminary investigations of the subject in New Zealand and Australia, was followed with deep interest. At the close, Mr. Cowan was asked numerous questions. He stated that the United Kingdom and Canada already have appointed committees which will co-operate with the United States committee in sponsoring and directing the investigation. Mr. William Allen White and Mr. Buttenheim were appointed to act on the United States committee. Mr. Buttenheim was authorized to complete the formation of the committee, which is to be representative of various national interests. It is desired that the results of the investigation shall be available for use immediately at the close of the war in the hope that the introduction of a more advanced system of municipal taxation, by reviving the depressed construction and allied industries, will provide work for thousands of unemployed.

Mr. Cowan expressed the gratitude which the people of Canada felt toward the people of the United States for their war aid, and especially thanked Mr. White and the committee of which he is chairman for their splendid work in this connection. For many months, William Allen White, one of the best known newspaper editors on this continent, has been giving invaluable leadership to that strong and growing sentiment in the United States for the fullest assistance to Great Britain.

On Tuesday, Mr. Cowan attended a meeting of the New York City Club and today he addressed a luncheon of the Citizens' Union League.

U.S. Navy "Mosquito" Hums Along At Fifty Knots

The PT-12, one of the "mosquito boats" of the U.S. navy, is shown ripping along at about 50 knots with the skyline of Manhattan for a backdrop. These boats carry a deadly sting in the form of four machine-guns in little turrets and four 18-inch torpedo tubes. The turrets may be seen aft of the pilot house. Guns may be fired in any direction. The fleet of 'mosquito boats' is currently based in Brooklyn.

Canadian Soldiers Aid Red Cross To Bring Help To Bombed Areas

A message from Red Cross National Headquarters as to work and program accomplished and looked forward to by the Canadian organization, brought Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Wallace R. Campbell of Windsor, chairman of the Women's War Work committee, left no doubt in the minds of Peterborough women, that the Red Cross is on the job both at home and in Great Britain. Mrs. Campbell, who visited the Red Cross work rooms at two o'clock before coming on to the Y.W.C.A. to address a large open meeting of women, declared herself delighted with the accomplishments of the Peterborough branch, and gave facts and figures as to the variety and amount of aid being sent overseas, pointing out to local workers just what their individual efforts were doing to relieve suffering abroad.

Senator Iva Fallis, who introduced the speaker, referred to Mrs. Campbell's high position in the administration of war work throughout the Dominion by reason of her capacity as national chairman of the War Work committee, and commended her on her "practical outlook and scund common sense." She said that Mrs. Campbell has for a long time given without stint of her time and energy in a great work which daily increases in its importance and urgency. "In these days when it is necessary that Canadian women keep their feet firmly planted on the ground; when it is essential that we must not dissipate our energies, and that we get results from the time and energy we spend, the type of women who occupy key positions in our women's organizations is of paramount importance," Senator Fallis declared.

Mrs. R. H. Turner, president of the local Canadian Red Cross Society, was chairman, and welcomed the large gathering on behalf of the executive of the Peterborough branch. She spoke appreciatively of the way the city had responded to the Red Cross campaign, and expressed the hope that women who have not already done so will visit the Red Cross rooms and see what a great deal of work is being turned out. Although the women of the city and surrounding districts have done a splendid piece of work, there is much to be done and plenty of room for more workers, Mrs. Turner reminded. "We suffer not to fail," she said, "rather let us send out our light, remembering that the words 'Red Cross' mean service."

Soldiers Brought Aid

First to bring aid to the bombed victims of London's East End were Canadian soldiers manning army trucks, who distributed 10,000 bundles and two tons of food from the Canadian Red Cross Society, Mrs. Campbell said, explaining that Canadian Red Cross authorities were able to give instant aid to London's East End on the first day of its severe bombing because they had vast supplies on hand, supplies earmarked for the French refugees. By preparing for one emergency they were able to meet another. Thousands of blankets, in fact 60,000, were distributed among the homeless, and more are ready when required.

Letters of thanks from admirals to ratings have been received by the Red Cross for supplies of warm clothing given to sailors on the high seas. More than $70,000 has been spent on comforts for them since the war began. Mrs. Campbell received a long distance call from Halifax before she left for Peterborough, asking that something be done to rush more knitted garments to the Maritimes for distribution among the sailors. "Just now as winter come again the work on the Eastern port has trebled. During summer work slacks down, but now the cold winds are blowing and the sea is high." She urged women to concentrate on things for sailors. Millions of scarves, helmets, mitts and socks are needed, but most of all seamen's stockings, two-way mittens and long-sleeved sweaters, she said, and asked that Red Cross workers make what was needed and not what they wanted to do. At the request of the regimental officers, the Red Cross has sent comforts to the troops in Iceland.

A new project this Winter will be sending comforts to the women in Britain serving in the Auxiliary forces, an important part of home defence. The goods will be at the disposal of Queen Elizabeth, and knitting instructions will soon be available, Mrs. Campbell told the meeting.

"The Canadian Red Cross Society's quota for garments for Great Britain is 500,000," Mrs. Campbell said, and explained that the Canadian organization is in close touch with the British and the American Red Cross to prevent overlapping.

Gifts of Good Quality.

"We are trying to demonstrate by the quality and the excellence of our gifts that we are standing shoulder to shoulder with the sufferers of this war in civilian England," Mrs. Campbell said. "The clothing we send, all of which is new, will be suitable, of excellent quality and of good style."

Odd jobs which have gone unsung include the setting up of emergency depots for surgical operations, with mobile operating units, in co-operation with the A.R.P. and the St. John Ambulance Association in a Canadian port; complete sterile equipments for emergency operations at the request of the R.C.A.M.C., and the equipment of the Taplow Hospital in England.

"Though we are only human and have made mistakes," Mrs. Campbell remarked, "generally speaking the Canadian Red Cross has accomplished a very good job. We are women of all classes and creeds working under a common banner, and no other organization has a greater opportunity, either nationally or internationally."

While she expressed herself grateful that the organization has had so much co-operation, Mrs. Campbell emphasized that women cannot afford to be complacent. "Up until now we have not really sacrificed anything, and we will have to think of the day when real sacrifices will have to be made."

In answer to the question, "What assurance have we that parcels can be distributed to British prisoners when they do reach Germany?" Mrs. Campbell replied that the Red Cross Society has ample proof that nearly 90 per cent. of parcels sent reach their destination, and explained that parcels contain postcards which are mailed by prisoners when the parcel is received. Parcels are handled through the International Red Cross with headquarters in Geneva, and a greater supply to prisoners has been held up because parcels must be addressed to individuals before they can go forward, and complete lists have not yet come through from the British War Office.

The speaker was thanked by Mrs. F. D. Kerr and Mrs. R. E. Clarke. Tea was served by the executive of the local branch after the meeting.

Perkins Places Heavy Load On Labor's Honor

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 27—(CP)—Labor Secretary Frances Perkins told United States labor today it had a responsibility under national defence to carry out its contracts, seek an adjustment of its own family differences, avoid production delays, and "thwart influences from dishonest or subversive sources."

She expressed these views about labor's role in the defence program in a speech prepared for delivery at the annual American Federation of Labor convention. It was her first speaking appearance before the A.F.L. delegates since 1936. In recent years her name had not appeared on the invitation list.

"Labor has status today as never before," she said, "and that status carries with responsibility, responsibility to wage earners and responsibility to all the people of the United States."

"That responsibility calls for carrying out all contracts agreed upon," she added.

"That responsibility calls for vigilance in the maintenance of high standards so as to thwart influences from dishonest or subversive sources attempting to establish themselves within the labor movement.

"That responsibility calls for co-operation by labor with employers and with all responsible groups to avoid delays and interruptions—to increase production and efficiency, and to preserve and promote human welfare and labor standards at the same time in the defence program which we as a nation have undertaken."

British Practice For Defence

The best defence is attack, according to the majority of the military strategists, and the British army is being thoroughly groomed to take the offensive when the time is ripe. Here you see a company of the London Irish Regiment engaged in the practice of landing operations on Britain's west coast. At TOP, a storming party charges in with bayonet and sub-machine guns to establish a beach head foothold for big forces to come). BOTTOM, a base has been established and the boys that come after the storming party arrive with bagpipes skirling.

Seventeen Ships Sunk By Huns

LONDON, Nov. 27 — (CP). — Seventeen British, Allied, and neutral merchant ships totalling 59,534 tons were lost through "enemy action" during the week ended November 17, the Admiralty reported to-day. This compares with a weekly average of 58,787 tons since the war began, and represents a reduction of 12,000 tons from the losses of the previous two weeks.

It included 14 British vessels totalling 50,449 tons, two Allied totalling 7,769 tons, and one neutral of 1,316 tons.

The Admiralty said that during the week the Germans claimed to have sunk 131,340 tons of merchant shipping and commented "this represents an exaggeration of 120 per cent. on actual losses."

Naval officials said minesweeping had been "intensely complicated" by air attacks, and that after a harbor entrance or channel had been swept clear of mines, it could not be considered safe for more than 24 hours.

Therefore, they said, the task of minesweeping was virtually continuous day and night.

The past week's losses were approximately two-thirds of the weekly average since the end of May, when an intensive drive on shipping was inaugurated, they said.

Trouble Ahead

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27—(AP). — There's a workout in a store for army sergeants calling the roll among Maryland's first contingent of draftees. Of the first eight reporting for induction as civilian-soldiers four were: Edward S. Kryzstynski, Daniel J. Ordakowski, Casimir W. Pskiewicz, and Adam L. Kozlowski.

Curbing Air Services

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP).

WAR SECRETARY Henry Stimson announced today the United States war department had appealed to the priorities board to halt expansion of commercial air services on the ground that it would interfere with war plane production for American and British armed forces.

At a press conference Stimson said the Douglas Aircraft company is delivering planes to commercial lines at the rate of 12 a month, although it had been 60 days behind schedule in delivering the test plane for an army order for 186 dive bombers.

War Prisoner

Air Marshal Owen T. Boyd, deputy-commander of the R.A.F. in the Near East, is reported to have been captured by the Italians when the plane, carrying him and four other members, of the R.A.F., was forced to land in Sicily.

British Stand Improves In Near East

CAIRO, Nov. 27 (AP) — British Army sources say Britain's stronger today than at any time since Italy entered the war June 10.

They describe the Italian situation thus: One army in retreat in Albania, a second stalemated in the Western Egyptian desert, a third cut off from supplies in Ethiopia.

But situations change quickly and British officers say they are alert to meet any new development which might threaten their hold on the vital Mediterranean.

Two possible developments stand out:

1. Italy may throw heavy re-inforcements into Albania in a desperate attempt to regain lost prestige and overwhelm the Greeks or;

2. Hitler, moving to the aid of his southern partner, may crash through the Balkans, bringing the Reich's army and air force to Mediterranean shores.

British officers say now that if Mussolini had attacked Egypt with his Italian legions when he entered the war just as France collapsed, the result probably would have been disastrous for Britain.

The Government was too occupied preparing for the expected invasion of Britain to give much attention to the Near East and the mainstay of the Allied defense here, General Maxime Weygand's French army, was out of the running.

In the British view, here's how the situation has changed since then:

1. Pressure on Britain has been relieved and convoy after convoy has poured reinforcements in men and materials into the Near East, creating a powerful military machine here.

2. Strong fortifications have been thrown up on the Western desert, forming a line which Italian Marshal Graziani is showing no disposition to attack.

3. The Mediterranean Fleet has had the better of the Italian Navy in several encounters, destroying or damaging a considerable part of it. The Royal Air Force has made inroads on Italian bases while Italian bombing of Egypt and the Suez Canal region has been comparatively ineffective.

4. Italy's attack on Greece has given Britain a new ally, a valuable base in Crete, and the opportunity to use Greece for air attacks on Southern Italy and Albania.
